With the British armies afield.--"Lens must fall soon to the Canadians. Its occupation was deemed to-day only a matter of a short time."

NO FLAG WAVING IN ENGLAND OVER THIS WEEK'S VICTORIES

Impression Prevails That Greater Events Are to Follow and That With Fall of Lens Relief of Lille Will Not Long be Delayed.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

British Army Headquarters, April 14. — The coal mining area around the town of Lens is being closely invested and the German hold on it is becoming most precarious. Several more villages and positions southwest of the town fell into British hands during the night together with four eight-inch howitzers, and the line here has been linked up with positions taken from the Germans in the battle of Loos.

The Germans' stay in St. Quentin is likewise additionall threatened through the capture by the British of the vilaige of Fayette, a bare mile northwest of the town, from which point the British guns command the German lines of communication to the northward.

Again the British have advanced further toward the Cambrai-St. Quentin road, while to the southeast of Arras they are approaching Queant, the northern extremity of the new German line defending Cambrai.

Gen. Horne, considered the greatest artillery expert in the British army, and who assisted Gen. Nivelle in the successful attack by the French north of Verdun last December, commands the British around Lens, where, owing to natural defences composed of waste dumps around the mines, artillery must largely be depended upon. Gen. Horne has on his right an army under Gen. Allenby, who has gained new laurels in this war.

These generals and their colleagues under Sir Douglas Haig have accomplished since onday work which many military writers expected would occupy a great part of the summer. Thus far there has been no flag waving nor celebration in Britain. The impression prevails that greater events will soon follow and that with the fall of Lens the relief of Lille will not be long delayed.

BRITISH TAKE KINDLY TO OPEN

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, April 14. — The Associated Press correspondent at British headquarters wires that the British have taken kindly to the change from trench warfare to open fighting, whereas the Germans have reluctantly left their comfortable dugouts, which the British contend have enervated them. The new British army has been trained in field tactics since its organization despite the criticisms of those who contend that the war would continue to progress from trench to trench, and the results of this policy are now apparent.

The correspondent saw a bit of manoeuvring the other day in which British troops completely outwitted a crack German regiment, and the British officer in command three years ago was a young solicitor with never a thought of war in his head.

Army authorities are fairly jubilant over the speed with which the British troops have everywhere obtained their objectives with comparatively small British losses.

ANOTHER DRAFT OF 247TH HAVE LEFT FOR CAPITAL

Ten Men Entrain for Ottawa Early This Morning.

Lieut.-Col. Ackerman bid another draft of his men "God Speed" at the Armouries this morning, when ten members of the 247th Battalion left at noon for their new unit at Ottawa.

The boys were in charge of Col.-Sergt. Major Gamey, and were in fine spirits as they entrained at the C. P. R. station.

The ladies of the 57th Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire presented the men with socks before they departed.

Sergt. Anderson, Sergt. Miller, and Pte. Miller, who have been in charge of the orderly room since the organization of the 247th Battalion, will leave on Monday for Ottawa. Their courtesy at all times made them very popular with visitors to the Armouries.

COL. YOUNG IN ENGLAND

Lieut.-Col. Dr. T. W. R. Young, who for the past year and a half has been on active duty in France, has been placed in charge of the Canadian Hospital at Buxton, Derbyshire, England.

WILL GO TO CHICAGO TO INTERVIEW OFFICIALS

Mayor Duffus and Committee Will Arrange Final Terms of Agreement With Quaker Oats.

The manufacturers' committee men last night and heard a letter read from Mr. W. H. Denham, Superintendent of the Quaker Oats Co., suggesting certain alterations in the agreement submitted to the company for approval before subbmitting the bylaw to the people.

The chief obstacle seemed to be the granting of a permanent right of way under the bridge as long as the Quaker Oats Co. plant was a going concern. The municipal Act does not give the city that power, but the committee decided to consent to a special Act of the Legislature granting this privilege, reserving the right to enter on the premises at all times to make repairs for municipal purposes.

The other points at variance with the company's views were not of very great importance, except that they must be covered in the agreement with the city.

As Mr. Denham is now in Missouri and will be there for some time, it was decided in order to facilitate matters that an appointment be made with Mr Denham and the Quaker Oats Co. in Chicago, and that a committee consisting of Mayor Dnffus, Chairman McIntyre, City Solicitor Gordon and any other that the Mayor might invite go to the Western Metropolis and thrash the question out with the officials.

AMERICAN SHIP SHELLED BY SUB

American schooner, Edwin R. Hunt, of New York, was abandoned by the crew under shell fire from a submarine near Cape Gaeta, Spain, last Saturday, according to a despatch to the State Department from the American Consul at Malaga.

IS WHEAT CROP MUCH INJURED?

BY THE RAVAGES OF JACK FROST IN ONTARIO.

This last coldd snap may have an injurious effect on the fall wheat crop. Agricultural authorities say it is not so much the cold as the freezing and then the thawing again which does the damage.

The Department of Agriculture has not the figures at present to show how many acres of fall wheat were planted last fall, but during the past 35 years the acreage has been slowly growing less. In the fall of 1915 there were 811,000 acres sown, and in 1915 about 704,- acres sown. The average planted for the last 35 years has been 832,000 acres, so it is easily seen how the arreage has droppedd.

But where wheat has decreased the acreage of oats and barley has increased considerably. This is the result of the farmers of Ontario relying considerably on the northwest for the wheat production.

The fall wheat crop of Ontario, however, this year may not be damaged considerably by the last cold snay should a warm rain come before the warmer days come, and the farmers of the province are hoping for this.

Father Gets Son by Court Order

BUT THE LAD REMAINS A WARD OF THE CHILDREN'S AID.

At Osgoode Hall, Toronto, yesterday, a case regarding the custody of a child was decided which will be interesting to those engaged in Children's Aid Society work.

People entering Osgoode Hall, yesterday at noon saw a pretty family picture as a woman with a little white clad baby and a boy of seven grouped themselves in a sunny corner for another woman to snap with her camera. The little lad had just been turned over to his father for custody, and his mother was taking her farewell of him.

George Drury, contractor, of Toronto, was the father who applied for the boy. He stated that his wife had gone to Victoria in 1912, and refused to return to him., some four years later returning to her mother's home in Markham township. The child was taken from the mother and made a ward of the Children's Aid Society by a magistrate's order last February.

Mr. Justice Middleton heard the father's claim, and awarded him the custody of the boy, who will, nevertheless, remain a ward of the Children's Aid.

Hon. Mr. McPherson to be Here Tuesday

Mr. F. H. Dawson, secretary of the West Peterboro Liberal-Conservative Association, received a letter from Sir William Hearst this afternoon, stating that Hon. W. D. McPherson, Provincial Secretary will be on hand to address the meeting in the Grand Opera House on Tuesday next.

LIEUT. SYMONDS KILLED IN ACTION

WAS SON OF A FORMER PETERBOROUGH DOCTOR.

Lieut. N. Boyd Symonds, son of Rev. Dr. Symonds, formerly rector of St. Luke's Church, Ashburnham, was killed in the recent battle of Vimy Ridge.

Mrs. Symonds was a Miss Boyd, of Bobcaygeon.

FEWER LICENSES IN THE PROVINCE

There will likely be a few less standard hotel licenses issued throughout the province of Ontario this year than were issued on September 16th last, but the number is expected to be so few that they will not be noticed.

Vice-Chairman Dingman, of the Ontario License Board, said that at present it could not be stated just how many licenses would be issued. "There may be a few less than before, but not much difference is expected," said he. Last year there were 1,250 licenses issued, and this year the number is likely to be at least 1,200.

CONDOLENCE TO HIS PARENTS

The following resolution, unanimously adopted at a meeting of the executive committee of the West Peterborough Conservative Association, has been forwarded by Secretary F. H. Dawson to Mr. and Mrs. T. T. Milburn:

That the respectful condolence of the W. R. Conservative Association be tendered to Mr. and Mrs. T. T. Milburn upon the bereavement which they have suffered in the death of their son, Lieut. G. N. Milburn, who fell while gallantly fighting the battle of the Empire in France, and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded accordingly.

MARTIAL LAW IN UNITED STATES

WASHINGTON, April 14. —Government control and operation of all railroads, telegraph and telephone lines during the period of the war, and the drafting into the military service of the country of the employees of such common carriers is authorized in a bill approved by President Wilson.

The bill, drawn at the request of the President, will be introduced in the House by Representative William C. Adamson, Chairman of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. The draft of the bill, prepared by Mr. Adamson, received the approval of the president yesterday. It is probably the most far-reaching of all the war bills prepared or in process of preparation by the administration.

BUSY DAY FOR DR. ANDERSON

WILL DELIVER ADDRESSES IN FOUR OF THE CITY CHURCHES.

Rev. Dr. George Anderson, who is in the city in the interests of the Royal Navy Canadian Institution, will have a busy day tomorrow, as he is to make no less thaan four public addresses to explain the object of the work which he has on hand. In the morning he will make a short address in Knox Church, and preach the regular sermon at All Saints. In the evening he will speak in St. Paul's and in the George Street Methodist Church.

GERMAN LINE BROKEN ALONG FOUR MILE FRONT AND OTHER GAPS ARE MADE IN DEFENCES

Vimy Station Captured and Number of Villages Taken---French Repulse Every Attack Made Upon Their Position.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

British Headquarters in France, April 14. (From Associated Press Correspondent.) — The British line last night broke the German front for a distance of four miles. Germans are in retreat. Gaps in the enemy defences were made in two places. Positions on a front of three miles between Crassier and Givenchy, and another mile on the north flank of the Hindenburg trench system were captured. Advanced posts were pushed well toward Queant and Pronville, the important points in the German defences.

The Germans are fighting as they retire from Loos southward and are being hard pressed. Fires and explosions in territory to the rear of the German lines continue. The weather today is favorable for campaigning.

VIMY STATION SEIZED.

LONDON, April 14. — The official statement says: The village of Fayette, one mile to the northwest of St. Quentin, was captured last night after a sharp fiht. On the high ground east of Le Verguler we captured the important positions of Ascension Farm and Grand Priel Farm. We also made progress to north of Bapaume, Cambrai road, in the direction of Queant. North of the Scarpe river our constant pressure compelled the enemy to yield further ground. We seized Vimy station, La Chaudiere and the enemy's positions at Fosse Number Six and Baquet Mill, between Givenchy en Gohelle and Angres.

The guns taken from the enemy in this area included four howitzers, eight-inchers. The ground gained in our recent operations now links up with positions wrested from the enemy in the battle of Loos, and include double Crassier. The enemy attempted a raid east of Loos during the night, but was driven off.

EVERY HUN ASSAULT REPULSED.

PARIS, April 14.—Official Statement:—South of St. Quentin our artillery continued to bombard German positions. There was no infantry fighting during the night between the Somme and the Oise. Two German surprise attacks were broken up by our fire.

In the Champagne artillery fighting was very severe. On this part of the front we made numerous reconnaissances and brought back prisoners.

Near Lachappelotte a German reconnoitering party attempted to reach our lines, but after a violent bombardment it was dispersed and driven back to the German trenches.

CITY SOLICITOR ASKS EXTRA COMPENSATION

Mr. Gordon Believes he is Entitled to Fees For Prosecuting Violations of Temperance Act.

City Solicitor Gordon drew the attention of the committee to the extra work done by him in connection with the enforcement of the Ontario Temperance Act when the charge is laid by the police department. In cases where the city prosecutes and fines are collected the money goes to the city. In case the inspector lays the information, the Crown Attorney prosecutes and the fine goes to the government. In the case of Garnet Innis, in which a $500 fine had been imposed, Mr. Gordon claimed a loss of over $40 by reason of being away from his office a whole day prosecuting at the request of the Mayor. It was not part of his duty to prosecute Ontario Temperance Act cases. He suggested that the city pay him a commission on fines secured by the city under this Act in which he was asked to attend court and prosecute.

Ald. Stratton was not in favor of any commission business. If Mr. Gordon was not getting enough salary, let him resign. The city solicitor should take all cases that the city was interested in.

Mr. Gordon pointed out that the Crown Attorney got $6 for each case he prosecuted, win or lose. The agreement between the city solicitor and the city did not contemplate police court prosecutions except for infractions of city bylaws. In reference to resigning, he said he intended to resign in favor of a returned soldier who came back wounded or incapacitated and who was qualified for the position.

Ald. Dobbin thought something should be done for the city solicitor.

Ald. Smith thought it would be good business to allow Mr. Gordon a commission on fines collected through his prosecuting the cases.

Ald. Stratton— "The city does not want to go into the commission business."

Ald. Saunders moved that the matter be referred to the legal committee to report, and the motion was carried

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, APRIL 14 1917

MR. GORDON'S COMPENSATION.

CITY SOLICITOR GORDON wants extra compensation for appearing as prosecutor in charges of violation of the Ontario Temperance Act that are laid by Chief of Police Thompson. His claim is based on the fact that when he was appointed to his present position that Act was not in force and that its going into effect has added to his duties.

Mr. Gordon has so far appeared in only one case, that against Garnet Innis, in which fines totalled $300, all of which goes to the city. The city solicitor has, however, appeared for the defendant in other similar cases, at least two of which were laid by Chief Thompson. He is at liberty to represent the other side in all charges of infraction that are brought by License Inspector Stewart. If the Temperance Act has added to Mr. Gordon's official duties, it is apparent that it has also increased his opportunities to earn additional fees in his private practice.

Crown Attorney Hatton formerly prosecuted all charged with infractions of the Act, whether the charges were made by the Lincese Inspector or the Chief of Police. The Finance Committee of Council objected to the payment of a $6 fee for all such cases, holding that the work should be done by the city solicitor, who is required to appear on behalf of the city at the request of the city clerk or the Mayor.

When the Innis case was brought, Mayor Duffus requested Mr. Gordon to prosecute. He agreed to do so, provided he be allowed on-fifth of the amount of the fine, in case a penalty was imposed. The Mayor, it is understood, told him to go ahead, and the matter would be brought up in Council. Mr. Gordon prosecuted, a fine of $300 was levied by Magistrate Dumble, and the city solicitor now claims a commission of $60.

If Crown Attorney Hatton had conducted the case on behalf of the police department, his fee would have been $6. If there is to be any commission business on the part of the city, if extra fees are to be allowed for these cases, it is evident that it would be economy on the part of the aldermen to revert to the old order and permit the Crown Attorney to represent the city in all such cases. The ordinary fine for a violation of the liquor law is $200, on which Mr. Gordon's commission would be $40. Mr. Hatton would get $6 for the same work.

The duties of the city solicitor are defined by bylaw. Council can amend the present civic legislation governing this office, so as to clearly set forth that the city's legal representative shall appear in such cases without any extra compensation. If Mr. Gordon does not like the present arrangement, or any other that may be made in the future, if his private practice suffers by reason of the pressure of his official duties, then he has the privilege of resigning. There are plenty of competent lawyers in the city who would be glad to get the city solicitorship at the present arte of compensation and who would take it, too, with all the new responsibilities imposed by the Ontario Temperance Act.

Mr. Gordon says he intends to resign just as soon as he can hand the office over to a returned soldier who is competent to fill it. The disposal of the office is not vested in Mr. Gordon. He has no authority to appoint his own successor. That power belongs to the Council, and the aldermen can be trusted to give the returned soldier the preference in this and other matters, all things to be considered as to qualifications.

STOP THIS KNOCKING.

THE INCREASED COST of living is becoming so serious a matter that the people are beginning to take a more active interest in municipal, provincial and Dominion affairs. Some of them, however, are unable to get beyond the point of heaping the whole blame upon their representatives. They hold the aldermen responsible for the high tax rate, charge the legislators with extravagance, and lay other grievances on the shoulders of members of Parliament. Party newspapers attempt to make capital out of the stress of the nation, some of them going so far as to recommend the expropriation of the potatoes in the farmer's cellar or pit, dropping this campaign, however, like a hot brick that threatened to burn their fingers.

The public should study the present situation carefully and withhold their criticism of men entrusted with the management of affairs until all the facts are known. Aldermen, legislators, and members of the Federal Parliament are simply the representatives of the people, elected to give effect to the wishes of thir constituents. The high cost of living is almost entirely a matter beyond their control. The aldermen should not be held responsible for the addition to the tax rate caused by a levy for the Patriotic Fund. The war and all the expenses which follow in its train was a national calamity which those elected by the people were powerless to avert. The members of the Provincial Legislature could not stave off the outlay entailed by the same conflict. The Dominion Government is powerless to regulate the law of supply and demand. If prices of food and other living expenses are high in Canada, they have not increased here in anything like the proportion that has obtained in the United States and in the European countries, the industrial life of which has been paralyzed by the war.

An excellent opportunity will be given the citizens of Peterborough to hear a distinterested discussion of public questions. A mass meeting will be held in the Opera House Tuesday evening. It is in no sense a partisan gathering, despite any insinuations to the contrary that may be made by disgruntled newspapers, that look askance at anything that does not originate with their chosen party. There are outstanding matters claiming the attention of the public. Radical reforms have been introduced into Ontario, and these topics will be dealt with by able speakers. The women of Peterborough, who have just been given the right to vote, will hear their new duties explained, their new responsibilities defined by Miss Constance Boulton, one of the strongest champions of the cause of equal suffrage.

The meeting Tuesday night will not be a campaign affair. It is held simply with the object of hearing a discussion of matters in which the public, without regard to party, are vastly interested.

THE RIFLE RANGES.

THE GOVERNMENT owns three hundred acres in the vicinity of the city that were purchased for use as rifle ranges. The land is not likely to be required for military purposes until the war is over. It is all arable, and if the Militia Department could be prevailed upon to grant the required permission, the property could be plowed and made ready for planting as soon as the frost is out of the ground. There should be no difficulty in finding sufficient land for municipal gardening so long as this tract is available. The amount of foodstuffs that could be produced on three hundred acres of good soil is a matter worthy of consideration.

The Government has been preaching thrift and increased production ever since the breaking out of the war, and here is an excellent chance to give the people a practical dmonstration. Mayor Duffus can beyond a doubt get the consent of the Administration to use the land at the rifle ranges for farming purposes. Even if required for target practice during the summer, the plots could be so arranged as not to interfere with this work.

THE GERMAN RETREAT.

OF ALL THE TRIUMPHS achieved by the Allies over the Germans since the war broke out, that at Arras is the most signal and decisive. The people of Canada will always remember with pride that the four divisions from this country took part in the engagement. It was Canadian soldiers, according to the despatches, who held the place of honor in the front of the line. The valor of our troops has been praised by military experts and by the newspapers of all the Entente Nations. The journals of the United States especially proclaim the new glory that has come to their neighbor.

The Germans have on previous occasions been forced back, but such retreats have invariably been made to other positions as strongly entrenched as those they deserted. At Arras they were given no such choice. The enemy had no shelter to which to retire. They fought desperately with the one hope left them of holding off th British until trenches could be prepared in the rear. Driven into the open they were mowed down by the thousands under the machine-gun fire.

Such is the fortune of war. The London Standard puts the case neatly when it says that the capture of Vimy Ridge, the key position, is the reward of skilful preparation on the part of the leaders. But such preparations, carefully made as long ago as last February, would have availed nothing unless backed up by incomparable and unconquerable troops. And of those troops, none were better than our own.

The record of Canadian honor now reads Ypres, Langemarck, St. Julian and Vimy Ridge. And the greatest of all achievements is the last mentioned.

WHAT IS MEANT BY "SCOUTING"

The following is an explanation of Scouting by Baden-Powell, founder of the movement:—

By the term "Scouting" is meant the work and attributes of back woodsmen, explorers, and frontiersmen. In giving the elements of these to boys we supply a system of games and practices which meets their desires and instincts and is at the same time educative. From the boy's point of view it gives physical health and development. It teaches energy, resourcefulness, and handicrafts; it puts into the lad discipline, pluck, chivalry, and patriotism in a word, it develops character, which is more essential than anything else to a lad for making his way in life.

The principle upon which Scouting works is that the boy's ideas are studied, and he is encouraged to educate himself instead of being instructed. The principle is in accord with that of the most up-to-date educationalists. It continues the education of the kindergarten and Mentessori method in due sequence.

The Wolf Cubs: Eight to twelve; inclined to develop themselves as individuals, mentally and physically.

The Boy Scouts: Twelve to eighteen; for developing character and sense of service.

The Old Scouts: Over eighteen; for retention of the Scout ideals in their citizenship.

From the national point of view our aim is solely to make the rising generation into good citizens. If proof were needed of the value of the training, one has only to read the reports of officers on the Scouts who have joined H. M. forces, and to look at the public service rendered by the Scouts during the national crisis in the great war, and their efficiency whether as coast guards, fire brigades, railway and telegraph watchers, police or military hospital attendants or relief agents.

We do not interfere with the boy's religion of whatever form it may be, though we encourage him to practice whatever he professes.

1. Individual character training in resourcefulness, observation, self reliance to gain the Scout's badge.

2. Handicrafts or hobbies which may help a boy to make his way in life, for which we give "proficiency" badges.

3. Service for State, such as fire brigade, ambulance, missioner, sailor, life saving, or other collective duty by the troop.

4. Physical health, by encouraging the boy to take plenty of exercise and to look after his body.

Scouting appeals to boys of every class, and can be carried out in towns just as well as in the country.

When a Scoutmaster has not sufficient knowledge in any one subject he can generally get a friend who is an expert to come and give his troop the required instruction.

Czar Nicholas II. Was Amiable, But Too Timid To Make Strong Monarch

NICHOLAS II., Czar of Russia, has abdicated his throne following a Liberal revolution. He has had to surrender it because he was unwilling, or unable, to lend his influence with sufficient intensity to the successful prosecution of a foreign war. If he had died three years ago he would probably have gone down in history as the man who called the first Hague Conference, and who gave Russia her first Constitutional Government.

Yet the paradox is not as great as it appears, for the whole career of Nicholas has shown him as a man of excellent intentions, but vacillating resolution; with no very great understanding, with a spirit that comes easily under the sway of others without any critical examination of their character or motives; a weak and timid man, who now and then nerves himself to some act of determination which apparently exhausts all his resolution and leaves him weak and helpless for a long time afterward.

He came to the throne on Nov. 1, 1894, following the thirteen years of reaction under his father, Alexander III. In temperament and aspirations

NICHOLAS II.

Nicholas seems to have occupied a middle position between his father and his grandfather, the murdered Alexander II. Like his father, he firmly believed in autocracy; he had few, if any, of the liberal tendencies which made his grandfather's murder, in 1881, the greatest misfortune of the Russian liberal movement. But he had not the temperament, perhaps not the power, to initiate and continue the stern measures of repression which his father had carried out.

Instead, the first years of his reign showed him an emperor of mildness and amiability—rather a dreamer, disinclined to a vivid personal interest in public affairs, with something of the mystic about him, but withal a moderate and benevolent ruler. The entente cordiale with France, entered into under his father, was strengthened to a close alliance; the repressive measures of bureaucracy and police that had dealt such blows to the revolutionary parties of earlier decades were modified, and finally, at the beginning of 1899, the autocratic ruler of one of the world's greatest military empires took the initiative in calling a conference to discuss disarmament and arbitration.

Perhaps a man of different temperament would have devoted more of his attentions to trying to settle some of the outstanding causes of international dispute. But political activity has never been one of the Czar's principal interests. He called The Hague conference. He did not originate the idea; as in most of the other dramatic acts of his life, he took the immediate and decisive action which his position made possible after he had been fired by the ideas of other men.

Even though it was realized very soon that the hopes entertained by enthusiasts for The Hague conference would not be realized, it undoubtedly forwarded the cause of arbitration, if not of disarmament.

The growth in the Russian Court of the influence of the "dark forces" against which the Liberal revolution has fought seems to have been due in great part to the personal temperament and personal relations of Nicholas. Treason was rife from the first among a large section of the Baltic nobility, which holds many of the highest posts in the bureaucracy, and still more in the upper circles of court ceremony. That this influence was sufficient, apparently, to paralyze the Emperor himself on more than one occasion may perhaps be attributed to the Empress, to the psychological reaction of the revolution of 1905 on the Czar, and to his religious mysticism.

That the Emperor feared and distrusted liberalism more than ever since the uprisings that followed the Japanese war is generally accepted, and he, too, could not have failed to take alarm at the growing strength of the Duma, at the evidence that a Russian victory, the possession of Constantinople, must bring with it more in the way of liberal reform than the autonomy of Poland and the removal of restrictions on the Jews.

The Emperor has been credited, too, with fears that success in the field might have the result of alienating the sympathy of the people from his own personality, never of the sort to hold the imagination or arouse instinctive enthusiasm, and make the great national hero his uncle, the Grand Duke Nicholas Nicholaievitch, who commanded the army during the successes of the first year of the war.

ESSAY ON SUNRISE.

Some Things About Which, Perhaps, You Know Nothing.

Sunrise is what people are always sentenced to be shot at.

In some cases this is the first time the victim has ever either seen the sun rise or been shot at.

If he has been half shot the night before he doesn't see the sun rise.

Being shot at sunrise isn't such an awful fate for some folks.

Many people would just as lief be shot as to get up in time to see the sun rise.

Those who have seen the sun rise speak very highly of it.

But we do not let them fool us.

Associating with the sunrise is poetically presumed to make men better.

But look at the milkman!

Getting up with the sun is a much overestimated stunt.

To begin with, the sun is neither benefited nor impressed with our efforts.

It doesn't help him get up to have us rise at the same time, and he goes right off and leaves us, anyway.

For our own part, we think it is excruciatingly bad taste to stand and rubber while anybody gets up.

The orb of the day has little enough chance for privacy, as it is, with everybody gawping while he goes to bed.

What about the golden rule business?

He Learned.

"So you were invited to participate in a profit-sharing scheme?"

"Yes."

"How did you come out?"

"I discovered that the purpose of the scheme was not sharing but shearing."

A DAILY NOVELETTE

After Mrs. Hoostetter's advertisement "Wanted—good intelligent vegetarian girl who can cook," had been in the daily papers for four days, a tall girl of medium stature, with pink eyes, a red nose, and a yellow jaundice, presented herself.

"I am a good intelligent vegetation girl, but I can't cook," she announced.

"Never mind," said Mrs. Hoostetter, desperately, "I'll teach you to cook."

And for ninety days and ninety nights Mrs. Hoostetter slaved away showing Inkella the ins and outs and sideways of Russian roll overs, Belgian biscuits Peruvian pancakes, Honolulu hash, California crullers, French flinders, Swedish swatnots and a thousand other culinary mysteries that represented a lifetime's devotion to the kitchen range. She also bought the new girl the Norway edition of Mrs. Yeller's cook book in nine volumes and went over her lessons with her each night.

At the end of three months Inkella could make Norway noodles, Japanese jampums and Swiss zwisback better than Mrs. Hoostetter herself.

At the end of three months and four days she opened a cooking school of her own and Mrs. Hoostetter put another ad. in the papers.

An entire tray of 3 eggs can be examined at once by a new rapid candling devise.

BRITISH FIRE FIGHTING

Zeppelins Destroy Cottages; But Big Blazes Are Prevented

A neutral writer says: When one of these 200-pound Zeppelin bombs dropped from a height of a couple of miles falls on the average workingman's house, that house ceases to exist, and where it stood is a fire. But so admirable are the fire fighting arrangements and so swiftly are the firemen on [illegible] even in densely [illegible] districts [illegible] has [illegible] important conflagration. Equally amazing it is that, while the face of England is thickly pitted with munitions works and places of military importance, not one of them has been damaged. The opinion of neutral correspondents is that the raiding is kept up in order to cheer the German people. They believe, however, that the Germans are making a terrible mistake and that when peace [illegible] considered they will find that their experiments with Zeppelins in England will exact a heavier penalty than the killing of a hundred thousand British soldiers.

HUNTING IN CANADA'S BIG GAME FIELDS

Bear Hunting Proves Exciting Game of Hide and Seek

Mr. G. Cobb gives the following interesting incident: On the morning of April 25 we started out for a [illegible] that looked like bear, being burnt over some years before and leaving [illegible] [illegible] where the grass was about six inches tall and very tender, [illegible] bears feed on this time of the year. For the first two miles the going was very poor as we had to [illegible] brush and down timber, and there was snow water coming down the gulch and spreading out at the bottom, which made the going wet [illegible] very tangled, causing the dogs [illegible] badly, as I had the dogs [illegible] in twos until I [illegible] them loose [illegible] going over windfalls where they [illegible] one dog would invariably try to [illegible] other go over, and to get through this kind of a place with a pack of dogs and not lose your temper [illegible] would never do with hunting dogs. If any time [illegible] in the pack, was enough to make Job swear.

First Sight of the "Game"

We [illegible] climbed the [illegible] steep incline and were on a table resting and looking the country over, not for game but just looking when my partner saw across the gulch about a mile away, an object moving on a bare grassy spot below a [illegible]. Closer examination [illegible] While we watched another one showed himself. We were not long in making up our minds as to the [illegible] way to get there and to [illegible] as [illegible] as possible [illegible] to [illegible] as possible, but [illegible] depending on [illegible] the [illegible] for a shot before it saw us. [illegible] the side [illegible] of coming down [illegible] and after about a half [illegible] over windfalls we came [illegible] of the place as cautious as an Indian making a sneak on a settlement in the 70s. We were soon at the spot and the dogs all had their noses on the ground. Here were the tracks where they had been digging for [illegible] roots, and were not [illegible] before. We soon slipped the [illegible] and the pack was [illegible] going up hill, [illegible] making for the ledges above which means lost as far as the dogs were concerned, when a bear gets into very rough cliffs. But he hadn't started soon enough and the dogs were on them in less than three minutes, and they did not run more than half a mile until one treed.

A Race For His Life

When the dogs overtook them they separated, one swung over a ridge and the whole pack kept after the one that had treed, letting the other have the whole [illegible] to himself, and from the chase he [illegible] us he made good use of his start. We were not long getting to the dogs at tree and seeing there was but one bear we naturally were in some hurry to get the dogs after the other bear, so we wasted no time knocking him from his perch and only let the dogs have a very short tug at him until we were jerking his pelt off a very fine brown of about 200 weight.

CADDIE TO THE DUCHESS

The Duchess of Marlborough takes a close interest in all that affects the welfare of the young, and is keenly interested in the Little Commonwealth at Batcombe, Dorset, where with skilled treatment the child criminal turns from his evil ways and becomes a useful member of society. It was in North Berwick that the Duchess of Marlborough first developed a passion for golf. She has one particular caddie, who is noted for his dry humor. One day he was carrying for a well known Judge, when they happened to meet a certain Ambassador. The caddie nodded in familiar style to the foreigner. "You know his Excellency?" said the Judge. "Why, yes," was the reply, "[illegible] an old friend of mine. I'm wearing his waistcoat."

INCREASE PRODUCTIONS

Do Not Neglect the Orchards—Grow More Cereals

The suggestion that Canadian farmers should pay more attention to the growth of cereals rather than apples, may be misunderstood. Let more cereals be grown, by all means, but it would be very foolish to neglect the care of orchards or to cease planting [illegible] trees. Besides, the after-war [illegible] considered. Nothing [illegible] which will check the future growth of agriculture, of [illegible] of food products in Canada.

It is not necessary, even for war purposes, to neglect the orchards. Fruit is not grown to any extent on the prairies, where the bulk of our wheat is produced. On the other hand, there are districts like the Niagara Peninsula where little grain is grown, and the attempt to convert these into grain producing areas would be a waste of labor. There is plenty of unused land on which grain may be grown, and our effort should be to increase production in this way and on a large scale.

Keep Air Moist And Save

Adding moisture to the air reduces the amount of heat necessary for comfort. As much as 20 per cent. of the coal bill can be saved by adding moisture to the air. Air should never contain less than 40 per cent. and preferably 50 per cent. of humidity.

A Unique Invention

More than 50 feet of tin tubing, filled with peas, is used by an English inventor to filter the scratching and [illegible] sounds from phonograph music.

SPORTSMEN—SOLDIERS

Games Mystify and Interest the French Soldiers

It is only when the locale happens to be a base camp that the onlookers behind the British lines at a race meeting, gymkhana, or football match, and the like, are likely to include any civilians. Even then the proportion is very small. Everywhere else the spectators are entirely military, and if any ladies grace the assemblage they are certain to belong to the Army Nursing Service. But, for all that, the "gate" is not necessarily British throughout, since it is sure to include a number of French and Belgian officers and men.

Our gallant allies take the greatest possible interest in any sporting fixture organized by their British confreres, and come by the hundred to watch [illegible]. This lends additional picturesqueness to the scene, since it brings out every variety of uniform. Mingling with the universal khaki on such occasions are light blue frogged tunics, Zouave jackets, crimson overalls, laced képis, plumed helmets, and turbans and fezzes belonging to white faces, brown faces, yellow faces, and black faces.

The peasants and villagers from the district are immensely interested in the proceedings and shout "[illegible]" with all the strength of their lungs. Judging from their private comments, it is a never ceasing wonder to them that our troops should have the energy to run races and otherwise exercise themselves when not actually compelled to do so. But there are a great many things about the British soldier in France that—despite his long sojourn among them—the French villagers do not understand. "Qu'ils sont droles, ces Anglais!" they declare admiringly.

GUNFIRE DEMORALIZES

Best German Regiment Lost Spirit Under Physical Strain

W. Beach Thomas wrote on one occasion from France: Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday—each hour of each of these days and nights our artillery has not ceased to drum. The sound is as constant as the touch of the atmosphere. Near the front it kills all sleep, and ten, even twenty, miles behind men wake to wonder what giant event the tumult portends. What is life like where the shells burst. Prisoners give us some idea. One rather attractive German of good physique and lively spirit apologized to his captors for his easy surrender. "What were we to do?" he said, in effect. "The barrage came down like a storm in the mountains. You could not see or hear, and then while we were blind and deaf the English bombs began to burst in the ravine through the mud and dust and smoke."

I have tried by observation and inquiry at every part of the line to test without prejudice the question whether or not these German garrisons surrendered with the readiness of a demoralized force. I am inclined to judge that the victory was due wholly to the violence of the attack. Instances there are, of course, of despair and cowardice. If men are not relieved often enough and for a long enough time the best regiments become the worst if artillery fire is constant.

HARNESSING A VOLCANO

Volcanic Steam Utilized to Operate Power Plants

The [illegible] that volcanic [illegible] is used in Italy to operate power plants is [illegible] an unpublished romance by Jules Verne. But apparently a bit of sober realism. This sensational use of volcanic steam heat is reported by Prof. [illegible] of the University of Rome, Italy. According to Professor Luigi volcanic steam now operates three 3000 kilowatt steam plants at Larderello, in central Tuscany. Numerous cracks in the ground there permit powerful jets of superheated steam to escape in the air, besides boric acid and other mineral substances. Says the writer: "Prince Ginori-Conti in 1903 tried to utilize this superheated steam for the production of motive power. He first applied a strong jet to a small rotary motor, and then to a very modest reciprocating steam engine connected to a dynamo, which generated sufficient electricity to light part of a borax [illegible]. Later holes were bored in the ground and iron pipes driven down to the very source of the steam, which is under a hard stratum of rock about 300 to 600 feet below the surface."

Towns Unsafe to Live in

Scattered throughout Britain are a number of towns the inhabitants of which live in daily peril of being killed. One of the most famous of these is Northwich, in Cheshire, where it is by no means uncommon for a whole row of houses to suddenly come to the ground without warning. Unfortunately for itself, Northwich stands upon the surface of a vast area of the finest salt obtainable, and thousands of tons of the mineral are dug from beneath the town every year. The weight of the masonry overhead has, therefore, caused the ground to subside, and many buildings have fallen to ruins.

Minister of Militia and Defence.

"I voice the feeling at the front when I appeal to Canadians to support the proposals to partially mobilize the active militia of Canada".
SIR ROBERT BORDEN,
Premier.

Here Is Your Opportunity
SERVE AT HOME!

Thousands of trained troops are marking time in Canada, while the need for men is vital in France. The Minister of Militia and Defence appeals to you to enlist in the Canadian Defence Force in order that the men of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces held in Canada may be released.

The Call To You—

It is your opportunity—men whom circumstances have prevented from serving in the Canadian Expeditionary Force—you can do a man's work by enlisting in the

Canadian Defence Force

Enlistment in Canadian Defence Force is for one year—or for the period of the war and six months after if required. Clothing, equipment and rations provided as in the C.E.F. Pay the same as that for Militia on active service, with separation allowance for married men.

The call is for men between 18 and 45, physically fit and keen to serve.

For full particulars enquire at Armories of the Regiments listed below.

Men Still Required For Overseas in the Canadian Expeditionary Force.

More men are required for reinforcements at the Front. Those who desire to volunteer for Overseas Service may enlist through one of the regiments ordered to mobilize for Home Defence.

REASONS GARNET INNIS WAS ADJUDGED GUILTY

Magistrate Dumble Hands Down Interesting Written Decision in Liquor Case.

Police Magistrate Dumble delivered judgment this morning in the case of Chief Thompson against Garnet Innis for a violation of the Ontario Temperance Act. The defendant is found guilty and fined $300 and costs or six months' imprisonment. The judgment is as follows:

This is a charge against Garnet Innis for having on the 4th day of April, 1917, kept for sale at Peterborough, liquor, without having the required license. The evidence disclosed that Garnet Innis, in the name of his brother-in-law, Wilbert Peel, on the 5th of April, 1917, got from the Dominion Express Co. at Peterborough two cases (24 bottles) of Walker's Imperial whiskey, but while in transit, the police, watching for the arrival of the whiskey, seized it. Wilbert Peel being promised by Garnet Innis one bottle for the use of his name. The liquor when seized had been delivered to Wilbert Peel, who signed the express company book and got delivery of the liquor and then had it in his possession in a delivery wagon of the defendant, to take it to defendant's house.

Howard Innis, Garnet Innis, their father and mother, sister and wives, all live in one house. Louis Meehan deposed that, thinking he could get whiskey at Garnet Innis' house, he went there in a cab and got whiskey, handed to him in a tumbler by Garnet Innis, for which he paid Garnet Innis thirty cents. He had on a previous occasion in February paid Garnet Innis for a bottle of whiskey, for which he paid him $2, but which he did not get then, Garnet Innis then telling him that he expected some "stuff" in.

In March, witness stated, he had paid Howard Innis $2 for a bottle of whiskey, which he got. On the 4th of April witness got two glasses of whiskey at the Innis home, and he paid Howard Innis thirty cents and Garnet Innis thirty cents. There was present in the Innis home another young man, a stranger to witness, who also got a glass of whiskey with Meehan. His name was unknown to witness.

The boxes seized were branded "Walker's Imperial Whiskey" and the bottles were labeled "whiskey," and the contents of the bottles proved to be whiskey.

The father of Garnet and Howard Innis was close by when the whiskey was delivered from the express company, and apparently watching. The cases were in an Innis delivery wagon when seized by the police.

Elsie Innis, wife of Garnet Innis, gave evidence for the defence, stating that the witness, Louis Meehan, was at the Innis homestead on the night of the 4th of April instant; that her husband Garnet Innis was in the bedroom, and also that Howard Innis was in the room; that Meehan as he left the house appeared pretty "tipsy." She added that the mother of the Innis men, Garnet and Howard, had fallen into the cellar and bruised her hip, and that she had bathed Mrs. Innis' body three times a day with oil and whiskey, and that she used the "cheapest whiskey she could get." She stated that a young man came into the house when Meehan came, and that he went upstairs with Meehan to the bedroom. She did not know him. That Dr. Harvey attended Mrs. Innis for her limb, but that he did not know that oil and whiskey were used for bathing Mrs. Innis, and that he had not prescribed it; that a case of whiskey would last a week and cost $8.50 per case.

Garnet Innis swore that he saw Meehan in the bedroom with a glass of whiskey in his hand, and saw Meehan offer some silver, two pieces, to him, but that he did not accept it; but his brother Howard said, "If you don't want it, give it to me"; that he did not take money, and does not know if his brother Howard took it; that his mother asked him (Garnet) to go to his brother-in-law, Mr. Peel, and ask him to order some whiskey in his name, because the neighbors were saying. No wonder she did not get better, because she was such a booze fighter, that is, she used so much. Mr. Peel said I could send the order for the whiskey in his name, Burt Peel, because his name was Wilburt Peel. I did send in his name; I ordered two cases. He admits he saw Meehan with a glass in his hand, but that he did not give him (Meehan) any whiskey. He admits that he kept his mother supplied with all the whiskey she wanted, that he took no money from Meehan but that he saw two pieces of silver in his hand, and he stated that he never sold Meehan a bottle of whiskey in his life.

Barbara Innis, examined at her residence, swears that on January 2 she fell down cellar and badly bruised a bone of her leg; that she uses about a bottle of whiskey a day with the addition of sweet oil to anoint her body, bathing three times a day. She justifies her use of the whiskey and oil by saying her daughter derived great benefit from it and so without the knowledge of her doctor she uses the oil and whiskey.

It is proved that Meehan went to the house where defendant lives on April 4, 1917, expecting to get liquor. He was admittedly seen there in the bedroom with a glass of whiskey in his hand.

Meehan was seen there with two pieces of silver in his hand. He (Meehan) swore that he paid the silver to defendant for the whiskey he drank there.

A false name was used in ordering the whiskey. Why the use of the false name, except to hide the fact of the purchase, I don't know.

The evidence satisfies me that the defendant has used his dwelling place as a blind pig; the quantity of liquor bought is more than a family of the means of the defendant could or would use legitimately.

There was evasion and concealment. The evidence offered in defence is most unsatisfactory, and I must say the evidence of defendant, his wife and mother did not displace the evidence offered for the prosecution.

I find the defendant guilty and I adjudge that he pay a fine of $300 forthwith, and in default of payment that he be imprisoned in the jail of this county for six months.

The defendant produced no order of a doctor to entitle him to get whiskey for the purpose of bathing his mother, and the law only, in any event, allows but a very limited quantity (one pint for bathing). Mrs. Innis stated in her evidence that she used one bottle a day or one case (12 bottles) a week for that purpose. In this case her doctor did not prescribe whiskey for her; nor did he know she was using whiskey for bathing. A doctor going his professional rounds is not allowed to have with him more than one quart of whiskey; apparently there was a large quantity of liquor used in the house by members of the family and by strangers.

How an Ex-Confederate Soldier Resented an Insult

By ALAN HINSDALE

In 1870 Albert Collins, an American, found himself in Switzerland seeing the country as a pedestrian tourist. Collins had had a varied experience. Five years before he had been mustered out of the Confederate army, where he had been a sharpshooter, and gone to the gold region on Clear creek, Colorado, where he had prospected and struck ore that had brought him a fortune. He was twenty-six years old and before undertaking any other work concluded to see something of the world.

From Interlaken he went up the cog railway to Scheidegg, from which point he hired a couple of guides and made the ascent of the Jungfrau. Returning to Scheidegg, he was taking his supper in the restaurant of the railway station, where a party of Germans were eating and drinking. One of them was an army officer, but was not in uniform. An Englishman whose acquaintance Collins had made was with him, and he was asking questions as to his experiences in the American war, in which Collins had taken part. The German officer, who understood English, overhearing what was said and, being in his cups, let fly a sneering remark about the war in America, impugning the Confederates for having yielded in the struggle.

Collins, who had seen and understood the causes that led to the surrender, could not have been touched in a more tender spot. The hot blood mounted to his cheek, and, seizing a cup of coffee that stood on the table beside him, he drenched the man with its contents.

He did this on impulse, but so long as a duel was the result of the German's attack it was fortunate that he acted as he did, because it forced his antagonist to challenge him, and this gave Collins the choice of weapons, time, place of meeting, etc.

He offered to give Captain von Sonntag satisfaction on the following terms: In the morning at 6 o'clock Collins would walk out on a path used by tourists to get a near view of the glacier on that side of the Jungfrau and at half past 6 would start to return, the captain starting from the railway station at half past 6 to meet him. Each was to be armed with a repeating rifle containing six shots. They were to begin firing at will and use all or any portion of the ammunition.

Captain von Sonntag, who had been champion short sword fighter while at his university, was much put out by this unheard of method and protested against it, but Collins refused to fight him in any other way, and as an officer in the army it was incumbent upon him to fight on the terms named. He had no choice but to accept and did so with a bad grace.

Collins' second, the Englishman, asked him why he had inserted such singular terms. Collins replied that they gave him an overwhelming advantage over his adversary. As a sharpshooter in the Confederate army he had become proficient in all the dodges of long range rifle fighting, and in the Rocky mountains he had learned to judge of distance at high altitudes. The distance from the station to the glacier looked trifling; it was really considerable. He would be able to judge when he came within range and not waste his shots before doing so.

In the morning, the necessary armament having been obtained, Collins set out for the glacier, or, rather, a point from which he might view it satisfactorily, and when his watch indicated 6:30 sent out on his return, Von Sonntag starting at the same time from the station. As Collins expected, his opponent, deceived by the rare atmosphere, supposed him to be much nearer to him than he was and fired a shot soon after leaving the station. Collins raised his rifle to his shoulder, but only to draw another shot. His ruse was successful.

Collins now took in the inequality of the ground before him with a view to dodging shots, for he would soon be within range. Just before descending into a slight depression he fired a shot at his enemy, knowing that he was not yet within range. This drew a shot, leaving the captain with three shots to his adversary's five. On emerging from the depression Collins held up his hat. A spent ball struck him on the shoulder. Quickly raising his head far enough to get a sight of his enemy and withdrawing it as quickly, he saw the captain exposed and advancing. Desiring to draw another shot before coming into effective range, he exposed himself and received a spent ball in his shoulder that turned him partly around.

Von Sonntag was now left with but one shot, while his adversary had nearly as many as he had at first. Running rapidly forward so as to bring himself within range, he sent a ball within a few inches of his adversary's right ear, then another about the same distance from his other ear. This rattled the captain, who fired his last shot, which went wild of the mark.

Collins, who had kept count of the shots fired, now threw his rifle over his shoulder, the muzzle pointing away from his enemy, and walked forward to meet him. On reaching him he offered his hand.

"I think, captain," he said, "that you must have been somewhat affected by wine last evening when you insulted the Confederate army."

"I certainly was," replied the captain shamefacedly. "And now that this affair is over I offer you an apology."

CITY FATHERS RECEIV INVITATION TO CH

May Attend Opening of St. James i April 29---Usual Grind by Comm of the Whole.

Peterborough's new motor truck for the firehall will have a capacity of 750 gallons per minute instead of 500 as was first intended. Mayor Duffus explained to the aldermen at the committee of the whole last night that the sub-committee had taken the matter up with the Underwriters' Association, who advised the increased capacity. The Underwriters also suggested that the city consider an additional hose truck with a 45-gallon chemical engine.

The additional equipment will be left in abeyance until after the apparatus now decided upon has been installed.

Council Invited.

The City Council have been invited to attend the opening of the new St James Methodist Church on the last Sunday in April.

Contrary to City Bylaw.

Ald. Smith asked if the city could not take some action to prevent drovers from driving herds of cattle through the streets without damaging boulevards and lawns.

City Solicitor Gordon informed him that the city bylaw covered that point very clearly.

Ald. Duncan and Saunders had grievances against stray dogs. Both of them claimed that there were too many ownerless canines in the city.

The city clerk will write the chief of police asking that both bylaws be strictly enforced.

Teamsters Get Raise.

The city teamsters petitioned the Council for an increase in wages. At present the pay for a man and team is $4 a day. It was the unanimous feeling of the aldermen that $4 was not enough, and a resolution was passed making the rate 50 cents per hour or $5 for a day of ten hours.

The Climax of a Million Experiments

THE BRISCOE is not a new car. It was conceived in the mind of Benjamin Briscoe, one of the founders of the automobile industry, away back in 1904. It is the climax of a million experiments—the final outcome of an unconquerable determination to make the automobile value of a dollar greater under the Briscoe name than anywhere else in the industry. ¶Three years ago, after having been identified with the construction of more than a million light cars, Benjamin Briscoe went to Paris. There he surrounded himself with fourteen of the most famous European engineers. For two years these men worked together with a single purpose—the perfection of an automobile of the highest possible class to sell at a price within reach of all. ¶Their first achievement was the now-famous BRISCOE Motor. The long stroke, 5⅛ inches, with its relatively small bore, 3⅛ inches, means greater economy, because it utilizes every possible ounce of explosive force in the gas, making possible from 30 to 35 miles per gallon. ¶Next, the mechanical details of operation, balance, flexibility, and accessibility came in for their rightful share of attention, and, finally, the important matter of Body Design was disposed of. Benjamin Briscoe's designs have always been noted for their beauty, and the BRISCOE B "4-24" is a masterpiece of artistic excellence. It is graceful, smart, distinctive. Both the driving compartment and the tonneau are roomy and luxurious, with deep upholstery and high seat backs which come up well over the shoulder blades. There is ample leg and elbow room for the tallest and stoutest of men, and the many refinements and convenient appointments make an instant appeal to the most critical feminine mind. ¶When Benjamin Briscoe had finished his work in Europe, he returned to America and completed arrangements for the production of his master car both in Canada and in the States. In the immense Briscoe factories at Jackson, Mich., and Brockville, Ont., every detail of production has been developed to the highest standard of efficiency. ¶The BRISCOE car is "Made in Canada" in the truest sense of the term. Everything necessary to the complete manufacture and equipment of a car, that is made in Canada, is used in the BRISCOE. The Canadian organization is controlled by men of large interests both in Canada and the United States, and is affiliated with the $6,000,000 Briscoe corporation of Jackson, Mich. The President and General Manager are both Canadians, and their wide experience and thorough knowledge of the industry have been largely responsible for the instantaneous success of the BRISCOE in Canada. ¶The BRISCOE is a Real Car—powerful, beautiful, reliable, economical—the car you have longed for, at the price you have wanted to pay.

YOUNG MUSICIAN HELD.

Violinist From Toronto Now a Prisoner in Austria.

The lack of $50 a month menaces the musical career of Louis Ruthenberg, a gifted Toronto youth. Ruthenberg has been detained in Austria, where he had just completed his training, since the war began. He was given the privilege extended to several wealthy fellow-students of being undisturbed by paying the cost of his maintenance, $50 a month. This through the generosity of certain Toronto musical enthusiasts, he has been able to do until within the last few weeks. It is now proposed by those taking an interest in him to raise a trust fund of $1,000 to ensure the safety of the young artist, whose career as a violinist would be ruined were he forced into the rough life of an internment camp, thus destroying the delicate training of years of the hands and arms. His parents are in humble circumstances. They made sacrifices to give the boy his preliminary education. Now Ruthenberg, senior, who is practically blind, and is 65 years of age, earns a precarious livelihood as a Hebrew teacher. His wife has been a cripple for 20 years. Louis Ruthenberg was born in Toronto about 22 years ago. He left for Europe in the fall of 1910, equipped with a $200 violin, the gift of musical sponsors in Toronto, and with a banking credit supplied by local patrons. As a pupil of Frank Blachford, he had several times been heard in recital, and two concerts were held, to which leading artists contributed, to assist him, so that he could continue his training under the great Sevick, of Pesik, Bohemia, teacher of Kubelik and Marie Hall. Ruthenberg, who was known here as "the boy wonder," was the first Torontonian to gain admittance to the Sevick Meisterschule. His teacher has since exerted his influence with the Austrian military authorities to prevent Ruthenberg being mistreated. Shortly after the war broke out the Duke of Connaught was interested in Ruthenberg's case and endeavored to secure his release. Since then communication has been had at times with the young man through the United States State Department and American consular officials in Austria.

Exclusive of the Great Lakes, the United States has 21 lakes each of which has an area exceeding 100 square miles.

DR. BELAND'S CAPTIVITY.

Prominent Canadian Is Confined in Narrow German Cell.

C. H. Mellor, an Englishman, has just returned to London from Germany, where he was confined in the next cell to that of Hon. Dr. Belland, former P.M.G. of Canada. He reports the Canadian doctor well and regularly receiving parcels sent, but is depressed by his long confinement. The doctor's cell is about eight by ten feet, and the only furniture is a wire mattress, bed and bedding, and a wooden stool. He is shut in here every night from 7 p.m. till 9 next morning. He is allowed to exercise in the day in a seventy foot corridor and a small prison yard, where a number of criminals are exercising. The cell is clean and comfortably heated, and is well lighted. The prison commandant is kind and considerate. Nevertheless the confinement of the ordinary prison is declared by the returned man to be much harder than in an internment camp, where the latter was previously, and a very harsh measure.

Sir George Perley is informed, and it is hoped by Canadians in London that Premier Borden will make fresh efforts to ameliorate the condition of the doctor's imprisonment, which has been such for over two years.

The returned prisoner states that the food situation in Germany is very bad. A German soldier from the front was astonished to behold sandwiches, white bread and meat, which were in an Englishman's parcel from home, and was delighted to accept one. He thought England was starving. The same soldier declared the Germans in the trenches had meat only twice weekly. They went into battle on a small ration of coffee and black bread and came out again on such ration.

Society Women Gardeners.

The wives of four Cabinet Ministers have offered to cultivate garden lots in Ottawa this summer. They are Mrs. Crothers, Mrs. Martin Burrell, Mrs. Roche, and Mrs. Arthur Meighen. Vacant lots have been offered to the Women's Canadian Club, and a roll has been opened of women who will be ready to help cultivate the lots. Thirty well-known society women, headed by the wives of these four Cabinet Ministers, have already signed the list.

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

NOT LIKE AN EXPLOSION

Eye troubles do not come all of a sudden, like an unexpected explosion; they come on so gradually that you do not notice it till it gets so bad that the knowledge of the weakness is forced upon you. The best way is to let Dr. Fowler test the eyes, and you will then know exactly their condition, as his scientific testing apparatus is absolutely correct. Do not wait till the trouble gets bad—let Dr. Fowler give you expert advice.

Cheap Tea Not Economical!

Many people complain about the poor flavor of the cheap tea they are using, but are trying to put up with it because they think they are saving money.

In reality, cheap tea is rarely more economical, often less economical, than Red Rose Tea.

While Red Rose Tea may cost a few cents more, or even 10 cents more per pound, than common tea three teaspoonsful of Red Rose Tea are equal to five teaspoonsful of common tea.

Less Red Rose Tea is required in the tea pot, because this master blend of Indian-Ceylon teas consists largely of the famous hill grown teas of Assam, India.

These Assam teas excel in vigor, richness and strength. Their leaves yield more liquor and a fuller flavored liquor. Blended with Ceylons they make the ideal tea for flavor and economy.

Try a sealed package of Red Rose Tea and keep count of the extra number of cups it yields in comparison with cheap teas. You will find that Red Rose is worth every cent asked for it—and that it costs no more to use this delightful tea.

OBITUARY

MRS. J. H. SLIMON

Mrs. Slimon, wife of the Rev. J. H. Slimon, pastor of the Lakefield Baptist Church, died this morning after a brief illness. She is survived by her husband and two children.

The funeral will be held on Tuesday morning to Baes cemetery. Funeral services will be conducted by Rev. J. R. Webb, of Murray St. Baptist Church, assisted by Rev. Dougald Brown, of Park Street.

MRS. EDWARD COURTNEY.

Peterborough has lost a highly respected resident in the death of Mrs. Edward Courntey of East City, which occurred this morning at the family residence, 533 Concession street. Deceased was born in 1840 at Stratford-on-Avon, England, and was married at London, England, in 1866. Coming to Canada with her husband and two children five years later, she had made her home in Peterborough ever since.

The late Mrs. Courntey was greatly beloved by all who knew her for her Dorcasian spirit was displayed in constant helpfulness toward the suffering and needy. Her keen intuition and loving sympathy guided her in all her actions to help others, and her industrious hands were never weary in well doing. Her delight was in God's house, attending service at St. Luke's Anglican Church, of which she was a member as long as her failing strength permitted her to do so.

She leaves to mourn her loss, besides her husband, one son, Edward H., of Toronto, and seven daughters, Mrs. W. F. Lillico, Toronto; Mrs. Geo. LeWarne, Mount Forest; Mrs. H. Kirke, Detroit; Mrs. Jas. Young, Smith, and Mrs. Geo. Carpenter, Mrs. P. Moffatt and Mrs. W. Bothwell, of this city.

The funeral will be held on Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock to the Little Lake Cemetery. Funeral service by Rev. W. H. White, of St. Luke's.

ENTERTAINED BY ODDFELLOWS

A complimentary evening to the friends was held by the Oddfellows last night. A delightful entertainment of song, story, music and progressive euchre took place. The musical numbers were all exceptionally good.

Mr. Albert Lee's sympathic voice was heard to great advantage in the opening number.

Mr. T. Ward's powerful baritone voice swayed the audience at will as he brought so vividly to the mind the sea power of the motherland.

Miss Pollard's singing captivated the audience, and a special request was sent up to the chair for another number from that talented lady.

Mr. Johns stirred his hearers as he so thrillingly pictured the blood tide of war.

Mr. Chaandler's superbly trained voice was one of the special treats of the evening.

A delightful duet was given by Mr. and Mrs. Lee, who had to respond to an encore.

Mr. W. A. Logan gave a very appropriate monologue on aviation in his usual inimitable style.

On the conclusion of the above program a pleasant hour was spent in progressive euchre.

This entertainment is the concluding one of the season.

Next season even greater efforts will be made to put on a series of entertainments to which all Oddfellows and their friends will be invited.

"Safety First."

The man who smokes and the waste basket of wicker or other burnable fabric should never be trusted in a room together without trustworthy supervision. If he be of the artist folk still more is it advisable to put this matter strongly lest some day the fire department arrive all too late.

The really desirable and efficient substitute where the businesslike metal receptacle seems too stiff and uncompromising a thing for household or studio use is a comfortably capacious jardiniere of plain dark red or olive or soft gray earthenware. Into this may be tossed cigarette ends or cigar ashes or the contents of his pipe, even though still glowing, without the fire danger always being present. To the housekeeper the "big jar" has also the advantage that pencil chips, charcoal dust, scraps or nutshells or clippings will never "leak" from it and become manifest on the rug or polished floor, and the smooth glazed inner surface retains none of these when it is inverted for emptying.

A GREAT FORD SEASON

Likelihood of a Shortage---Shipments Unable to Cope With the Spirited Demand.

If you are planning to purchase a Ford Car, it will be wisdom to place your order and take delivery without a day's delay. The local dealer, Mr. Duffus, is anxious to impress intending buyers with this fact, so that they may protect themselves against delay or disappointment. Immediate orders are assured of prompt attention, but there is no telling what the situation may be a month or even a week hence. Delay at this time may cause a wait of several months.

Spirited Demand Increasing

This was the substance of a conversation heard in the Duffus Garage this morning. Mr. Duffus also stated that up to the present he had taken his full allotment of cars on his contract, and that they have gone out nearly as fast as they have come in. It is some weeks since Mr. Duffus has been able to get any additional shipments of cars, owing to the growing shortage.

A Rise in Prices Probable.

It would also appear that present prices of Ford Cars, on account of the scarcity and rise in the cost of material, might be increased any day. Mr. Duffus has been making energetic efforts to take the delivery of a sufficient number of cars to meet the demands of his district at present prices. The very active preference shown for Fords this spring has caused him to book orders up to the full limit of his contract, so as to assure his customers the advantage of present prices. Judging, however, from the number of cars already disposed and on his order book, a shortage seems now to be inevitable.

Mr. Duffus is the largest Ford dealer in the Province of Ontario, and has been promised every consideration from a standpoint of shipments, but in telephoning to the Ford Motor Company today he was informed that it is absolutely impossible to make sufficient shipments to cope with the demands. This year's car is extremely attractive, and the many customers who have already taken delivery of their cars, are exceedingly pleased with their investment.

A Furniture Hint.

When wood is badly dented or scratched it is often a problem to know how to get rid of the marks. This is quite easy. First of all fold a piece of blotting paper at least four times, then saturate with water, finally allowing the superfluous moisture to drip away. Now heat a flatiron until it is about the warmth required for laundry work. Place the damp blotting paper over the dent and press firmly with the iron. As soon as the paper dries examine the mark. It will then be found that the cavity has filled up to a surprising extent. When the dent is very deep a second or even a third application on the lines indicated might be tried. Sooner or later even serious depressions can be drawn up. Repolishing will clear away even the slight marks that might finally remain.

Blankets For Suits.

Blankets showing striped and plaid borders are being made up into some very stunning sports suits. Leather belts and trimmings mark these suits as distinctive. The skirts are quite plain and the jackets on the belted Russian style.

"Creoles."

Harris Dickson, who knows a great deal about New Orleans, declared in an article published some years ago, that outside lower Louisiana the word "Creole" is still misunderstood, and added this definition of the term: "A person of mixed French and Spanish blood, born in Louisiana." Between the dialect of the Louisiana Cajun (Canadian) and that of the French Canadian of Quebec there is a strong resemblance; the Creole negro language is a thing entirely apart, being made up, it is said, partly from French and partly from African word sounds, just as the "gulla" of the South Carolina coast is made up from African and English. Much of the temperament, the gayety, the sensitiveness of New Orleans comes from the Creole. He was Latin enough to be a good deal of a gambler, to love beautiful women, and on slight provocation to draw his sword.

SPOILED CHILDREN.

Begin With Baby In the Cradle to Train His Disposition.

A baby becomes horribly spoiled before the mother wakes up to the fact at all. If the baby yells for something he should not have let him yell. It is far better that he should have one or two prolonged yelling sessions so that he can find out that his yelling will do no good rather than that he should learn that he can always get his way by letting out a few shrieks.

It is positively uncanny how the youngest babies seem to know whether they can impose on you or not. Your baby knows perfectly well whether you will yield to him or whether his shrieks will do him no good. If it is the latter they soon die out; if the former they continue until he has what he wants.

Later when the child passes his first year and learns to walk and to talk you will not have such a hard time enforcing obedience if you have already showed the child in his infancy that you are not to be imposed upon. As soon as the little one is old enough to talk he is old enough to reason with. When you wish to reproach him for a naughtiness don't smile, but talk gravely. The baby knows the difference, never fear, and if you feel a desire to laugh at his cute expressions don't do it, because a laugh would spoil the effect and he would think you were not in earnest.

For the sake of your children's mental and moral welfare maintain discipline over them from infancy up.

The funeral of the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Bouck, who died on Wednesday night last following an operation for appendicitis, took place Friday afternoon from the family residence on the Hastings road to the Norwood cemetery. The services were conducted by Rev. A. M. Irwin, pastor of the Methodist church.

TOWN COUNCIL.

The April meeting of the Norwood Council was held on Wednesday evening of last week. There were present Reeve Squire, in the chair, and Councillors C. I. Puffer, Thos. H. Elliott, and J. R. McKelvie.

Following the reading of the minutes of the last meeting, which were adopted, communications were dealt with as follows:

In response to a request from the board of education, Mr. Robt. Baker was appointed truant officer for the balance of 1917.

On motion, Coun. Puffer and Elliott, a man will be secured to remove the coal ashes and put them on the streets.

The question of reorganising the band was discussed by the council, and the matter was left in the hands of the reeve and Coun. McKelvie, with power to act.

On motion, Coun. Elliott and Puffer, the following accounts were ordered paid:

R. H. McLachlan, 15 hours' work, $3.00; B. T. Weese, salary as assessor, $35, snow plowing, $2.40; J. L. Squire & Sons, broom, 50c; W. C. Harrison, 1st quarter electric light, $216.35, extra, $3.05; Wm Taylor, salary for March, $6.25, extra work, $12.80; K. G. Thomson, account, 97c.

MRS. MARY A. RUTHERFORD.

Mrs. Mary A. Rutherford passed away at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. R. E. Gill, of Riverside, California, last week. The deceased lady was the eldest daughter of the late Joseph Ford, and a sister of Dr. S. P. Ford, of Norwood. The late Mrs Rutherford was known to many Norwood people.

Pressing a button on a watch of French invention brings into position numerals that designate either 12-hour or 24-hour time.

PRACTICAL APPAREL.

A Discourse About Interesting Sport Clothes For the Season.

There's something decidedly cheerful and buoyant about this word "sport," and as this is the attitude of mind that is most desirable to cultivate there is no doubt that sport clothes will help to keep us happy.

It isn't unlikely that more and more chapters of sport clothes will follow the first spring showing, for sport clothes are practical clothes, and surely we want no end of practical clothes this season and every new season to come, be it spring, summer, autumn or winter.

Unluckily there is a great scarcity of sweaters in pure Angora and in the most desirable colors, the serviceable, warm looking and becoming heather mixtures being especially hard to find. In both browns and greens these heather mixtures or lightweight Angora or the heavier brushed wool are very much liked. So are the soft tans and forest greens and the violet purples flecked with white. All of these are dark enough to give excellent service before soiling perceptibly, and if they are not lively enough cap or hat and scarf of gayer tone will lend a lively note.

Still, some of the best looking costumes have a heather mixture sweater and cap of white Angora trimmed with the heather coloring. A scarf of white Angora banded on the ends with the darker color completes the set. And such a set is good, too, with a suit of heather jersey or other wool.

The all white Angora cap and scarf are usually becoming, and there are beautiful blues, rose tones, yellows and light greens in both these sets and the sweaters, although it is increasingly difficult to find the softly harmonious shades, and many distressingly crude colors are shown in these knitted things.

Candied Popcorn.

Put into an iron kettle one tablespoonful butter, three tablespoonfuls water, one teacupful white pulverized sugar. Boil until ready to candy, then throw in three quarts nicely popped corn. Stir briskly till candy is evenly distributed over corn. Take kettle from fire, stir until it is cooled a little and you have each grain separate and crystallized with sugar, taking care that corn does not burn. Nuts of any kind may be prepared in same way.

Stencil Help.

The cutting of a stencil can be facilitated if the thread is removed from the sewing machine and the lines of the stencil perforated by the machine. The pattern can then be readily cut with a sharp penknife. A very light weight cardboard should be used.

Riddles of the Future.

Problems of tremendous import will emerge and demand solution when this world war is ended. What many of these problems are is already evident. Some of the ablest minds of many lands are even now engaged in tentative efforts to solve these problems. What is to be the future of Belgium, of Poland, of Serbia, of Greece, of Montenegro, of Roumania? On what conditions are the nations now at war with each other to live peaceably together on the continent of Europe? What changes will the war have wrought in the condition and relation of the states that have remained neutral? Canadians are interested more or less directly, in the answer to all questions.

There will presently emerge another problem which at first sight Canadians may think does not much concern them. It is, however, a problem of supreme import to more than two hundred millions of the human race.

Upon the attention of those acquainted in some degree with Moslem history, questions like the following will very soon force themselves:

(1) Why did Germany's effort, by her ally's proclamation of a "holy war," to gain control over Egyptian and Indian Moslems utterly fail?

(2) What is the significance of the Arab revolt from Turkish domination?

(3) What is to result from the Russian advance into Asia Minor?

(4) What is to be the future of the city of Constantinople?

"Voodooism."

Voodooism, which was brought by the early slaves from the Congo, is witchcraft of the maddest kind, involving the most hideous performances. It is said that a voodoo is something of which a French negro is very much afraid, and that his fear is justifiable for the reason that the throwing of a "wanga," or curse, may also involve the administering of subtle poison made from herbs.

A friend of mine who has seen several Voodoo seances says that they are unbelievably weird and horrible. The Voodoos will make a gumbo, put a snake in it, and then devour it, and they will wring a cat's neck and drink its blood. And, of course, along with these loathsome ceremonies go incantations, chants, dances, and frenzies, sometimes ending in catalepsy.—Collier's.

The First Provincial Synod.

The first triennial session of the Provincial Synod of the Church of England was held in Montreal in 1861.

Record Piling Contract.

The largest piling contract ever given on the Pacific coast, according to the Vancouver Sun, has just been awarded by the Canadian Pacific Railway to a Vancouver creosoting company. The contract amounts to $150,000. A large number of the piles to be delivered will be 130 feet long. This gives an idea of the size and permanency of the dock extension that is being made by the railway.

A la Mode.

Willis—"What kind of a school is your son attending?"

Gillis—"Very fashionable—one of those institutions where you develop the mind without using it."—Life.

Bank Clearings Increased.

Canada's bank clearings were $10,557,187,917 last year, as compared with $7,796,781,250 in 1915, an increase of about 35½ per cent.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

Opened Dry Hotel.

In recognition of the overseas Dominions prohibition policy the opening ceremony of the British Empire non-alcoholic public house, Poplar, was performed by Premier Massey of New Zealand and Colonel Richard Reid, Agent-General of Ontario lately. The speakers had something to say on the subject of empire schemes after the war. Premier Massey considered nothing more important for the welfare of the Empire than some well considered scheme evolved by Imperial and Dominion Governments. Colonel Reid corrected the fallacy that the Dominions were solely interested in agriculture. He told the audience that Canada meant to become a serious rival of Great Britain in the industrial markets of the world.

"I'm doing my best to get ahead," asserted Cholly. "Well, heaven knows you need one!" assented Dolly.

Handicapped.

Budding Young Orator—I wish there was somewhere in the house I could deliver my speech. Wife—No, dear; you know very well the last three cooks left because they thought I was harboring a lunatic.

Wise Precaution.

"Good night, Jinks. What are you stuffing all that raw cotton into your ears for?"

"Well, I was told not to stay out late and I believe in preparedness."

Natural Result.

"What happened when her father put his foot down on the match?"

"Why, what always happens when you put your foot down on a match? There was an explosion."

Baby's Own Tablets an Excellent Remedy

When the baby is ill—when he is constipated, has indigestion; colds, simple fevers or any other of the many minor ills of little ones—the mother will find Baby's Own Tablets an excellent remedy. They regulate the stomach and bowels thus banishing the cause of most of the ills of childhood. Concerning them Mrs. Paul Dinette, Cheneville, Que., writes:—"I can recommend Baby's Own Tablets to all mothers as I have used them for my little ones for constipation and diarrhoea and have found them an excellent remedy." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Love and logic are not on speaking terms.

THE COST OF WAR.

How Money Voted by the Dominion is Spent.

In launching discussion of the resolution to provide $500,000,000, Sir Robert Borden presented to Parliament a statement of Canada's war expenditure during the fiscal year and an estimate of such expenditures during the coming period.

Of the amount asked, the Department of Militia and Defence requires $196,171,000, the Overseas Militia Department $219,000,000, and the Naval Service $17,500,000. In reference to this the Prime Minister's memorandum referred to "new ships and maintenance." The war expenditures proper provide for a total of $433,000,000. The balance of the half billion may be devoted towards further assistance to Great Britain in financing war orders in Canada.

The detailed items for the land forces include pay and allowances for 400,000 troops, $182,500,000; separation allowances, $36,000,000; rations and subsistence, $51,000,000; clothing and necessaries, $48,000,000; equipment and general stores, $42,261,000; ammunition, $16,750,000; small arms and machine guns and 30,000 Ross rifles and bayonets, $5,666,000; forage, $2,500,000; remounts, $2,000,000; ocean transport, $5,000,000; railway transport, $3,000,000, engineer service, $4,000,000; civil employes, $2,000,000; recruiting, customs duties, funeral expenses, fuel, $5,000,000.

The total expenditure by fiscal years since the war began has been: 1914, $60,750,476; 1915, $166,197,755; 1916 and 1917, up to January 20, $216,901,823. Of the total expenditure for war during the present fiscal year the Militia Department had controlled $209,213,000, the Naval Service $5,775,000, and the Justice Department $1,004,000.

The Prime Minister explained that after deducting the expenses already borne by Canada in connection with the maintenance of its troops, such as pay, etc., six shillings per man per day was the War Office estimate of the net cost of the Canadian soldier at the front, the total cost being nine shillings and sixpence. This six shillings was, therefore, the amount which Canada still had to pay. As for the equipment of the troops, that would belong to the Dominion after the war.

Hon. J. D. Hazen said that Canada was paying the 1,200 naval recruits who have been sent overseas.

Sir Robert Borden told Sir Wilfrid Laurier that the reason for the great increase in this year's war vote was the financing of Great Britain's munition purchases here.

The Opposition leader then asked how much of the war loan was being spent for the defence of Canada. The Government had purchased two submarines at the beginning of the war when danger threatened from the German navy. What was it doing to-day? He was assured by the Premier that the matter had been considered, both by the Government and the British Admiralty, and that the correspondence in connection with the matter would be submitted privately to Sir Wilfrid.

Late Empress of Russia Had Sinister Influence In Land of Her Adoption

THE revolution overtook the Imperial Russian family when all of the children but Grand Duchess Marie were afflicted with measles. Grand Duke Alexis, the twelve-year-old erstwhile heir, who was reported dead, still lives, but is very ill. His attack of measles was complicated by the breaking out of the old wound, dating from the attempt on his life about four years ago. He was reported as likely to recover. The Grand Duke is being attended by his mother and the old sailor, Berevenko, who has been his constant companion. News of the disaffection of the troops reached the Empress on Feb. 27. The palace guard was mobilized for defence, the riflemen remaining within the palace with machine guns, while outside were armored motors. When the Tsarskoe-Selo garrison revolted, a collision with the palace guards appeared inevitable. The Empress went to the commander of the guard and said:

"My desire is that you do not fire."

This was taken as an order to surrender, which he did. Soon revolutionary troops entered the palace, and officers went to the apartment of the Imperial family. To these the Empress said:

"Let there be no violence. I am now only a sister of charity at the bedside of my afflicted children."

The Czarina, who liked to appear in public dressed as a nurse and to do other sentimental and characteristically German things that were intended to win the love of the downtrodden people, will be remembered in history as another sinister woman whose intriguing brought about the downfall of her husband. The Empress Alexandra Feodorovna was Princess Alixe of Hesse-Darmstadt. For years common rumor has held that she was unhappy in the Court of Russia, that her temperament and that of her husband were not in sympathy, despite the lack of any open scandal in the imperial household.

EX-EMPRESS OF RUSSIA

The struggle of the Empress and the pro-Germans on one side and the Slav progressives on the other to win the weak though well-meaning Czar Nicholas has been as picturesque as a piece of romance. The Czarina knew that her husband was as superstitious as a pagan, and thus she won her way with him. One of the greatest influences in the life of the Czar was the monk Rasputin, the last of a long series of religious wonder-workers who had held ascendancy over him. It was in this field that the Oriental characteristics of Nicholas II., the Oriental possibilities of his office made themselves most apparent. He seemed as credulous in the presence of a monk who had gained some local reputation for religious power as any mujik.

Philippe Landard, the Frenchman, was followed in his favor by the monk Theophile; he by Iliodor, the "mad monk" of Tsaritsin; and finally came Gregory Rasputin, introduced into the Court circles by a German woman, making his career on the credulity and weakness of women, and finally gaining his influence with the Emperor, through his ascendancy over the Czarina.

It was only in January that Rasputin was murdered in Petrograd by a small group of liberally minded nobles, who are said to have included in their masked circle at least one Grand Duke. The killing of Rasputin was followed by some action not as strong as might have been supposed—to punish his murderers and to suppress the liberal party that they represented. It seems to have been this reaction that sealed the fate of Nicholas.

More than once there had been evidence that diverse forces were fighting for the soul of the Emperor. His firm stand for the popular crusade against the Germans and for some of the reforms demanded by the Liberals at the outset of the war had been followed now and then by evidences that at times he could shake off the "dark forces" that beset the palace. The Russian people believed for a time that the Czar was with them, that it was still his war and their war, the war for Holy Russia. But in the end suspicion of the Liberals, fear of what the people might do, and the influence of the Empress, the Baltic Germans, and Rasputin seem to have aligned the Czar on the side of those who believed that a German victory was the lesser of two evils.

War Sentiment in Argentina

THE "Great Conflagration in Europe," as the war is often designated by Argentina's newspapers, is the chief topic of conversation in Buenos Aires. The sympathies of the Argentine people vary, depending upon their ancestry, their interests, and their affiliations. Many residents of Argentina have forsaken their homes to enlist under the banner of England or her allies. In some cases these recruits were adventurers; in many cases they were Englishmen, or descendants of Englishmen; in other cases they were Argentine citizens who had married daughters of subjects of the Allied nations. Thousands of recruits for the Allies have crossed the Atlantic since August 1, 1914. There is no doubt that only the influence of the sea-power has prevented a host of reservists from returning to the Old World to fight under the banners of the Emperor and the Kaiser.

The leaders of the metropolitan press, La Nacion and La Prensa, favor the Allies, and partly on that account, shortly after the outbreak of the war certain German residents of Buenos Aires founded a daily newspaper, La Union, which has since served as an organ of the Teutonic cause in southern South America. Aside from the editorials in that newspaper, it is almost impossible to find in the intellectual centre of South America any published expressions of sympathy for the German cause. Argentine citizens are drawn to England by ties of commerce or of kinship; they sympathize with Italy's ambition to redeem the northern Adriatic; they resent the violation of Belgium's neutrality. But, above all, it is for la belle France—so wantonly attacked—that their hearts bleed. In somewhat extravagant words an Argentine writer recently declared: "In our literary circles, in our artistic coteries, in the scientific academies of the universities, and in the mansions of the aristocracy, France is revered as was Athens in the age of Pericles."

In a sympathetic spirit a number of well-known Argentine literary men have published opinions favorable to the Allies. The most influential prose writer to take up the pen in that cause is Dr. Francisco A. Barroetavena, a lawyer and publicist, described in poetic phrase as "a youth of seventy years." Beginning on August 3, 1914, he contributed to El Diario a series of articles concerning certain problems of the war: "The Dream of the Kaiser," "The Crime of This War," "The Attack Upon Belgium," "Germany and Sparta," "France and Athens," "The German Peril." In the first-mentioned article he declared that the war-horse of the Kaiser would "never drink of the waters of the Indus! He will not be able to seat a son upon every throne of the European monarchies!" In February, 1915, Barroetavena announced his intention of publishing those articles in a volume entitled "Alemania contra el Mundo." This book soon passed through three editions; a fourth edition of ten thousand copies has recently made its appearance in the book-stalls.

A vivid illustration of the sentiment of Argentine thinkers was furnished in a booklet entitled "Preuves de sympathies Sud-Americaines envers la noble Belgique pour l'anniversaire de l'avenement au trone de son premier Roi, Sa Majeste Leopold I." This booklet—proceeds from the sale of which were given to the Belgian Red Cross—contained facsimiles of the signatures of many South American literary men. Among the signatories were Almafuerte, Barroetavena, Carlos Guidoy Spano, the venerable Argentine poet; Jose Enrique Rodo, the well-known Uruguayan writer; Ricardo Rojas, the editor of a scholarly reprint of Argentine classics; Paul Groussac, the erudite director of the Biblioteca Nacional; Jose J. Biedma, director of the National Archives; Jorge Mitre, director of La Nacion; Ezequiel Paz, director of La Prensa; Luis M. Drago, author of the Doctrine which bears his name, and Ruy Barbosa, the Brazilian publicist. Some time afterwards, certain intellectual leaders of Buenos Aires held a meeting at a private residence and signed their names in albums which were addressed to the Institut Francais and to the extinct Library of Louvain. On the dedicatory page of each album, these men paid tribute to the Allied nations: to Belgium, "the martyred, heroic, and undone nation"; to "the soul of France, the redeemer"; to "a victorious young Italy," struggling towards "her final integrity"; to the British people, "the guardians of liberty"; to Russia, "gigantic and generous," and to Serbia, "dismantled and wounded"— nations which had united to substitute for the aphorism "that force is the first right" the other motto that "justice and respect for man have conquered and will ever conquer. . . Later, in the eloquent silence of the bone-strewn fields, nature will bestow her pious offerings of flowers; the sun his light, and man his reverence. Future generations will make pilgrimages there, and will read, in the epitaphs of the fallen, their heroism, their tenacity, and their love of good."

No Bachelors Wanted.

In the Argentine republic if a man engaged to marry hesitates beyond a reasonable time in leading his fiancee to the altar he is heavily fined, and if a resident of the republic should fail to marry he is taxed until he reaches the age of eighty.

Self-lighting Pen.

For writing at night there has been invented a fountain pen that carries a tiny electric lamp and dry battery.

GOLDEN TWILIGHT.

In the twilight, golden twilight,
When the sun has bid good-night,
And its rays are still reflected,
As the orb has left our sight,
When all shadows have departed,
And the dew is falling fast,
When the stars begin to twinkle,
And a lurid light is cast,
When the birds have ceased to warble,
And have nestled for the night,
When the bullfrog's "chug" is strengthened
By the waning of the light,
'Tis the hour for calm reflection,
And all nature seems to rest,
For the day's turmoil is ended
After hours of strenuous test,
'Tis the hour of peace and quiet,
Leading up to full repose;
'Tis the time of relaxation,
Daylight fading as a rose,
'Tis a time for contemplation,
When life's work can be reviewed,
And the errors that have marred it
Can be studied and eschewed.
In the heyday of our manhood
Life is full of strength and power,
But life's twilight comes so gently,
We scarce feel the gloaming hour.
Twilight, twilight, golden twilight!
Waning days are drawing near;
Comfort and contentment follow
When life's sky is bright and clear.

—J. B. Rittenhouse.

A GOOD RULE.

Let us be cheerful without regret for the past, with contentment in the present and with strong hope for the future.

Academics of Osculation.

"What would you do if I should kiss you?"

"I wouldn't let you kiss me."

"Well, it's a pleasant subject to discuss, anyhow."

Of Course.

BOWSER'S ECONOMY

He Sets Out to Reduce Household Expenses.

Something ailed Mr. Bowser when he came home the other evening.

Three or four times a week when Mr. Bowser comes home from the office he has a grouch against the world and shows it in his face. As soon as Mrs. Bowser discovers it she sets out to talk him out of it and generally succeeds. She saw the grouch this time and did her very best at the dinner table to dispel it, but he hung to it like a dog to a bone and was looking more solemn when the meal was finished than before it began.

Mrs. Bowser sat down to a book when they went upstairs. Mr. Bowser sat down to his evening paper and cigar, but after ten minutes had gone by he threw both aside and said:

"Mrs. Bowser, are you very busy this evening?"

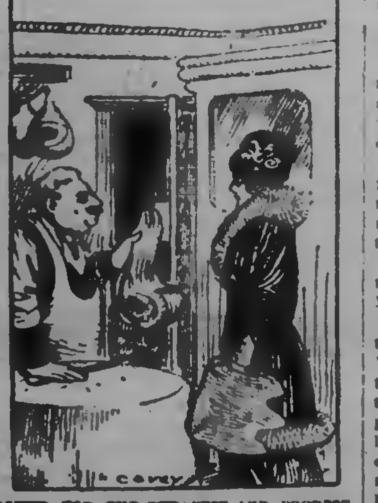
"Why, not unusually so," she said.

"Then I hope you can spare me ten or fifteen minutes."

"An hour, if you please, my dear. What is it you wish?" she asked.

Mr. Bowser walked three times and a half across the room. He looked at the clock. He looked at the cat. He looked up at the ceiling as if he expected to find a big hole there. It was hard for him to make a start, but he finally said:

"Mrs. Bowser, there must be a change in the way you have been running this house. I have let you go on for years and years in your extravagant way and said nothing. The time has come when I must speak. I hope there will be no hard feelings about it and that we shall be in perfect accord."



ASKED FOR THE CHEAPEST AND POOREST ROAST BEEF.

"Well, what change do you wish made?" she asked.

"A change from extravagance to economy," he answered. "We must live cheaper. It is hard times. We must lop off here and there to meet them. Everybody I talk with is economizing. Let us do likewise. We had better have the money in the bank than leave so much of it with the grocer and the butcher."

"What evidence have you seen of my extravagance?" quietly asked Mrs. Bowser.

"About a thousand evidences, but I will not name them. Sufficed to say that the bills have been growing larger and larger, and there will shortly come a time, unless a change is made, when my income will not meet them."

"Perhaps I have been extravagant, Mr. Bowser, and so have you, but we will both call a halt from this time on. You buy ten cent cigars by the box. You are, of course, willing to replace them with five centers."

"Hum! Hum!" said Mr. Bowser as he flushed up.

"And you buy two dollar neckties when one for half a dollar would do as well."

"Hum! Hum!"

"And you have four pairs of shoes laying around upstairs when you can wear only one pair at a time."

"Well," said Mr. Bowser, as he hitched around in his chair uneasily, "I will try the new way with you. As I smoke very few cigars, it doesn't make very much difference just what brand they are. Perhaps I have been too particular about my ties, and perhaps I could do with fewer shoes. You will find me ready to meet you half way in this matter. I am going to the Economist club this evening, and I hope you will think it over and will be ready to make a change tomorrow. I thank you for your prompt agreement with me and that I found you so ready and willing to meet your husband's wishes."

"Do I have full swing of the house?" asked Mrs. Bowser.

"Indeed you do. I'll leave it all to you and shall accept things as I find them."

Mr. Bowser went off to the club, and there he heard the president say that a man could live on baked potatoes and codfish gravy and be a healthy, strong man and that such food would develop new brain power. The same speaker said that a prisoner in a jail gained ten pounds of flesh in one month on a diet of bread and water alone.

Mrs. Bowser spent her evening planning and figuring, and now and then she smiled sarcastically and now and then she laughed aloud to herself. She was going to test Mr. Bowser, and there was no doubt in her mind how that test would result.

Nothing was said about economy next morning, and the plans went into effect at once. Mr. Bowser dearly loves his porterhouse steak and his roast beef and mutton. He likewise smacked his lips over his Mocha and Java coffee, and his potatoes are always mashed to his liking. Mrs. Bowser went over to the butcher shop herself that day, and she asked for the cheapest and poorest roast of beef the butcher had in stock.

"There is to be a change, eh?" smiled the butcher.

"Yes," replied Mrs. Bowser. "Mr. Bowser says I am too extravagant."

"He won't say so after eating this roast," was the remark of the butcher as she went out.

Returning home, she said to the cook:

"Mary, I want you to empty the coffee grounds out on a dish and put them in the oven to dry. When it is time to make the coffee for dinner use the old grounds."

"Lord, ma'am," exclaimed the astonished cook, "do you want to kill off Mr. Bowser?"

"No, Mary; I just want him to see that I am not an extravagant wife. You can also boil the potatoes with their jackets on and not peel or mash them. For sauce we will have stewed prunes. Mr. Bowser, as you know, loves lemon pie. Lemon pie is very extravagant. You might therefore make one of cocoanut. I believe we have part of an old cocoanut in the house. If it has a moldy taste it won't make any difference. It is only economy to use up old cocoanuts. That is all, Mary, we will have for dinner tonight. Oh, yes; you may put on some of that cooking butter in place of the print. Print butter is too extravagant for these hard times."

When Mr. Bowser entered the hall at 6 o'clock in the evening it had been dark for an hour. He found the hall almost as dark as the outside of the house. The flame of the gas jet was turned down until it was no larger than a buckshot, and after winking and blinking for a spell he called out:

"Mrs. Bowser, are you here?"

"Yes," came her answer.

"Then why in thunder and blazes don't you have this hall lighted as it should be?"

She came forward, and without turning up the light she said:

"I knew I could save 3 cents' worth of gas by keeping it low down between 5 and 6. Three cents is 3 cents these hard times, and we are going to save it."

Mr. Bowser reached up and turned on a full light and walked down into the basement without even a "humph!" It was after he got seated at the table that he looked around and said:

"You must have expected three or four tramps to dinner this evening?"

"I have put economy into practice," was Mrs. Bowser's reply.

"It strikes me that you have been making a fool of it," he grunted, but realizing that he had been caught in his own trap he resolved to make the best of it. He tried in vain for five minutes to carve the roast. He might as well have tried to carve an old boot leg. He held up a potato on a fork and looked at it for about fifteen seconds before he returned it to the dish. He did not fancy that kind. The bread was stale and the butter was strong and one mouthful satisfied him. He swallowed a gulp of coffee and made such a face over it that Mrs. Bowser almost laughed aloud. The cocoanut pie remained to be tasted and it fairly lifted Mr. Bowser out of his chair. He had a part to play, however, and he remained at the table until Mrs. Bowser had finished. Several times during the meal she spoke of the tender roast and fragrant coffee and how they had saved at least $2 on that dinner and had a plenty that was good and palatable. She likewise thanked Mr. Bowser that he had put her in the way of practicing economy.

When they had reached the sitting room she struck a match and lighted one gas jet and explained:

"You always want plenty of light here, but we must be careful to keep the gas bills down. We will therefore do hereafter with one jet. I have been talking with Mary this afternoon, and she says as long as we are hard up for money she will work for $2 a week less than before. She has thrown several pails of water into the coal bin to make the coal burn longer, and that is why the room is so chilly. I am going to try and save half a ton of coal next week. Did you bring home a box of five cent cigars, Mr. Bowser? I want to tell you that I saw a junk man this afternoon, and he said he would give me 25 cents a pair for your old shoes. He is coming for them tomorrow."

Mr. Bowser did the only thing that a man could do under the circumstances and keep his self respect. He found his way through the semidarkness to the hall and the hatrack and went safely out into the night. He walked up to the corner and leaned against a wall. He wanted to meditate and think on the subjects of economy and extravagance. While he was thinking it began to snow likewise. Two tramps came along and leaned up against the same wall, one on each side of him, and when each one put a hand on his shoulder they said in chorus:

"Old man, how do you like it as far as you have gone?"

And Mr. Bowser moved off without answering them. He was wondering whether Mrs. Bowser's economy would go beyond hashing up that old roast for breakfast.

"I FEEL LIKE A NEW BEING"

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" Brought The Joy Of Health After Two Years' Suffering

MADAM LAPLANTE

85 St. Rose St., Montreal. April 4th.

"For over two years I was sick and miserable. I suffered from constant Headaches, and had Palpitation of the Heart so badly that I feared I would die. There seemed to be a lump in my stomach and the Constipation was dreadful. I suffered from Pain in the Back and Kidney Disease.

I was treated by a physician for a year and a half and he did me no good at all. I tried "Fruit-a-tives" as a last resort. After using three boxes, I was greatly improved and twelve boxes made me well. Now I can work all day and there are no Headaches, no Palpitation, no Heart Trouble, no Constipation, no Pain or Kidney Trouble and I feel like a new being—and it was "Fruit-a-tives" that gave me back my health".

Trade Still Growing.

Canada continues to enjoy abounding prosperity. The remarkable increase of thirty million dollars in trade during the month of January is shown by monthly statistics. Both for that period and for the ten months of the fiscal year ended with January, big increases are registered.

The trade of the month amounted to $177,946,907 as against $14[illegible] 447,295 in January of last year, while the ten months' aggregate was $1,878,284,6[illegible], compared with $1,159,933,598 in the corresponding period. Imports in January amounted to $72,[illegible]23,704, an increase of twenty-two millions. In the ten months they aggregated $[illegible] 548, compared with $394,09[illegible] a year ago.

The great expansion of export trade is maintained. In the ten months the total reached $67[illegible],964,548, or an increase of $280,000,000. In January alone the [illegible] was $99,100,259, an increase of sixteen millions. The big item of increase in domestic exports was agricultural products, which in the ten months grew from $217,9[illegible]9,912 to $340,002,369, and manufactures which increased from $166,414,552 to $368,655,496. Of coin and bullion which are computed in the grand total, the imports were $2,[illegible]28,278 in January and $2,592,701 in the ten months, while the exports were $1,423,489 in January and $196,000,607 in the ten months.

In the same period mineral exports increased by seventeen millions to seventy millions, fish by two millions to a total of $20,860,000, and forest products by four millions to $49,822,800.

LADY CARSON

Wife of the New First Lord of the British Admiralty.

INTERESTED IN WAR RELIEF.

Said to Be a Great Help and Inspiration to Her Famous Husband in the Work That Is Calling on All Britishers For Aid.

Like all titled women of the British Isles just now, Lady Carson is an active worker for the hospitals dedicated to the care of sick soldiers.

The new Lloyd George ministry has put new duties upon her, already the inspiration of so much of her husband's zealous work.

Sir Edward Carson, the eminent lawyer and one time leader of the Ulster Covenanters, now the first lord of the admiralty, is usually very serious in demeanor, but being Irish, he is a master in the art of making witty and telling retorts.

LADY CARSON.

During one case in which he appeared he had more than one passage at arms with the judge, who finally drew attention to a discrepancy between the evidence given by two of Sir Edward's principal witnesses, one of whom was a carpenter and the other a tavern keeper.

"That's so, my lord," instantly retorted Sir Edward. "Yet another case of difference between the bench and the bar!"

PREPARING DINNER AT THE FRONT.

AFRAID OF AIRSHIPS.

Japan is Making Improvements in Aviation Corps.

Tokio has an attack of preparedness fever only exceeded by that which has broken out in New York. The Jiji (Current Events) and Asahi (Morning Sun) of Tokio criticize the army heads for delay in aviation. The Jiji asserts that the supreme value of aerial warfare has been demonstrated in the European war. The exceedingly combustible character of Japanese building render attack from aeroplanes exceedingly dangerous. The Tokio journals are aghast at the consequences of bomb dropping on Japanese cities, built mostly of wood. It would not be impossible, they assert, for enemy aviators to set whole cities ablaze!

Canadians are not inclined to feel the same alarm for Japan, because aeroplanes must operate from a base approximately within 300 miles of the point to be destroyed, and no such base is possible in the Far East. True zeppelin dirigibles have flown greater distances, reaching England from Belgium, but their destructive capabilities never came up to expectations.

One act of the Japanese military authorities, in forbidding daring and foolish feats like looping the loop, as practiced by the aviator Art Smith, who gave exhibitions in many parts of the Empire, is open to controversy, because ability to execute that daring feat is one of the essentials to obtaining a first class aviator's license at the European front. Many times such a subterfuge has saved the lives of aviators when a zeppelin balloon has exploded near them, causing sudden gusts or air pockets that can only be avoided by this hazardous trick. Until the Central Powers gain some island in the Pacific within reach of Japan, no serious anxiety need exist concerning attacks from the sky.

Australians on Skates.

The cold weather in England and the consequent revival of skating has proved a great novelty to the soldiers from Australia and New Zealand, many of whom tried to [illegible] on the various safe stretches outside London. One man with one leg and two rubber-shod crutches made quite good progress at Richmond, with occasional lapses from the perpendicular. At Walton-on-Thames, where the New Zealand Hospital is, the men were enjoying the sport greatly.

There were some Canadians who were experts in skating, and at Regent's Park one wounded man from Montreal gave a good exhibition of figure-skating. Afterwards he tried to teach a Queenslander. Both were in full hospital kit, and their "blues" and scarlet ties made an effective note of color. At last the Queenslander retired baffled, contented to watch the experts, among whom was Princess Patricia of Connaught.

Feminine Suggestion.

Hub—Things were awfully dull in the stock market today. Absolutely nothing doing.

Wife—Why don't you mark some of the stock down and advertise a bargain sale?

Substituted.

"So you have taken to carrying around a monkey? This is going too far."

"Well, you never go anywhere with me," was his wife's somewhat ambiguous retort.

Get the Direction.

"The wise thing to do nowadays is to invest your money in a going concern."

"Yes, and it's also a wise thing to first find out which way the concern is going."

Try to Say These.

Here are a few well-known tongue twisters. Can you say them quickly and clearly? Long ago it used to be the fashion in the country schools to give these as part of the school course.

Begin with "What sort of a noise annoys an oyster? A noisy noise annoys an oyster."

Try "Four men in fur coats went far from Forfar to seek their fortunes. For men in fur coats they walked well and got forward amazingly.

"But why did we bring these furs?" said the four. 'Better far have let our four furs in Forfar; then we should have got far forwarder on the road to fortune. If only, instead of four furs, we had brought our fiddles we might have made our four tunes here and now!'"

And what about "When the fowl ran far from the fowl run, the farmer ran farther to get on the far side of the fowl and the farmer's father ran farther still.

"'Don't run so fast, father,' shouted the farmer, 'or you'll frighten the fowl and that will make it run farther and get farther from the fowl run.'"

Say this: "If the son rises before sunrise to take a rise out of the father, it can be said truthfully that the rising sun will shine upon the son setting out to do what arose in the son's mind before the sun rose."

And this is a familiar one: "Peter Piper picked a peck of pickled peppers. If Peter Piper picked a peck of pickled peppers, how many pickled peppers did Peter Piper pick?"

Turn About.

He was about to propose, but before doing so he wished to make sure she was a competent girl. So he asked her:

"Can you wash dishes?"

"Yes," she said sweetly. "Can you wipe them?"

He didn't propose.

A Good Medicine For the Spring

Do Not Use Harsh Purgatives —A Tonic Is All You Need.

Not exactly sick—but not feeling quite well. That is the way most people feel in the spring. Easily tired, appetite fickle, sometimes headaches, and a feeling of depression. Pimples or eruptions may appear on the skin, or there may be twinges of rheumatism or neuralgia. Any of these indicate that the blood is out of order—that the indoor life of winter has left its mark upon you and may easily develop into more serious trouble.

Do not dose yourself with purgatives, as so many people do in the hope that you can put your blood right. Purgatives gallop through the system and weaken instead of giving strength. Any doctor will tell you this is true. What you need in spring is a tonic that will make new blood and build up the nerves. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is the only medicine that can do this speedily, safely, and surely. Every dose of this medicine makes new blood which clears the skin, strengthens the appetite and makes tired, depressed men, women and children bright, active and strong. Mrs. Maude Bagg, Lemberg, Sask., says: "I can unhesitatingly recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as a blood builder and Tonic. I was very much run down when I began using the Pills, and a few boxes fully restored my health."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co. Brockville, Ont.

HUNS CAUGHT LIKE RATS IN TRAP

GERMANS FOUGHT DESPERATELY AND FELL BY THE HUNDREDS

Bavarian Troops Leaders in a Forlorn Hope and Are Captured in Squads---More Aimed Rifle Shooting Than for Many Months.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, April 16. — The British official statement says: "The attack at Monchy le Preux on Saturday was pressed by the enemy with great determination. The 3rd Bavarian division, which was thrown into the breach at Loos in 1915 and again in the fighting near Highwood during the battle of the Somme last year, was again hurried down to reinforce the divisons already in line. It was ordered to retake Monchy le Preux at all costs. Its losses in this fruitless attack were exceptionally heavy, as has been the case with all Bavarian troops throughout the whole recent operations. Of the prisoners taken by us since the 9th, more than one-third are Bavarians.

Germans Fell in Clumps.

British Headquarters, April 16.— Further details of Sunday's fighting show the desperate character of the several German attacks on the new British positions. The attack which temporarily pierced the British line at Lagnicourt was exceptionally bitter. It began at 4:30 a.m. Sunday and continued without interruption for three hours.

The British advance posts were driven in, but support units joined issue with the Germans. Many hand-to-hand encounters followed. There was more actually aimed rifle shooting than for many months. The Germans fell in clumps. They attempted to seek cover behind bushes and small thickets, but the British fired into these with good results. When the reserves came up at last the Germans broke into full flight.

CAPTAIN HAROLD HILL IS REPORTED MISSING

Grave Fears Entertained for Safety of Popular Young Officer From Peterborough---Three Local Men in Hospital.

Only this morning Captain W. H. Hill received a letter from his son, which was dated March 21st. The missive was received a few hours after the cable containing the official announcement that he was missing. The tone of the letter was cheerful and contained the information that he had just been promoted to the rank of adjutant of his battalion.

Four Peterborough soldiers appear in the casualty list issued since Saturday. One is among the missing and three are wounded and in hospital.

Captain Harold Hill, who is reported missing, is the only son of Capt. and Mrs. W. H. Hill. He enlisted with the 35th Bn. as a private and proceeded with that unit to Bermuda, where for nearly a year they relieved the regular British regiment stationed there.

After getting to France he qualified as captain a few months ago, and only a short time ago was appointed as adjutant of his regiment.

From the despatch received from the record office he has been missing since the 9th inst., and as he was attached to the Canadian 4th Division, was in the heaviest of the battle. There is a chance that he is in one of the hospitals or he may be among the prisoners claimed by the Germans on this date.

Harold's classmates at Queen's University, as well as a host of his friends in this city, hope to hear the most favorable news of the young soldier and that the anxiety of Capt. and Mrs. Hill has been relieved.

Pte. Moore in Hospital.

Pte. Geo. Herbert Moore, son of Lieut. Wallace Moore of the 247th, enlisted with the 93rd Bn. and laterly was attached to the 21st Bn. in France. His mother had a letter from him last week. He spent his 18th birthday in the trenches on Feb. 2. The cable says he is seriously ill at No. 2 Stationary Hospital at Boulogne with a gunshot wound in the eye. The date was April 12th.

Pte. Jenkinson Wounded.

Pte. John Henry Jenkinson, son of Mr. John Jenkinson, 635 Union St., was admitted to No. 22 General Hospital at Camiers with a gunshot wound in the left leg. The injury was received on April 7th. Pte. Jenkinson enlisted with the 93rd Bn., but was drafted into the 1st Bn. Previous to enlisting he was employed in the Peterborough Planing Mills.

His Face Injured.

Pte. Joshua Johnson of Curve Lake is another 93rd man injured. He was admitted to hospital at Camiers on April 7th suffering wit.. contusion of the face.

Sunday Story of the War

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, April 16. — British troops are now within a few hundred yards of the own of St. Quentin. The village of Gricourt, one mile north of Fayette, was carried at the point of the bayonet. Many Germans were killed and wounded, together with the loss of 400 prisoners. The mining centre of Lens is surrounded by the British on three sides. The town of Lievin, adjoining Lens, and the city of St. Pierre, have also been taken. Along the entire front from the Scarpe river to South Loos the British have reached a point two to three miles east of Vimy Ridge. Airplanes dropped a large quantity of bombs at various places. Four German machines were brought down, six others disabled, and twelve of our machines failed to return.

CLOSING IN ON LENS.

LONDON, April 16. — British troops have captured German defences east of Lievy from Riaumoit wood to the eastern corner of Cile St. Pierre and are pushing on in the direction of Lens. The Germans made a heavy attack on a six-mile front on the south side of Bapaume-Cambrai road, which was a failure. The Germans gained a footing at Ladincourt, but were driven off with heavy losses by a counter-attack.

MOB CALLS FOR WAR.

LONDON, April 16. — Mobs in Buenos Aires, demanding war with Germany, attacked a German-owned newspaper office and fired on the German consulate and legation. The outbreaks were put down by the police. Several people were injured.

LENS CAPTURED.

LONDON, April 16. — Guns and howitzers captured by the British now number two hundred. German prisoners claim the chief cause of the present disaster has been the difficulty in controlling the men.

British patrols entered Lens between 3 and 4 o'clock this morning, according to a despatch to Lloyds News.

TEN PLANES BROUGHT DOWN

PARIS, April 16. — On the 12th and 13th French airmen brought down ten airplanes in the region of the Oise. Four other machines were seriously hit and compelled to descend to their lines. April 14th eleven German 'planes were brought to earth.

MANCHESTER, April 16.— A special service will be held in Manchester Cathedral next Friday, "To invoke divine benediction on the the strengthened ties between Great Britain and the United States." The Lord Mayor will attend in his official capacity as the representative of the city.

Russian Leaders Are Under Arrest

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TASHKENT, Asiatic Russia, April 15. — Gen. Alexi Kuropatkin, Governor-General of Turkestan, his assistant, Gen. Yerofeiff, and Gen. Sivers, chief of staff, have been arrested by the Council of Soldiers Delegates. Gen. Buroff, commanding the 1st Serbian brigade, and Gen. Tsuomilien, commanding a local brigade, have also been placed under arrest and confined to the guard room.

GERMANS LOSE 1500 KILLED

REPORTS SAY THAT FATE OF LENS IS NOW SEALED.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, April 16. — In an attack by Germans along the Cabral road, reported Sunday afternoon, they lost 1,500 killed and 300 prisoners, says the official report.

Newspaper correspondents say the fate of Lens and St. Quentin is now sealed.

HUNDREDS ARE CAUGHT LIKE RATS IN TRAP

GERMANS TAKEN PRISONER BY OWN BARBED WIRES.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

British Headquarters, April 16th. —Hundreds of the Germans were caught in their own wire entanglements as they attempted to regain their trenches, and they died by scores. Prisoners were taken along a six-mile front of German attack, more than three hundred being brought in.

There was fighting all day about Monchy Le Preux, east of Arras, which had already had witnessed some fierce encounters since the Battle of Arras began. Monchy in its way is little Vimy Ridge in itself, standing sentinel as the last high ground over miles upon miles of plains sweeping eastwards.

The Germans held out there for two days after the Arras battle opened, and have launched half a score counter attacks against it without success. The place lends itself to counter attacks because of the outlying woods where troops ordinarily could assemble unobserved. There were morning and afternoon attacks yesterday.

In both instances the intentions of the Germans were discovered, and the artillery played on woods scattering large per centage of formations. There has been notable air fighting over Monchy and many machines have been brought down there in the last few days. Large German formation have attacked British Scouts, and patter of machine guns overhead has been almost continuour during daylight hours. The German as a rule are careful air fighters, and virtually never attack unless they outnumber the British three or four to one. A single German machine is seldom sighted. They have come to be known as "gang air fighters," but their tactics of lying in wait high above fleety clouds and darting upon an isolated foe does not perturb the British fliers.

The British continue to police the air not only behind their own front, but far into German territory, and say they naturally suffer the same casualties as a police force would from encountering ambushed attacks from outlaws.

GENERAL STRIKE WITH RIOTS HAVE BROKEN OUT IN BERLIN

FLAGS OF TRUCE WAVED BY HUNS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, April 16. — On various parts of the Russian western front yesterday, says an official statement today, groups of Teutonic horse, carrying white flags, attempted to approach the Russian positions. On coming under the Russian fire the Germans fled back to their trenches.

THERE IS NO DOUBT

WAR BILL PASSES ANOTHER STAGE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, April 16. — The seven billion war revenue bill, which has passed the House of Representatives, was approved today by the Senate Finance Committee, and will be taken up in the Senate tomorrow for passage.

British Patrols Are Now in Streets of Lens and Outskirts of St. Quentin---French Penetrate Second Line of German Defences.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, April 16. — Travellers arriving in Holland from Germany, according to a despatch from Amsterdam to the Central News Agency, says that a general strike was commenced in Berlin and that riots have occurred in the German capital.

FALL OF LENS IS NEAR.

LONDON, April 16. — Although British patrols have been in the streets of Lens and General Haig's men are in the outskirts of St. Quentin, the fall of neither town has as yet been officially announced. The Germans have evidently sent in their reserves and are making a desperate defence to enable their engineers to complete the destruction of the mines and factories of Lens which might have been useful to the allies.

Despite the fact that all along the line between Lens and St. Quentin the German resistance has stiffened, General Haig reports today the capture of Villert, which straightens his line northwest of St. Quentin, and announces further progress to the northwest of Lens. A counter-attack which the Germans have launched at Monchy and Lagnicourt suggest that the British are approaching dangerously near the new German line which, according to unofficial accounts, the Germans had not had time to complete before the British offsneive was launched.

TRYING TO SPARE LENS.

British Headquarters in France, April 16. — The British continued today to gradually widen the second gap cut in the Hindenburg line north of St. Quentin, having captured the position knonw as the Three Savages, east of Gricourt. St. Quentin continues to burn. Away to the north Lens still holds out. The Germans have several strong positions about the city to which they still cling. The British apparently would like to take Lens without inflicting too great damage from an extensive bombardment. They have always been in a position to reduce the city to ruins, but the shells have been directed against selected spots known to be used for military purposes by the Germans. Nevertheless the Germans continue their work of destroying the city by blowing up buildings.

BRITISH CAPTURE VILLAGE.

LONDON, April 16. — The British last night captured the village of Villeret, southeast of Hargicourt, according to an official statement issued by the British war office. They also made progress northwest of Lens. Large captures of guns and war material were made at Lievin and on the Souchez River in the Lens region. The statement announces that the cannon taken include a six-inch naval gun of long range. Truck loads of ew tools, many thousand rounds of ammunition and quantities of bombs, grenades and engineering equipment also were captured.

TRENCH FILLED WITH DEAD.

PARIS, APRIL 16. — The French penetrated the German second line last night at several points in Alsace. The war office reports that great numbers of German dead were found in the trenches which had been torn up by French shell fire. Prisoners and booty were brought back. Further gains were made by French troops south of the 0ise. There was heavy artillery fighting during the night in 9lsace, Lorraine, and Champagne, in the reigons of Soissons and Rheims, and south of the Oise. Between Soissons and Rheims shell fire was particularly severe.

LT.-COL. D. WALKER OPENS OFFICE AT THE ARMOURIES

Recruiting for C.D.F. Begins and Staff Will be Announced in Few Days---Last of the 247th Leaves for Ottawa.

Everything is in readiness at the Armories for recruiting for the Canadian Defence Force. Col. D. Walker opened his office this morning and announced that it would be open daily for recruiting, in the morning from 9 o'clock until noon, in the afternoon from 2 until 5, and in the evening from 7:30 until 9 o'clock.

The officers are instructed to recruit for two classes, for the C. D. F. or for the C. E. F. A man enlisting in the C. D. F. can transfer to the C. E. F. at any time.

Col. Walker will announce his staff in a few days. He has openings for an orderly room sergeant and a paymaster sergeant.

At present recruiting will be in Peterborough for "A" Company, to consist of 250 men. Later the districts which have been placed under the 57th Battalion for C. D. F. purposes will be organized.

Will Pay Board Bills.

Capt. Thompson, paymaster of the 247th Bn., will pay board bills of all N. C. O.'s and men on Wednesday and Thursday, April 18-19. All persons having such claims must present them at the Armories on these dates.

LAST OF THE 247th.

The departure of Sergts. Andersonand Miller and Private Taylor at noon today completes the transfer of the 247th Battalion at Ottawa. As soon as the details of the transfer of the stores and equipment have been completed the officers in charge will be given a month's leave. Some will likely be transferred to the C.D.F. for instructional purposes.

A number of the members of the 247th are sick in hospital or at billets, and as soon as they are fit will be sent to the special service corps at Kingston.

CAPT. FREDERICK NOW IN LONDON.

Lieut.-Col. Ackerman received a letter from Capt. E. V. Frederick R.A.M.C., this morning under date of April 4th, in which he states that he is now in London

Since November 1st last, Dr. Frederick has travelled over 12,000 miles by sea and 900 by land. He was six days on the Aegean Sea, three days up and across Egypt, eight weeks in Alexandria, quite a while in Cario, three days in Suez, up and down the Persian Gulf, 67 miles up into Mesopotamia, three days in Basra and two weeks in Bombay. Capt. Frederick is very optimistic, and says that conditions are one thousand per cent. better than a year ago. His present address is: Capt. E. V. "FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, MONDAY, APRIL 16, 1917

HOUSE RENT AND TAXES.

THE OWNER OF A HOUSE on one of the best residential streets of the city offers it for sale, the price asked being $6000. The residence now rents for $25 a month, $300 a year, a return of five per cent. The taxes on the house will amount to two per cent. and the repairs to the same figure. The owner of the property, according to that calculation, does not derive more than one per cent. from his investment. As a residence, modern as it is in every particular and situated in a desirable locality, the place has everything to recommend it as a comfortable home.

And yet, although the house has been on the market for some time, the owner has received no offers. Who can wonder at this? Even if the present tenant had $6000 in cash, he would not be likely to purchase it, when he could invest in war bonds and be assured of an income of $450 a year without any tax burden, depreciation or expense for repairs.

It is little wonder, then, that the people who live in rented houses in Peterborough have no inducement to become owners. Any man who pays rent and who has studied the question will tell you that it is cheaper to live as he does than to invest his savings in a home and stint himself and his family to make the payments while the conditions are such as those outlined above.

A residence in Peterborough or in any other city that is worth $6000, either as valued by the assessor or indicated by the actual cost of construction, should rent for at least $600 a year in order to make the investment a paying one. This means a clear return of not more than six per cent. after the taxes are paid and the repairs provided for, and this does not include everything in the way of depreciation.

The problem of renting and owning houses in this city is certainly a perplexing one. The tenant complains that his rent is too high, the owner that he is able to do little more than clear actual expenses. Some landlords have notified their tenants of an increase in the rent, in some cases as high as $2 a month, to take effect May 1st, the excuse being that the taxes this year are likely to be higher than ever. The method of raising the Patriotic Fund by a tax impost is cited as an illustration. The tax for this purpose on a house assessed for $2000 will not be more than ninety cents this year, so that the tenant is justified in objecting to a raise of $2 a month in his rent. The aldermen assure us that the taxes will be little if any higher this year than last, and the rate struck appears to bear out their contention.

The Greater Peterborough Association will render the city a service worth while if the members can do something by way of solving the riddle. Why is house property so poor an investment? Are rents really too low or is the tax rate too high?

One thing is certain—Peterborough will never have the progressive appearance that is so desirable in a city of its size until more of those who belong to the wage-earning class own their own homes. No man has the proper ambition to improve his home surroundings unless he owns the house in which he lives. Tenants will never make the city beautiful that is aimed at by those whose eyes and tastes have been trained in the appreciation of pleasing outward appearances. Nature has been lavish in showering gifts upon this city. It is up to the people to do their share. The new organization from which so much is lookd for can educate the public in this task.

THE STREET CAR SERVICE.

THE LOCAL STREET CAR SYSTEM has been under government control for some time, and yet the patrons have failed to note a single improvement in the service. The cars are running on the same old schedule, transfers are required as frequently as ever, two being necessary to go from some parts of the city to another, and the entire system is sliding along in the same old rut, just as the cars are working on the identical roadbed. Some parts of the city are barred from all advantages entirely.

The Greater Peterborough Association have assumed the task of securing a better street car service, and of having the line extended not only to Ashburnham but to other sections of the city. It has been decided that such extensions and improvements can be made more advantageously by the Government than by the municipality, and the general opinion appears to be that it is better to leave the system under its present control than for the city to take it over. Any additional outlay upon it will be charged up to the municipality at actual cost when the title is transferred.

Ald. Taylor, when making his campaign just before the last election, came out strongly in favor of a better service, especially for his own ward. There are manufacturers in the South End who complain of the difficulty they encounter in keeping a working staff, owing to a lack of street car facilities. This was emphasized by more than one manufacturer at the recent civic banquets given by Mayor Duffus, and it is certainly time that something definite was done.

THE NEW SANITARY INSPECTOR.

AT LAST THE CITY is getting something like a business-like administration in the office of the Sanitary Inspector. Mr. Stapleton, the new official, has begun at the right end of the job, and is cleaning up the downtown districts instead of devoting all his energies to the outskirts of the city. The alleys are being cleared of the boxes and other rubbish that has for so long cluttered them. At the time of the Quaker Oats fire, ing sparks, the real danger of a general conflagration did not lie in the shingle roofs of the buildings so much as in the piles of kindling material in the shape of boxes that were piled behind some of the stores. Late on the night of the fire the work of clearing away this material was begun at the urgent request of Chief Howard, who had all along realized the menace and warned the city against it.

Under the new administration, too, there are fewer complaints with regard to the collection of garbage. Sanitary Inspector Stapleton appears to be the right man for the position, and the aldermen made no mistake when they decided upon his appointment.

THE U. S. WAR FUND.

THE UNITED STATES Congress is unanimous at last on the war question, and without one dissenting vote it has been decided to raise seven billion dollars, three billions of which is to be loaned forthwith to the Allies. Russia, the new republic, is to be given the preference in the distribution of this fund. The money will in part be raised by the levying of a war tax such as we have in Canada, and which will bear upon all classes in the community.

It is nineteen years since the United States was at war with Spain. It was a short and decisive conflict and the financing of it was an easy matter. Congress imposed a tax on nearly every article in daily use, and from all sources the receipts amounted to one million dollars a day. When the war came to a sudden end the taxes kept piling up in the treasury faster than the bills came in. The fund reached tremendous proportions before the law could be repealed. The Government, rather than see so much money remain idle, distributed it among the various national banks without any interest charge, in order to get it into circulation again, a policy that established a precedent in the finances of nations.

Not only does Germany now find herself confronted by the armies of civilization, but the wealth of the world, including all national resources, is arrayed against her.

THE SPREAD OF DISEASE.

SOMETHING MUST BE DONE, according to the medical fraternity, to stop the spread of contagious disease which threatens the health and vigor of the nation. The head of the staff of the Toronto General Hospital, who is in a position to know of what he speaks, has sounded a note of alarm. A bill is to be drawn up and presented the Dominion Parliament by the Conservative Committee. The new danger has especially threatened the country for the past two years. Nothing can be done to check the menace short of a law providing for the medical examination of all candidates for matrimony, and it is such a measure that the Government at Ottawa will be asked to enact.

WOMEN AND THE FEDERAL ELECTION.

SIR ROBERT BORDEN, at the session of Parliament a year ago, put himself on record as being opposed to the women of one province voting at the Federal elections unless the privilege is enjoyed by the suffragists the Dominion over. The Toronto World opines that while it would be a bold stroke, it might be a winning venture for the Borden Administration to enfranchise, enroll and vote all the women in all the provinces so as to give them the chance to vote at the general election which everybody feels is impending.

As the situation now stands, the women of Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia have been enfranchised by their various legislatures. Quebec and the Maritime Provinces are still outside the equal suffrage fold. In two of the provinces where women have the vote, Alberta and Saskatchewan, the women cannot vote in a Dominion election unless that right is conferred upon them by special legislation enacted by the Federal House. Premier Borden refused to pass such an enabling Act a year ago, but insisted that if the women of one province voted, those in all the other eight should be permitted to do likewise.

It is hardly likely that Premier Borden would go the length of passing an Act disenfranchising the women of Ontario, so far as Federal elections are concerned, after the Legislature has given them that right. It is more probable that, in order to work out the idea of justice which he has in mind, that he will adopt some such policy as that suggested by the Toronto World, and that in the next Federal election women all over the Dominion will have the right to vote.

WHY AN ELECTION WOULD BE AN OUTRAGE

IN THE EVENT of a general Federal election, it would be impossible to get an expression of opinion from the Canadian soldiers, engaged as they are now in active warfare at the front. What, too, of the hundreds of Canadians in German prison camps and in the various hospitals?

Are the soldiers of Canada, who are sacrificing so much, who heard the call of the Empire, to be denied a voice in the affairs at home that so closely concern their future welfare, their standing when the war is over, while the slacker who has remained behind votes as ohtugh nothing unusual had happened? Is the soldier to be disfranchised while the alien votes?

There can be no fair expression of public opinion until teh war is over. There should be no election until peace is assured and Canada's fighting forces are in their old places at home again. The gigantic task in hand is not yet completed. Until the war is won nothing else matters. In Ontario this sentiment is so pronounced and general that the Government and Opposition have agreed to hold not even a bye-election until normal conditions are restored.

WHEN THE CANAL IS FINISHED

To travel to New York City to Sault Ste. Marie with a motorboat, of 6 foot draft, by way of the Trent Valley Canal and the many connecting waters will soon be possible. If the reader looks at the map he can trace the water navigation from New York to Sorel, on the St. Lawrence River—through Lake Champlain, Hudson River and other waters—the St. Lawrence west to Trenton, and from there by river, lakes and the Trent Valley Canal system (all of which part will be open in 1917) to Lake Simcoe. Then there is the trip down the Severn River from Washago, a few miles from Orillia, to the Georgian Bay to the north outlet of the Trent Valley Canal. This whole system is one of the greatest inland waterways in the world.

The section from Trenton to Lake Simcoe will be open this year and during the coming season it will be possible to take a trip from Washago to Georgian Bay with but a single change from the boat.

Three or four miles on the Severn River bring the visitor to Sparrow Lake, an enlargement of the river, where there are more than a dozen well-conducted hotels and numerous beautiful residences. Further westward the first obstacle is reached in the Ragged Rapids power plant, from which electrical power is transmitted to Orillia.

Below the plant, after a three-mile run by motorboat, the visitor reaches the enormous lock now in construction. Passing through the openings left for stop logs and still descending for some 12 miles he will reach the big Chute power plant, where the motor craft may be quickly transferred over a short portage of a marine railway. Again speeding down river through Gloucester Pool—a ten mile lake—and entering the narrow waters of the river for a few miles, he is brought to the Port Severn Lock, constructed some three years ago and finds himself in the waters of Georgian Bay. From there to the Soo the way is easy. When the canal system from Peterboro to Lake Simcoe is deepened from its present depth of 6 feet to 8 feet (which latter draft will prevail on the rest of the system) there will then be accommodation to carry tow barges of 30,000 bushels capacity, and with this possible, a freight carrying trade may be inaugurated by this route.

CHINA'S OWN DEVIL.

Celestials Trying to Drive Out Opium Trade.

"The curse of centuries will soon vanish from China," says the Peking Gazette, which tells us that after March 31st the opium traffic must cease absolutely. Up to the present time opium could be imported into China from India under a treaty with Great Britain signed in 1911, and this traffic was the monopoly of the Shanghai opium combine.

Anticipating the end of the opium connection with Great Britain, the Chinese Government recently communicated with the British minister in Peking, requesting that a British envoy be deputed to China to head an investigation into the opium-suppression campaign in China. At the same time circulars were sent to all the provinces preparing them for the impending complete extirpation of the traffic as follows (1) All the opium plantations in the land were ordered to be swept away during a period of three months from September to November, 1916; (2) the trading in opium had to be entirely stopped between December, 1916, and March, 1917; (3) smoking of opium is to cease in a period of three months from March to June, 1917.

It would seem that these provisions are received with popular favor. Bonfires have been frequent since these orders went into effect, the Chili Opium Prohibition bureau, at Kaigan, making perhaps one of the most spectacular affairs. A large quantity of opium was gathered together with all the opium-smoking instruments the officials could lay their hands on, invitations were issued, and a delegate from the National Opium Prohibition Union was requested to come as a witness. The acting president, Mr. An Ming, responded, and the ceremony proceeded in due and thorough order, lasting from eight in the morning to one in the afternoon, with the civil governor of Chihli, the military governor of Kaigan, the police authorities and citizens from all neighboring sections an enthusiastic audience. This is typical of scenes being enacted in many parts of China.

Big business, however, did not surrender without a final stuggle. The Shanghai Opium combine is the only legal surviving distributor of opium, having secured a license to carry on its traffic until March 31, 1917, in the provinces of Kwangtung, Kiangsu, and Kiangsi. To their bribe of $16,000,000 for the privilege of an extension, to their threat of withholding their extra duty of $1,750 per case, the Chinese Government has lent a deaf ear. The opium traffic must go, and as quickly as possible. The threat of the combine to stop the payment of the additional duty, even if it is carried out—which is unlikely—would only mean a loss to the Government of something like $5,000,000. According to trustworthy information, the combine can sell between October, 1916, and the 31st of March, 1917, three thousand cases at a valuation of $5,000 per case, which would give the Government a revenue of $5,000,000, a small sacrifice where the physical and moral welfare of the country are at stake. And President Li and his cabinet have lost no time in declaring that there shall be no compromise.

Chinese Girl's Escape.

Against the grimness of the counterfeit gaiety of the night life of Nanking and Foochow roads in Shanghai I hold a recollection that flashes through those tawdry streets like a torch in the night I can still see a little crowd of furiously hurrying people that broke across my path one evening.

In front of them was the flying figure of a girl, her little silken coat torn and hanging by one shoulder. She was ten paces ahead of her pursuers as she passed me, her little face drawn and blanched with terror and exhaustion.

Fortunately her pursuers were not agile. A stout madam bobbled along on little feet; two burly men in blue peasant clothes lumbered along beside her, apparently the major-domos of her establishment. And all too apparently the scudding little miss ahead was a very recent inmate of that establishment, launched on a desperate break for freedom.

few heads turned around out of curiosity, but none out of sympathy. The pursuers swept by. Suddenly the girl turned under a bright street light and began to pound with both fists against a kind of matchboard doorway. A tall Sikh policeman started across the street from his traffic post on the opposite corner. Then the crowd closed in and it was all a blur.

When I got to the fragile doorway under the light the girl was gone and the Sikh policeman was dispersing the crowd. They scattered quickly, all but the stout woman and her two strong men. The woman scolded vehemently and viciously shook her fist at the sign above the doorway through which her victim had escaped. Then the policeman "moved her on" in true Occidental fashion, and the incident seemed to be closed.

This was my first view of the Door of Hope, the expressive name that has grown up around one of the most consecrated missionary works in modern China. It is a refuge from the life of the streets that has been sought in its six years of dramatic existence by more than a thousand Chinese women.—Gardner L. Harding, in World Outlook.

An Achievement of War.

The brayless mule is one of the scientific developments of the war. Large numbers of mules have been imported from America for use at the front, but their habit of braying at inconvenient moments had to be remedied before they could be used to the best advantage. The veterinary experts were called in, and after a little experiment they discovered that a slight operation on the nostril had the desired effect, and all the mules sent to the front are now made mute by the process.

ABOUT WINDOWS.

How to Treat Them For Spring House-cleaning.

Has it ever occurred to you that windows are as important a furnishing feature as any piece of furniture in a room? A window can be an asset or a disfigurement, according to the way it is treated. No window is so bad that it cannot be made attractive if a little time and forethought are spent upon it. One can't just slap up curtains in a hurry and expect miracles to happen overnight.

Take single windows first for consideration. If your window is too broad choose striped materials for the overdrapes and hang them in long lines clear to the floor with no valance. Instead of stripes, any patterned material with an up and down movement will answer the same purpose. The stripes are very good from the decorator's viewpoint if the rest of the room is kept under consideration.

If your window is too high use horizontal patterns and deep valances. Follow the architectural lines of your window in the hanging of curtains whenever possible; sometimes, too, the curtain may be held back with a strap without offending good taste.

Where windows are grouped in bay or casement effect it is better to treat them as a whole instead of so many windows. A valance running across the series will usually serve to unite them sufficiently, and unless the woodwork between the windows is unduly conspicuous the drapes at the extreme ends are enough. If the windows are broad and the room low a curtain between each window will give a better effect.

Remember that a valance always makes the windows and room look lower. It also cuts off light where no shade is used, and shades are not used nearly so much as formerly, draw curtains being provided in most cases instead. Rods without ornamentation are in best taste.

Consider the view from your windows when hanging curtains. If you have a lovely sweep of landscape from your windows do not curtain it off unless privacy is necessary. Glass curtains should be added for privacy, closely enough woven to exclude a view of the house from outside, but thin enough to admit light.

Large windows need larger, bolder patterns for both overdrapes and glass curtains, while smaller windows should be treated to lighter, daintier things.

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review: The increased cost of living is at last stirring up people to the necessity of taking a little more interest in municipal affairs in which we are all deeply concerned.

If the electors would cease denouncing the Council and Government when things are not to their liking, and recognize the fact that they are simply our representatives, elected by a majority of the voters to conduct our business affairs, it would be a step in the right direction.

I have noticed in the press that there is to be a general meeting of the men and women of this district in the Opera House tomorrow evening next, and if any person has any suggestions to make, I hope they will be given a hearing, as I understand this meeting is in the interests of the general public.

SAVE but HOW?

You are daily admonished by Bankers, Cabinet Ministers, Judges, and by all the Press of the Country, to save and be thrifty. In fact, the stamps on our letters are cancelled by the admonition to "Save, Save, Save, etc."

Outside of the Bankers' Association, who have recommended the Banks, very few other suggestions have been made.

Why has no person suggested or recommended the greatest thrift producer and the greatest anti-poverty institution known to the Public?

For instance, let us suppose two thousand men at say age 25 propose to test this principle for say twenty years, and one-half of them invest a small sum annually in a bank and the other thousand deposit an equal amount annually with this anti-poverty institution. Now, if I can show you that those who deposited with the anti-poverty institution not only received more than those who deposited in the bank, but that the anti-poverty institution paid to the beneficiaries of the unfortunate depositors who were unable to continue their payments, the large additional sum of $159,000.00 which the banks kept for their stockholders, WOULD THAT INTEREST YOU?

The banks are all right, but if I can show you that this anti-poverty institution not only gave better security and actually gave better returns, but in addition they gave a Bond that if anything unforeseen, such as Death, happen you, they would protect you and your estate to any extent desired, WOULD IT INTEREST YOU?

The above facts can be verified to you by calling at, 'phoning or writing the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada, 402 Water Street, and such action on your part places you under no obligation whatever.

RAIDING HUN TRENCHES

OUR OWN SOLDIERS PERFORM DARING DEED.

A Scientific Plan Carried Out With Coolness and Courage Accounted for About 350 of the Enemy, and Our Own Casualties Were Not Very Heavy.

THIN snow, hardened by frost—woe to sandbangs and parapets when the thaw begins!—still covers the battleground, and a white mist blurs the landscape of war. Haystacks in fields on the edge of the fighting world are topped with snow so that they look like sugar loaves, and flocks of rooks make black blots on all this whiteness.

It is upon this picture that our soldiers look out from their billets in French farmyards, and across the snowfields they go trudging on their way to the trenches, or over No Man's Land when they are out for one of those raids which happen now almost every day at some part of the line.

The full narrative of the Canadian raid near Calonne is well worth more than the few lines already sent about it, because of its complete mastery of method, and the grim human interest of it, and its lessons. From the men who did the job—fine, clear-eyed, straight-thinking men—I have heard every detail, and although there is much I must leave out because the Germans would like to know, I can tell enough to give the spirit of it.

The Canadians were preparing the surprise with scientific industry and patience. A brigadier and his staff officers and company officers were studying every feature of the German position from every angle of observation.

The men selected for the raid, picked men, were trained for the task so that each one of them knew exactly what he was required to do, the time in which he had to do it, and the place in the German lines where with luck he should und himself.

They were even taught some words of German — kommen sie heraus, sonst wollen wir handgranaten werfen" (come out, or we will throw down bombs)—so that they could get prisoners more easily. It was a complete education in the art of attack, which is not a gentle art.

To save the lives of our own men, as well as to kill or capture the enemy is the test by which the success of a raid is judged. The Canadians were not out to lose men but to save them. "The cheapest possible price," was the brigadier's bargain with his officers, and he is a good soldier.

Our artillery was bombarding north-west of Lens, and the enemy was nervous in that direction, keeping his own guns ready for an attack up there. One or two minor raids in different directions distracted his attention and worried him.

Things were boiling up southward by a ruined house in his lines. He sent up reserves of men to strengthen the support lines and assembly trenches along this line of front. He still had forty feet of "knife rests" as a great protection.

To the Canadians it was all a question of that belt of wire. Could the guns make lines through it? The guns got to work, and poured shrapnel on the entanglements. But neither the forward observing officers nor the staff officers, nor the company officers, were quite certain that the wire had been cut well enough for men to walk through. It was impossible to see through the white mist. Men were told off as wire cutters. Ultimately they might have to depend upon hand work to open the gates, increasing the risks a thousand-fold.

The attack was in the daylight on a Thursday morning. The men themselves preferred the light. It had been snowing all night and there were four inches of snow on the ground. The Canadians liked that also, as it gave them a "homely" feeling.

"They went over with bombs strapped to their chests to have their hands free, with empty sandbags to bring back documents from German dugouts, with wire-cutters on their bayonets. They were mostly young men from 18 to 22. Only a few of them had been "over the top" before. But they went with cool heads, without hurry or any wildness of excitement upon this adventure, which would mean death for some of them. Some of them certainly, though the price was to be cheap.

The shells of many guns were in a flight over their heads, flinging a straight, steady barrage upon the German lines. Up by the Double Crassier, nearly a mile to the north of them, there was a big bombardment. It extended southward. Smoke barrages were rolling across the snow, uniting with the white mist so that the Canadians were boxed in and invisible.

Somewhere near Lens a mine was blown, and it shook the earth with its roar. Rockets, mostly green, rose above the smoke and the mist, and floated like toy balloons. The German artillery crashed out in an answering barrage, but nowhere near the raiders, who were walking at quick march across No Man's Land 160 yards wide, to the salient in the German lines.

Some of them, the officers especially were listening for the patter of machine gun bullets. This ground was surely enfiladed by machine guns. . . . There were a few bursts of machine-gun fire.

"We've got it!" thought one of the officers. A few men dropped. "Steady there!" shouted the sergeants. Unwounded men halted and stooped to give first aid to their comrades. It was the law of the heart lead against the laws of war, which have nothing to do with that.

The machine gun — somewhere south of the Slag Heap—rapped out a new burst of bullets. Then the chatter of it stopped, for a reason only known afterwards, when the "heavies" claimed a direct hit, or at least a silence. There was no more machine-gun fire.

Not one burst of bullets came from those places marked on the maps. The guns had smothered them. "Good old guns-" said the Canadian soldiers, and they felt very confident with the creeping barrage ahead of them. And not very far ahead, either. . . .

The great query had still to be solved. How about the "knife-rest" wire? Upon the answer to the question depended many men's lives. The answer was as good as gold to the Canadians trudging through the snow.

All that broad belt of wire was down. Great lanes had been smashed through it by our shrapnel. The gates were open into hostile country and the Canadians streamed through, entering the enemy's front line just four minutes after the scramble over the British parapets. Pretty quick work for all that distance of No Man's Land.

The second wave passed through the first, and went on to the second line without halting. There was some bombing on the left flank, but it was not important. Seven German bombers flung a few grenades, and then disappeared into a hole, from which they were taken later.

In the second line of trenches there was hardly a fight. The inhabitants of dugouts came out quickly in answer to German words shouted down by men in khaki. It was not very good German, but it was understood.

For an hour the Canadians remained in the enemy's trenches, collecting booty and prisoners, and papers. No German barrage had yet fallen upon them. The enemy's guns were still plugging away at the wrong place. No machine-gun fire enfiladed them. They had complete mastery of their ground.

By their synchronized watches the men knew the time to return, and, carrying their wounded, they made their way back. Afterwards the enemy barraged their own front line; but no men were there except the German dead.

This, as far as I can tell it, is the narrative of the Canadian raid, planned in a scientific way, and carried out with a cool courage. It accounted for about 350 of the enemy and our own casualties were not heavy.

Canada's Fighters Filmed.

Every man, woman, and child through the length and breadth of Canada should make a point of seeing the latest war films from the Canadian front. Far clearer than any preceding films of the kind, these wonderful scenes from the Canada's battlefront bring vividly home to the audience winter work in the war. One scene shows German shells bursting in plain sight on our trenches while the erstwhile occupants gaze interestedly on Fritz's wasted work from a safe place close at hand. Marvellously realistic, too, are the tanks, every portion of them in plain view, as with big guns manipulating they pursue their course over all obstacles.

Canada's movie pictures from the front have no superiors. Canada's movie photographers have no rivals in daring. Some of the pictures were taken in the heat of battle, where the air was literally full of flying death, and the operator in terrible danger every moment. Imagine standing out on No Man's Land in an action, "screening" the advancing soldiers, snapping Hun prisoners, the while shells burst in close proximity and bullets "whiplash" past in showers! Perched on the top of a parapet, hiding in a shell-hole, manipulating an instrument which the Boche is as likely as not to take for a machine gun and act accordingly, is the portion of these daring movie men, whose work at such times is really more dangerous than that of the soldiers themselves.

Rights to these films taken under the auspices of Sir Max Aitken's department, the Canadian War Records Office, were sold by Sir Max for $20,000 cash, which sum he turned over to the Canadian War Memorial Fund. This purchase sum it has been arranged that the company may recover from the profits, but after its reimbursement, the film company is required to give any profits over and above working expenses to the above-named fund.

After using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier I became well and strong and was saved from the operation. We are now the parents of a big baby girl and I praise your remedies to others and give you permission to publish my letter."—Mrs. JOSEPH GUILBAULT, JR., Bridge Street, Miller's Falls, Mass.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is famous for restoring women to normal health and strength. When this is done wives no longer despair of having children.

A woman should be reluctant to submit to a surgical operation until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial. If you have a case that needs special advice, write the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. It is free and always helpful.

Commends "Dry" Canada.

Bishop Perrin, of Willesden, formerly Bishop of British Columbia, writing to The London Chronicle on prohibition, pronounced it as practical a political act as had been done in Canada. "Oh, yes, people say, but Canada is so different from England. My answer to that is," writes the Bishop, "have you been there? I do not mean a trip for a month, but have you lived in Canada as I have for eighteen years?

"Prohibition was no easier there than at home, yet to-day from the Atlantic to the Pacific it has been accepted in every Province with the exception of Quebec, which is nearly dry, because the people have seen that the war demanded it.

"Every argument used here was used there with far more strongly vested interests, and all the rest of it. That, they said, can never be, but it has come to pass. When history comes to be written, shall it be said when Canada with its splendid response of 400,000 soldiers, all volunteers, agree on the prohibition of the sale of drink, England with an equally splendid response of men and sacrifice of life and money, was still so fond of drink, so afraid of trade that all went on quite as usual and the country wasted its strength and spent its money?"

Chariots worked on the principle of the taximeter are said to have been used in China in the fourth century.

The Latest From Berlin.

Even the Germans are making fun of the Kaiser's over-lavish distribution of iron crosses, to judge by the following story that is going the rounds just now in Berlin, and which was related to me the other day by a well-known American comedian who has recently finished a month's professional engagement there.

At a big review of his troops by the Emperor, just before the final march past, a soldier was seen by his company commander to be wearing an ordinary undress forage-cap instead of the helmet proper to such an occasion.

Horrified beyond measure at this unheard of breach of military etiquette, the captain hastened to report it to his colonel.

"What?" cried that individual in amazement. "In a forage cap, you say! And at an Imperial review! Donner und blitzen! Give him ten days close arrest." And off he went to report the matter to the brigade-major.

He, in turn, reported it to the divisional commander, who promptly galloped off to the saluting base, where was the Emperor surrounded by his staff.

"Sire," he began, "there is a man back in Number 3 company of the 135th regiment——"

But the Kaiser, busy with more weighty affairs, and concluding, as was only natural, that the soldier in question had distinguished himself in some way, cut the speaker short.

"Very well!" he said. "Decorate him!" And, turning away, he resumed his interrupted conversation with his Chief of Staff.

And as no one dared gainsay an order given by the "Supreme War Lord," decorated the man was—for coming on parade improperly dressed.

HONEST ABE, U. S. M.

Faithful Carrier Indites Balm Poems on His Rounds.

SURE CURE IN ALL CASES.

One Tells of the Borning of His Namesake—Farmer's Son Gets a Wife on His—Gilman Incident Put In a Parlor Frame

AS I hadn't any mail for young farmer Tom Gray I had passed his house for four days running. On this fifth morning I found him loafing over the gate with a grin on his face, and, lifting his hand for me to stop, he said:

"Poetry, Abe—got to have some poetry."

"But I'm behind time."

"You get down and come in or I'll hamstring your old horse."

"Anything the matter?"

"Come in and see."

All the time I was drinking a glass of hot cider and eating a piece of mince pie his face wore that grin and he kept up a chuckle. Then he went to the bedroom door and called out:

JIM SWIFT WINS WIFE WITH POEM.

"Mother, bring out the prize winner!"

And presently his mother came out with a bundle in her arms and a laugh on her lips, and I heard the squealing of a rat.

"No," said I, as I jumped back.

"To be sure. Look at him!"

"And named after you!" said Tom. "Get to work on that poetry."

And I sat down and wrote:

He weighs ten pounds, his face is red,
And scanty is his hair.
He's toothless as a cabbage head,
And not a hat to wear.

His voice is like a crowing hen's,
His appetite's immense.
And when he gets his dander up
He's sure the present tense.

He's had the colic, and he'll have
The measles sure enough,
The chicken pox will wallop him
And mumps his temper rough.

But Honest Abe—named after me—
Is surely bound to go it.
He'll rise some day to lofty height
And be a country poet.

"Fine, fine, fine!" shouted Tom as he danced around with the kid in his arms.

"Lands o' massy, but Mary 'll be up in three days now!" said the mother as she clapped her hands and returned to the bedroom.

Who would be a senator and hang around Washington when such things can be done to gladden the hearts of the sons and daughters of industry?

One For the Fellow In Love.

When I stopped at Farmer Swift's to hand in his county paper the motherly Mrs. Swift looked at me for a moment in a puzzled way and then asked:

"Abe, can you tell when a man's crazy or when he's in love?"

"For sure."

"Then for goodness' sake go out to the barn and overhaul Jim, the hired man. He's mumbling day and talking in his sleep by night, and we are afraid he's going to try suicide."

I went along to the barn and found Jim leaning up against the fanning mill with the whites of his eyes rolled up. He looked like a calf that had been struck in the head with an ax.

"Come out of that!" I yelled at him.

"What—what's the matter?"

"You are in love, and you've got it bad."

"I deny it."

"Then you are a liar. I've had the disease over forty times myself. Who's the girl?"

"Josephine Schermerhorn," he said after a bit.

"Well, why don't you pop the question?"

"'Fraid to."

"Nonsense! Does she know you love her?"

"I—I don't think so."

"Then we'll tell her. I'll write something and you copy and send it to her. If she doesn't know that you love her you may be playing the fool for the next hundred years."

Fetching Josephine to Time.

Jim got me an old paper flour sack, and after I had smoothed the wrinkles out I wrote:

I love the name of Schermerhorn;
I love the name of Joe;
I love the tracks she leaves about
In mud and slush and snow.

I love her golden tresses, and
Those pearly ears I love.
I love the eyes so big and blue,
Like angels up above.

Controversy Now Raging Round Lord John Fisher England's Naval Genius

ONE r[illegible] remarkable interim report on the Dardanelles campaign will undoubtedly be to renew the clamor for the return of Lord Fisher to the Admiralty. Ever since his resignation Lord Fisher's friends have been working with might and main to reinstate him, on the plea that he is the greatest naval strategist in England and the only man capable of dealing with the submarine menace.

This belief seems to be founded, in so far as it has any foundation, on the tradition that the failure of the submarine campaign of 1915 was due entirely to Lord Fisher's genius and energy. Only the other day a Member of Parliament, at one time Civil Lord of the Admiralty, predicted that in three months' time, "when people's belts were tightening," popular pressure would force the government to take him back, and prayerfully adjured them to take him now, when he could be had on easy terms.

The complaint of these ardent partisans has always been that Lord Fisher was scandalously treated when the failure of the Dardanelles enterprise had been demonstrated, and now that it appears clearly that he never approved of the methods adopted, that he was from the first a more or less active opponent of those methods, they will, of course, be more than ever zealous to increase his power and authority.

LORD JOHN FISHER

But, after all, even his enemies never believed that Lord Fisher was responsible for the experiment so boldly defended by Mr. Winston Churchill on the occasion of his resignation. They never really believed that the attacks which resulted in the fruitless sacrifice of ships and men were conceived by Lord Fisher or that Mr. Churchill's amazing attempt to justify his course reflected the opinion of his naval adviser. "We had seen," said Mr. Churchill, "great fortresses, reputed to be the strongest in Europe, collapsing, fort by fort, under five or ten shells from 15-inch howitzers. Here was the Queen Elizabeth, with eight 15-inch guns on the broadside," and so forth. No one supposed that this absurd comparison was conceived by Lord Fisher, or, indeed, that he ever could have countenanced Mr. Churchill's wild gamble.

The real complaint against Lord Fisher is that he tacitly consented to the scheme. His censors hold that he ought to have resigned when his advice was overruled and not afterward, when the disastrous consequences had already been achieved. The truth appears to be that he did offer to resign, but "reluctantly yielded to Lord Kitchener's entreaty and resumed his seat." Be that as it may, it is evident that his attitude was throughout too passive, and that in effect he allowed Mr. Churchill to carry out what he obviously objected to—a purely naval attack, which he knew to be full of danger and wholly unjustifiable. If he had stuck to his well founded opinion and refused absolutely to allow the adventure his associates would hardly have dared to pursue it further. That is the probable reason why no change is being made in the organization of the Admiralty in spite of the steady clamor of Lord Fisher's friends. That he is a naval genius, no one denies, but he is not any more infallable than other men.

Town to Aid Gardening.

With the idea of inducing citizens generally to aid in food production, Mayor C. W. Hoare, of Walkerville, is urging residents of the town to utilize all available vacant land in the town. The facilities of the corporation, such as horses and plows, will be available for those who desire to make use of them. A nominal charge will be made to those able to pay. Any citizens unable to do so will have the use of the teams free, and in addition will be supplied with free potatoes. The plan promises to meet with instant favor.

FUR TRADE SHRINKS.

Due to Growth of Population and Fur Farming.

A hundred years ago, the fur trade might be said to extend over the whole length and width of what is now the Dominion of Canada. Fifty years ago, a large portion of Quebec, of Ontario, of the Maritime Provinces, a considerable section of Manitoba, and a portion of British Columbia had been reclaimed from the wilderness; its quota of furs had fallen off with the advance of civilization, and the territory from which furs were being drawn had been circumscribed to that extent. Yet the supply of furs still kept up. Why? Because increased population, better transportation facilities, greater and more general knowledge of the country, and more highly organised effort on the part of the trading companies, had made smaller the mesh of the trading net, and the country still available as a source of supply for fur was being dragged more carefully and more completely.

To-day, that area is still more circumscribed. The southern half of British Columbia, of Alberta, and of Saskatchewan, practically the whole of Manitoba, and all that portion of Ontario and Quebec which lie south of the height of land, have been taken out of the fur trading area proper. They have gained the stage where, if they are not given over to agricultural, mining, or other industries of civilization, they are in the half-way stage of their existence, neither fish, flesh, fowl, nor good red herring; neither a fur-trading wilderness nor a full-fledged civilization. Their villages are half-store, half-trading post; their inhabitants, half-pioneer-farmers, half-trappers and traders; they can no longer make their living from the fur trade, and they have not yet arrived at the point where the demands of their civilization will enable them to live without it.

It is beyond this area where the real fur trade is to be found. It is this still further circumscribed district that furnishes the raw material for the London fur market — that market which still levies an approximately equal tax to that of years past — but levies it on this restricted fur belt in lieu of, as formerly, the whole of Canada.

It stands to reason, then, that unless the fur-bearing animals are more prolific now than they used to be they must be having a harder fight for life and liberty than they did heretofore; and it is equally patent that they are not succeeding in that fight, since from a large section of country they have practically disappeared, and that from the remaining portion they are being caught in numbers, which show practically no diminution from the records of the time when the hunted area was one-third larger.

Another factor, however, has come into the situation of recent years. Fur farming, once thought to be the idle dream of impracticable theorists, has proved itself to be a commercial possibility. During the past few years fur farms innumerable have been started, enormous amounts of capital have been sunk in the business, and some, at least, of these enterprises have proved and are proving immensely profitable. Fur farming is a business which not everyone can hope to succeed in. It requires special knowledge, special climate, situation, soil, and all kinds of conditions must be carefully watched. It is also largely in the experimental stage. Large numbers of animals may be lost through the slightest deviation from the right plan of handling, and the right plan is still to a certain extent a matter of guess work.

Yet there is no doubt that fur farming has come to stay; that it will increasingly become a source of commercial supply for the fur trade of the world; and it is becoming evident that the fur farm will not always be confined merely to the more valuable classes of fur, that silver fox is not the only kind of fur it would be profitable to farm. But whether the supply of pelts from the fur farms, even under the most promising conditions, will ever enable the trade to overtake the high-water mark of times past, or to stem the gradually decreasing number of animals, is a question that no one familiar with the history of the trade and the manner in which it has been carried on would undertake to answer in the affirmative.

BOWSER'S WANTS PEACE

And He Starts Out to Get It

BY M. QUAD.

"Mrs. Bowser," began Mr. Bowser the other evening as he laid aside his paper. "this war in Europe has grown to be a horrible thing, and it is enough to make one shudder as he opens his daily paper. It is nothing but kill, kill, kill, and some means ought to be found to stop it."

"It is awful," sighed Mrs. Bowser in reply. "It ought to have been stopped after the first battle."

"Yes, it had, but I was very busy at just that time and couldn't give it much thought. I truly believe that I could have stopped it had I had time to devote my efforts to the object."

Mrs. Bowser looked at Mr. Bowser and saw that his chest was swelled out with pride and that his face wore an air of great importance. He was sitting very erect in his chair with arms folded and seeming as if in a vision to behold Napoleon crossing the Alps. She instantly divined that a new fad had been born in his brain.

"But how could you have stopped the war?" she asked.

"Don't I generally accomplish things when I set out to?" was his evasive reply. "It is too late now to ask how I could have done this thing, but let me inform you right here, now, that I am going to put an end to this murderous struggle."

"I CAN'T SIGN NO SUCH PAPER!"

Mrs. Bowser didn't reply to this, and after a long minute Mr. Bowser slapped his leg with his hand and exclaimed:

"Yes, we must have peace! War must cease at once. The world must be restored to peace and prosperity. You hear that, woman?"

"Yes, I hear your words, and I wish they would come true," she quietly answered. "But I have very little hopes of such a thing."

"What if I tell you that I can bring about peace in a month?" he whispered as he glared at the cat on the hearth.

"If you can do this the world will call you a great man indeed," was her quiet answer.

"My dear woman, don't the whole world want peace?"

"I guess it does."

"There is a cry of peace, peace, peace from every land, and there has been few months and months and why haven't we had peace?"

"Because — because — we have had war," was the rather lame logic of a woman.

"I'll tell you why, Mrs. Bowser—I'll tell you why. We have all been crying for peace, but there has been nobody to act as leader. There were leaders to declare war, but there have been no leaders in a campaign to stop it. The people have simply frittered away their time."

"Why, I thought W. J. Bryan and Henry Ford were the leaders in a movement for peace," said Mrs. Bowser.

"And what have they done?" was shouted. "Have they proved their fitness as leaders? They have talked and hired hall after hall, but are we any nearer peace than we were a year ago? No! The people have been waiting for the right kind of a leader, and they are waiting tonight, but they will not have to wait much longer."

The inference was plain. Mr. Bowser was going on a rampage. Mrs. Bowser realised that she could not hold him back with a ship's hawser, but she would not discourage him.

"Will a leader appear from somewhere?" she asked as Mr. Bowser walked across the floor with the stride of a Roman senator.

"He has appeared, Mrs. Bowser," were the fateful words that fell from his lips as he came to a halt.

"And his name is—is"—

"Woman, are you a dolt? The man who will lead the world to peace is named Bowser, and he stands before you Samuel Bowser. Yes, by thunder, I am the man, and I shall begin my peace campaign within half an hour."

"But how are you going to work it?" was asked.

"As easy as grease. Heretofore the peace movement has been nothing but to beg of the powers at war to throw away their rifles and cannon and go home and be good fellows. I said the people had begged this; now let them demand it. Let them declare that if this demand is not complied with they will rise in their might and sweep the warring powers into a sea red with their vile blood. We don't want any more bragging or pleading, Mrs. Bowser. We want a demand, and we want it in such tones as will ring twice around the earth before their echoes are lost. We went a leader who will incite the people to make such a demand. It is beyond my comprehension why the step was not taken weeks and months ago."

"But it is to be taken at last?" queried Mrs. Bowser.

"It is. I am going out this evening for signers to a paper demanding that the war at all points shall cease within a week. I will get signers by the thousands. Tomorrow my new move will be telegraphed to every nook and corner of the land, and the sounds of a million people rushing to sign their names will be like the flapping winds of a tornado."

Mrs. Bowser could have found fault with Mr. Bowser's phraseology, but she could not pick a single flaw in his oratory. When he had closed he gave her a stiff bow and walked out into the hall and put on his overcoat and hat and passed out. When the sounds of his footsteps crushing the snow had died away a woman and a cat exchanged smiles and nods. They did not speak, but they understood each other. They also understood Mr. Bowser. They had passed through such scenes scores if not hundreds of times and had lived to see him return to normal condition. That he would do so now in a day or two was not to be doubted.

Mr. Bowser's first call in the interest of peace was on his family druggist. A paper demanding that all armies be disbanded right off quick was produced and laid before the man of drugs. He perused it with a sad smile and handed it back with a long sigh and the remark:

"Bowser, you ought to have an operation performed on your head—you really had. Bring in the paper demanding that Mars quit shining at us on clear nights, and I will sign it twice over." Without a protest and with a dignity that was beautiful to behold Mr. Bowser walked out, and his next stop was at his grocer's. The rush of trade was over for the day, and the grocer had lingered behind to paste fresh labels on his last year's flyspecked fruit cans. He took the paper in a careless way and read a few lines of it and handed it back.

"Sir, will you sign?" asked Mr. Bowser.

"I think not," was the reply. "I can't afford to do anything to further hurt my trade."

"But, man, this is a demand on the part of the people that war cease at once!"

"Yes, I see it is."

"And yet you hesitate to sign!"

"But, you see, my prices are all fixed and peace would knock them all to pieces. Of course, war is a horrible thing, but so is selling goods at less than 30 per cent profit."

"Sir, you are a scoundrel of the deepest dye!" exclaimed Mr. Bowser, as he walked out and made a call upon the undertaker on the corner. The solemn faced man came forward with a look of sympathy on his face, and there were tears in his voice as he asked:

"Mr. Bowser, has Mrs. Bowser passed away?"

"Not by a darned sight!" was the reply. "Mrs. Bowser will probably live for forty years yet."

"But you didn't come in here to try and sell me a piece of real estate?" was the reproachful inquiry.

"No: I didn't. I have a paper here for you to sign. It is a demand that the war cease at once, and it is a demand that must be granted or there will be such a row in this old world that mountains will fall into valleys."

"I can't sign no such paper," said the undertaker, with a shake of the head

"But why? You don't want the killing to go on, do you?"

"Well—er—you see, Mr. Bowser, my business is associated with death no matter in what form it comes. I don't rejoice at the slaughter in Europe, but you see it has given the undertakers over there a great boom, and I shouldn't want to interfere. It is the ethics of our profession not to interfere with each other. Your demand for peace is all right coming from you, Mr. Bowser, but it would surely get me into trouble if it was known that I took an active part in the affair. I am sorry that Mrs. Bowser has not passed away—that is, I am sorry—I am sorry"—

Mr. Bowser crossed the street to a pool room. There were three tables going at once and about twenty people present. The bartender came forward and asked what Mr. Bowser would take for his. In reply the demand for peace was produced and laid on the bar. It was read, and what was said and done about a minute afterward was apparent to Mrs. Bowser when Mr. Bowser reached home with a black eye and his coat collar hanging by one end.

"Did you end the war?" she softly asked without a sarcastic note in her voice

In reply he pointed to his black eye.

"Are not the people ready to demand peace?"

Mr. Bowser pointed to his hanging coat collar.

"Are you not the leader for the emergency?"

"Woman!" shouted Mr. Bowser at the top of his voice, but no further words came. It was not the time for them. There were too many motions galloping through his soul. He sat down before the fire and gazed into the flickering flames, and by and by a tear sprang to his right eye and rolled down his cheek. Mr. Bowser had tried to the world a great service, and the grateful world had blackened his and torn his clothes, and he could blame Mrs. Bowser for it and go to happy.

CHILD'S SEVERE STOMACH TROUBLE

Harriston, Ont., Father says Dr. Cassell's Tablets Saved his Child's Life.

Mr Corby, Harriston P.O., Ont., writes: "Our little girl was weak from birth, and though we tried doctors' medicine and other things she got no better. HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

THE BABY'S STOOLS.

THESE ARE VERY IMPORTANT. A well baby has well-digested movements. Undigested movements are often the first sign of illness. Take note of:—

The number of movements in twenty-four hours.

The color.
The size.
Whether soft or formed.
The odor.
The presence of anything unusual.
The change in food produces a change in the movements.

Meconium.

During the first forty-eight hours the baby's movements are dark greenish brown and very sticky.

Breast Milk.

A baby fed on breast-milk has usually three or four medium-sized movements in the twenty-four hours. They are bright golden yellow, soft, and not formed. They smell a little sour.

Cow's Milk.

A cow's-milk-fed baby has usually fewer movements than a breast-fed baby, and may have but one in the twenty-four hours. The movements are much firmer than those of the breast-fed baby and are often formed. They are a lighter yellow and not golden, and the odor is often a little cheesy.

Skimmed Milk.

A baby fed on skimmed milk, has smooth-formed well-digested movements, dark brown and often with a distinctly foul, cheesy odor.

Whey.

A baby fed on whey has usually more frequent movements than one fed on full milk. The appearance of the movements are otherwise the same.

Buttermilk.

A baby fed on buttermilk has dark brown, smooth, salve-like movements with a peculiar acid odor.

Malt Sugar.

When malt sugar is used in the formula instead of sugar of milk, the movements become a darker brown, frequently have a rather acid odor, are smaller and somewhat softer.

Starch.

When starch is added to the food as in barley water, gruel, etc., the movements become a dark brown and are shiny in color, somewhat like mucus.

Mixed Diet.

Where food other than milk is added to the diet, the movements lose their infantile appearance and begin to assume the adult appearance and character. They are usually two a day: dark brown and formed. When vegetables are added the movements contain fibres and are less compact. There is considerable variation from day to day, according to the kind of food eaten.

Changes in the movements other than those already mentioned usually indicate some form of indigestion. If they depart from the normal, consult your doctor and be able to tell him all about the appearance of the movements.

Color.

The first appearance of the movements should be noted. Ordinary stools may turn green on standing, even if they were normal when passed. This is due to the action of the air on the contained bile and does not indicate indigestion. A movement which is green when passed or which is very light colored should be called to the attention of the physician. A normal movement which leaves a pink stain on the diaper usually means that the baby requires more water in his diet.

Irritating.

Some times the movements are frothy and very irritating to the baby's buttocks. This means as a rule that the baby is getting too much sugar.

Curds.

If curds are seen in the movement they may, if fine, white, and soft, and which can be flattened out when squeezed, mean too much cream (fat) in the diet. A hard, dry crumbling movement usually means too much cream. Hard tough, bean-like substances which are rather brittle and break when squeezed, mean that the proteid in the milk is not being fully digested. Sometimes this needs no attention, sometimes the addition of barley-water or lime-water is required. Ask the doctor.

Canada and the Cost of Living.

Figures compiled by the Department of Labor show that Canada is faring better than most nations in the matter of the cost of living. Since the war began the price of food in the Dominion has gone up about 75 per cent. In Britain, however, prices have risen about 87 per cent.; in Germany about 250 per cent.; in Austria, 300 per cent.; in Norway, Denmark, and Sweden about 200 per cent.; in the United States about 90 per cent. According to figures just issued by the United States Labor Bureau, the cost of table necessities in the Republic to the south has increased nearly 50 per cent. within the past six months, which advance is considerably greater than in Canada. Foodstuffs such as meats, potatoes, and other vegetables of common use are higher in price in most American cities to-day than in either Montreal, Winnipeg, or Toronto. The advance in potatoes alone in New York City has been nearly 200 per cent. since the beginning of the year. Lack of production and huge shipments to belligerent countries are given as the causes. Production and still more production would seem to be the only solution of the situation.

EX-ENVOY'S LADY

American Born Wife of Former German Ambassador.

EXPATRIATED BY DIPLOMACY.

The Break In the Relations Between Germany and the United States Has Necessitated the Countess von Bernstorff Leaving the Land of Her Birth and Many Washington Friends.

As far as is known, Countess von Bernstorff is the only American woman married to a German diplomat, and the fact is a strong reminder at this time of the desire of Kaiser Wilhelm in sending Count von Bernstorff to Washington in 1908 to strengthen the bonds of friendship between the United States and Germany.

Before her marriage to the count on Nov. 14, 1887, Countess von Bernstorff was a Miss Jeanne Luckemeyer of New York. She is a woman of gracious personality and before the war was one of the most popular hostesses in the diplomatic set in Washington. When the war broke out she was visiting in Berlin, and it was not until last fall that she was able to rejoin her husband in Washington.

COUNTESS VON BERNSTORFF.

The countess leaves many warm friends in her social circle at the capital, who will sincerely regret her absence.

MEDICINAL GARDENS.

What the Commonest Vegetables Do For Your Liver.

Every vegetable garden is a medicine chest recognized by physicians as of considerable value in the treatment of diseases. Onions, for example, contain sulphur oil and are recommended for insomnia and as an aid to gastric digestion. They also help to allay rheumatic pains.

Turnips and parsnips have peculiar oily principles which are of value as an aperient and diuretic. They are also claimed to be good for coughs and hoarseness. Carrots are useful for correcting derangements of the liver. They are excellent as a dressing for painful wounds and swellings.

The tomato exercises medicinal effects not completely explained by the presence of alkaline salts. There is a principle present which, in a concentrated state, produces salivation and a free stimulation of the liver.

Satin Hats.

The type of satin hat that dominates in the smart shops is made of black satin, with so small a headband that it is merely a ribbon and so large a brim that it eclipses the crown. This brim convolutes around the head in a series of curves and irregular lines. If it were not made by an expert it would be utterly impossible for any woman to wear. Every line of it must be nicely calculated to the fraction of an inch so that the face beneath will appear at its best.

Rarely is there a touch of trimming on turbans, but the introduction of two flaunting, bright wings in front of a black satin turban gives us a new idea—wings are evidently coming back to fashion, and one goes up and one goes down.

Avalanche of Pockets.

Pockets started to be the fashion a couple of seasons ago! No one looked, however, for the avalanche of pockets which seem to have tumbled on to dresses for all times of day. On sport coats and dresses they are so large that they are really draped on to the sides of the garment. They are mostly patch pockets, the tops adorned with a narrow fur band. In one or two models the whole pocket is of fur like the collar and cuffs.

New Millinery.

Among the new features for the south are suede finished felts combined with lisere, tagal straws embroidered or braided with soutache, and cottons and silks printed or embroidered in Paisley. East Indian and Roumanian designs and colors. These novelty straws and fabrics are used in conjunction with the plain straws, including coconut effects, lisere and Italian hemp.

TURKS ARE NOW ANXIOUS TO TURN ON THE GERMAN AND THEIR WAR LEADERS

Would Sooner be an Englishman Than a German at Present.

"TO sum up this question," says Graham Hollister in the course of an article in The New York Sun, "I would much prefer to be an Englishman in Turkey at the present time than I would to be a German." This remark he makes in the course of an article designed to give the outside world an idea of the conditions existing in Turkey, and in view of the news that the Russian and British forces have effected a junction in Mesopotamia Mr. Hollister's views are of particular interest, for he has been in Turkey until quite recently. In his opinion the Turkish empire is seething with revolt against the German officers and drill masters, as well as against the Young Turks, who have steered their country into this war. Not more than one Turk out of a hundred knows what he is fighting for, and not more than one out of a thousand can give adequate reasons for Turkey having joined in the melee as an ally of Germany. Nevertheless, what President Wilson has called "a little group of wilful men," headed by Enver Pasha, has controlled Turkey in the crisis, and that her soldiers have fought well nobody doubts. Nevertheless, Mr. Hollister has the idea that there may be a change of front in Turkey at any moment.

He does not suggest that the movement will come from the people, but seems to be of opinion that it may originate with the Young Turks. If Enver Pasha and his associates come to the conclusion that Germany will lose this war, which in Turkey is considered to be a war between England and Germany, there is reason to believe that they will quit Germany and try to make terms with the Entente. In a discussion with an intelligent Turkish officer the American correspondent pointed out that Turkey was bound to be a loser; if England wins Turkey will be divided; if Germany wins she will become virtually a province of Germany. The officer admitted that this was true if Turkey remained in the war until the end; but he thought that she might find a golden moment to quit, or even to turn against the Teutons and thus save much of her power and her dominions. It is not likely that the Entente will make any offer to Turkey, but the fact that she is looking to them indicates her position.

Graft, too, is rampant in Turkey. Exemptions from military service are easily bought. The correspondent speaks of cases within his knowledge in which absolutely unqualified citizens have purchased doctor's certificates, not of exemption, but of qualification as doctors. Thus, they are enabled to draw doctor's pay. Those who have factories which they wish to keep going can make a payment to the local military chief and retain their workmen. While the censorship in Turkey is strict, news circulates through the country, and the Turks, especially the educated ones, are not in ignorance of what is happening. The only thing lacking for a first-class revolution is a leader. The Turks realize that they cannot win, that they have as much to lose by a German victory as by a British victory. They hate the Germans, and after peace is declared there are hundreds of German officers and officials who will never reach home alive.

ENVER PASHA

Large Estates.

The Duke of Athol has just died, leaving an estate of 202,000 acres in the Scottish Highlands of Perthshire. At 640 acres to the square mile, this is over 315 square miles. It is not all fertile land, however, but is mountain and valley, with intervening sections of farm land, towns, and villages, all maintaining the old-time feudal loyalty to the lord of the manor. Lord Masham, whose death was announced recently, was the owner of an estate of 35,000 acres, or about 55 square miles. The still more recent death of the Duke of Norfolk calls attention to his ownership of Arundel Castle, which dates from the time of King Alfred, who mentioned it in his will, and to the annual income from his large estates of $1,500,000 a year. Although the United Kingdom is comparatively small in extent of territory, it has more of these vast properties than any country in Europe or the world.

Codfish Sink a Schooner.

"Codfish Sank Big Schooner" was the title of a news item of recent date, which besides being most unusual, seems to open up a new method of sinking wooden ships of the nations at war at a trifling cost compared with the present $5,000 to $10,000 torpedoes used by submarines and destroyers.

The schooner Ponbook, under a captain and crew of seven men, left St. John, N.B., for the Azores, with a cargo of dried codfish, explains the Popular Science Monthly. Soon afterward she ran into a heavy sea and shipped considerable water. The dry codfish absorbed this like a sponge, and it was but a couple of days before the expansive pressure of the swelled codfish had forced open the seams of the vessel's planking so that the water began to seep in, little by little, until the ship was beyond saving and had to be abandoned.

Canadian Pulp Industry.

The progress that Canada is making toward becoming the world's centre for the manufacture of pulp and paper is indicated in figures recently published by the Department of Trade and Commerce. For the year ended July, 1916, the exports of paper amounted to $21,678,868, of which 88 per cent. went to the United States and 5.2 per cent. to the United Kingdom. This total is an increase of 31 per cent. over the figures for the year previous. The first export shipment of paper from Canada was made in 1892. The total exports for 1902 were but $24,000 and for 1913 only $6,327,000.

The total exports of paper, pulp, and pulpwood for the year ended July, 1916, were $40,865,266, of which the United States received 87 per cent and the United Kingdom 6 per cent. The increase over the previous year was 27 per cent. On the other hand, Canada imported, during the year ended July, 1916, $6,327,398 worth of paper and manufactures of paper.

The foregoing facts, in conjunction with the use by Canadian pulp and paper mills of nearly $9,500,000 worth of pulpwood, indicate the tremendous drain upon Canadian pulpwood resources, according to a statement issued by the conservation commission. This drain is likely to increase rather than diminish, in view of the rapid depletion of accessible supplies of timber suitable for pulpwood in the United States.

If this great source of national wealth is to be perpetuated, much more stringent measures than in the past must be taken to prevent destruction by fire and to insure the restocking to valuable species of cutover and burned-over areas.—Monetary Times.

Getting More Orders.

The slacking up of munitions orders for the United States, which has been apparent for some time, gets a partial explanation in the increasing activity in munitionns manufacture in Canada. Operations here are now conducted under the sole authority of the British Minister of Munitions without responsibility of any kind to the Canadian Government. It is stated as a fact that Canada is now manufacturing more munitions than any other country in the world, except Germany, prior to the war. Munitions factories are located in every province, except Prince Edward Island, but the component parts of shells are largely supplied by the United States. In addition to existing establishments, the British Government has provided for the expenditure of many millions on new munition plants. There is every indication that this business will be expended to its utmost extent, the limit depending largely upon Canada's power to provide credits from which the British Government would pay. The Minister of Finance not only expects this to be done, but looks for fresh subscriptions to future loans which would automatically draw further war orders from Great Britain and her allies.

IS TAXATION DRIVING FARMERS OFF THE LAND?

Mr. R. R. Hall Delivers Interesting Address in Otonabee Chapter Lecture Course.

In the lecture course given by the Otonabee Chapter I. O. D. E., at the Public Library, Saturday afternoon, Mr. R. R. Hall gave an interesting and instructive address on "Canada's Trade with the Allies."

Canada has four great natural resources of wealth, in her farming lands, said Mr. Hall, in her forests, in her fisheries, and in her mines, and from the raw products of these to their most complete manufactured state will be found the great and increasing variety of our export trade with the Allies. The number of our Allies are increasing from month to month, and it is to be hoped that before the conclusion of the war they will include every nation that loves justice and freedom.

Our greatest wealth lies in our farming lands, and the highest development of these should receive our first consideration. Taking the farming industry of the older parts of the Province of Ontario, prior to 181 Ontario increased very rapidly in her rural population, and the products of her farms down to 1871 showed marked and rapid increases from year to year. Since then a marked change has taken place.

If we compare the rural population of the older parts of Ontario in 1911 with 1871 we will find that our rural population during this 10 years has decreased over one hundred thousand souls, and that notwithstanding increased railway facilities, great improvements in every variety of agricultural implements, and ever increasing home markets.

During the same 40 years the population of our cities and towns have increased over one million souls. There must be some great economic cause. Does our system of taxation press down unduly upon the farmer? Prior to 1871 our customs tariff ranged from free admission to ten per cent., and today it ranges from a small fraction of free goods to forty-two and one-half per cent. of the value of every import that the farmer must use in the course of his farming operations.

Many intelligent farmers contend that the heavy duty they are compelled to pay on every article they touch on the farm makes farming unprofitable, and hence we find our educated Guelph College graduate with all his knowlege of improved farming methods does not put it to use by returning to the farm.

To discuss this phase of the question further would tread on controversial ground, and hence, said said the speaker, he preferred to leave the matter for investigation by his hearers.

Our forests are a great source of wealth. We marvel at the ignorance and stupidity of the North American Indian, who "threw a pearl away richer than all his tribe," yet from one end of Canada to the other we find the Canadian people burning, wasting, and destroying our timber and forests as if they were of no value whatever either for home or foreign demand.

Are we conserving our fisheries as we should? We have the greatest fresh and salt water fisheries in the world. Are we making the best use of them as a great source of our national wealth?. The mineral wealth of Canada is still unknown. Enough is known to prove that she stands among the great mineral producing nations. Her nickle is sought by every nation. Are we making the best use of our opportunities?

Our future trade with our Allies must be great. Before the war little Belgium imported more from Canada than did either France or Japan, three times as much as Italy, over four times as much as Russia, and Great Britain imported fourteen times as much from Canada as all European and Asiatic allies combined. Our great neighbor to the south, however, has always been our greatest customer. Nature intended that our trade should flow from north to south across the whole four thousand miles of our international boundry.

The ingenuity of both people for 50 years has been against the course of nature, and accordingly we find that during this last fifty years both people have built railways and canals, and have erected tariff walls against each other to force trade from east to west and not from north to south. The north-west farmer is very bitter against the erection and maintenance of these tariff walls. Here, again, we are on controversial ground. It is for you to enquire and determine what is in the best interest of Canada.

A more thorough knowledge of both English and French languages would greatly assist Canada in developing and extending her European trade. She could more readily conduct her correspondence, learn the wants and requirements of foreign markets, introduce her goods more effectively, and enjoy greater trade by meeting her European customer and discussing his requirements in a language he understands.

The increasing ability to speak both languages by both French and English Canadians would promote harmony and goodwill at home, produce a truly united spirit, and contribute to the prosperity of all.

A cordial vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Hall for his address.

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

A GREAT VICTORY

At one time the fitting of eyes with glasses that were best suited to give the best aid to defective eyesight was largely a matter of guesswork. It resulted in a great deal of dissatisfaction and worry, but with Dr. Fowler's modern optical equipment, the diagnosis resulting from the test is absolutely correct, and efficient service is guaranteed. Science has triumphed over haphazard methods to a remarkable degree.

REPULPING PAPER

How White Paper Can be Reproduced Again by Invention

An inventor in the United States has discovered a means of utilizing a waste digester liquor for removing ink and color from waste news and without discoloring the fibre, so that the paper may be repulped. "I have discovered," he says, "that by subjecting waste print paper, either in a pulped state or in the whole, to the action of spent digester liquors, under any temperature, for the space of one hours or more, then washing the pulp with fresh water, all ink or coloring matter that may be in the paper will be entirely removed, and without discoloring the fibres of the mechanical wood pulp, leaving the same fit to be re-made into white apper. If the waste paper be first pulped, it may be charged into a beater vat filled with either of these spent digester liquors, and by the action of the beating engine all ink or coloring matter will be entirely freed from the pulp. The solvent may then be drained off and the pulp washed in fresh water, leaving the same in a state to be remade into white paper."

OBITUARY

ROBERT WETHERHEAD

Robert Wetherhead died at the family residence, 492 Aylmer Street, last evening after an illness of about two weeks. He was born in Scotland about 78 years ago, but for 50 years had lived in Peterborough. He is survived by three children, Mrs. William Green, 492 Aylmer Street, Mrs. J. Fredenburg, 302 Aylmer St., and William Weatherhead, Brandon, Man.

The funeral will be held on Tuesday afternoon, at half-past two, to the Little Lake Cemetery. Funeral service by Rev. H. Pogue, of the St. Paul's Church, at 2 p.m.

MARY CROWLEY.

Mary Crowley died at the family residence, 521 Cedar street, this morning. She had been ill for about six months.

She is survived by one sister, Miss Ellen Crowley, and two brothers, William of Chicago and John of Otonabee.

The funeral will be held from the family residence Wednesday morning to St. Peter's Church and cemetery.

WILL WORSHIP AT ST. JAMES'

ORANGEMEN ACCEPT INVITATION TO ATTEND THAT CHURCH.

District Loyal Orange Lodge No. 3 held their annual meeting on Tuesday, April 10th, in the Orange Hall George Street, Bro. Luffman, D. M., was in the chair in the absence of Bro. Williamson, W. M. After a good deal of business was gone through there was a letter read from the officials of St. James' Church asking them to come and worship with them this year for their annual church parade, which was accepted; and it was decided that only a badge be worn by all members for the church parade.

Bro. J. B. McWilliams was then asked to say a few words for the welfare of the order, which he did by giving the members a brief history of the Orange Order in Peterborough, and then Bro. Williamson gave the report of the Grand Lodge held at Belleville a few days ago. He reported that everywhere the Orange Order was shewing marked increase notwithstanding so many of the members being in the King's uniform. The meeting was then closed by singing "God save the King."

P.C. BLADE RECEIVES LETTER FROM CORPORAL W. MILLER

P. C. Blade has received the following letter from Corp'l W. Miller, of the 93rd Battalion, who is now with B Company of the 4th Bn. and has likely been in at the Vimy Ridge victory:

March 15th, 1917.

Dear Art:

I saw George the other day and he told me you would like a few lines, so will do my best. Well, I can't tell you all I have seen, as it wouldn't be very much in the line of fighting. We have spent a winter in the trenches, though, and suffered a few hardships, but still I am fit and feel pretty good. Was never sick except for a couple of days, and that was just a cold. I saw a few Fritzes one day and had a good shot at them from about 150 yards, and they dropped. Next day they sent back about ten big trench minnies and I put in a very uncomfortable half hour. I was out on a post where we had to stay all day until sundown. Have only missed one six-day trip in the trenches since we got out here, when our platoon was out for a special course for a couple of weeks.

It sure is a corker to spend a winter in the trenches. I was made a corporal Dec. 29, two months after we joined our battalion. Our draft have done well in this battalion. Couldn't begin to tell you what it is like out here because you can't imagine it, and a lot of these fellows who tell you a lot of stuff haven't seen as much as I have, which is practically nothing.

I have seen a couple of aircraft fights and a gas attack, but they are small things out here. But doubtless we will se enough soon by the way things are going. I hope it comes soon so we can get home.

I'll be happy if I can get back after this fun is ended. Tom is coming over. The last letter from him reached me about six weeks ago. We have been through a few ruined places, and they are like the pictures you see in the papers. Fritz surely made a mess of things once, but his is coming soon.

Doug. Loomis is well, also Hank O'Heron. The former is a corporal and the latter a sergeant. George doesn't look so well; guess he told you he was sick. It's pretty hard for a fellow to get away. One has to be very nearly dead now to do so. Everything is about the big push out here. We get good grub so we won't suffer. We have a lot of fun among ourselves. The different people and their various personalities are most interesting, and there are some very funny ones in the army. I saw a bunch of batterymen a few days ago. They are the first who came out in the 4th Battery. They have had a good long stay.

Give my regards to all, with best of luck to yourself.

Yours truly,
JIDDY MILLER.

Tump in the Trenches.

It is a far call from the trenches to the moose trails of Canada, and yet, as some unintelligent person is bound to remark, "it's a small world after all!"

From the British front in France comes this tale of Canadian woodsmen masquerading for the time being as "Tommies."

An attack was planned to gain an important position, but so impassable were the roads with winter mud that the ordinary means of transportation were out of the question. The attack could not succeed without ammunition, and the ammunition had to be carried to the front.

Up rose the Canadians to meet the situation. Trappers, guides, and sportsmen—they all knew the trick of the tump. Three tump companies were formed and in single file an endless chain of Tommies carried the needed gun fodder on their backs over the roads which the army mules were useless on. The attack went through on schedule to a successful termination.

All of which goes to show just how much an outdoor training may be of service at times.—Outing.

MANITOBA'S MINES.

Province Possesses Much Mineral Wealth to Be Developed.

Manitoba is known to the outside world only as a grain producer, but it has much mineral wealth, which means potential industrial importance if the vast lignite bed of the Canadian West can be commercially exploited.

"There is no doubt that Manitoba is getting into the mining field," says Prof. R. C. Wallace, of the Department of Geology of the University of Manitoba, "but we cannot tell much about it in figures yet."

Prof. Wallace investigated Manitoba's mineral resources for the Provincial Public Utilities Commission. Discussing the result of this investigation Prof. Wallace said:

"Our actual production thus far is almost entirely in non-metallic minerals, aggregating $2,500,000 to $3,000,000 a year. Clay products come first, then gypsum. We have enough gypsum to supply the Canadian West for one hundred years. Gypsum is a finishing product for buildings, and building has been paralysed by the war. The gypsum lands are around Gypsumville in north-west Manitoba, owned by private Canadian capital.

"As for metals, I believe that Northern Manitoba will develop some such surprises as Northern Ontario did. The topography and geology are similar in the two sections. There is not much reason to assume mineral resources in the two other Prairie Provinces, except coal, in which they abound.

"Only two-fifths of Manitoba is agricultural land. The other three-fifths has to depend on minerals, timber, and fisheries. Manitoba's north country, which has the minerals, is new. During the last eighteen months some deposits of mixed sulphide have been discovered north of the Pas, on the Hudson Bay Railway, and an American company has just begun to export it—the Tonopah Co. of Nevada, which is shipping some very high-grade ore to the smelter at Trail, B.C.

"These ores contain copper, lead, and zinc, with values in gold and silver, which are smelted into matte. The Tonopah Co. ships the ore. In the case of the big area the copper values are low, but the gold values reasonably high.

"All natural resources of the Prairie Provinces remain in the hands of the Dominion, including the land, except what was granted to the Canadian Pacific and what the Hudson Bay Co. retained.

"The fuel question is and will be the difficult question for Winnipeg and our West, this side of Eastern Saskatchewan, which has a fairly large field of lignite. Manitoba has some, too, but it is very low grade. Manitoba's deposits are estimated at only 160,000,000 tons, whereas Alberta has a much greater coal area than Saskatchewan, or about one-thirteenth of the coal supply of the world, and has been producing 6,000,000 to 8,000,000 tons a year.

"Winnipeg and its near territory get their coal from Pennsylvania. What we want is a method of briquetting our soft coals, so that they can be carried economically. We have so much cheap electrical power that if we can extensively substitute it for coal and also utilize western coals our industrial future will be assured.

"Our power is very cheap—three cents per kilowatt hour for domestic use and about one-half as much for industrial use. Water powers are located very conveniently for this city."

Prof. Wallace believes that Alberta has a large amount of oil, although the Calgary oil boom proved a "fake," which cost Canadians dearly.

Art in Canada.

Although the Parliamentarians have taken possession of the Royal Victoria Museum and have dispossessed Canada's National Art Gallery, good use in the meantime is being made of the pictures which form part of the display. Loan exhibitions are held or will be held soon in Halifax, Sherbrooke, Hamilton, Winnipeg, and Moose Jaw. This is in line with the policy of the directors to inaugurate a system of loan exhibitions to reputable art societies. Bodies in Canada having proper facilities for their exhibition could borrow from twenty to thirty pictures a year with the option of renewal or exchange at the end of a year.

Writing on the work of the Gallery, Mr. Eric Brown, director, says: "It may perhaps not be yet generally known that the National Gallery presents an annual travelling scholarship of one thousand dollars ($1,000), awarded by the council of the Royal Canadian Academy at their annual exhibition, to the most promising young artist of the year. The scholarship was awarded in November last for the third year in succession, although owing to the war the successful artists have not made use of it, as its conditions necessitate residence in certain art centres of Europe which are closed owing to the war.

"There is developing in Canada a school of decorative landscape painting entirely original and indigenous and quite unparalleled on this continent. With proper appreciation and encouragement it should become one of our most valuable national assets, for there is no surer sign of the spiritual growth of nations than the condition of their art."

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

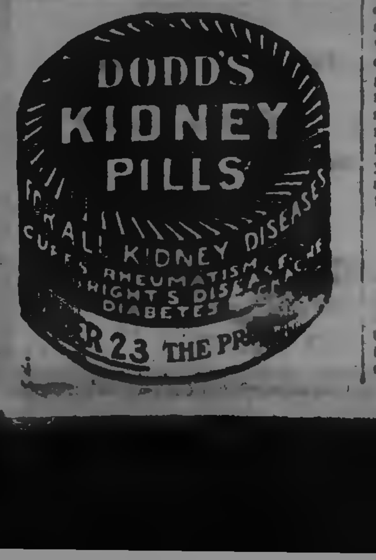
WHERE DOGS ARE HIRED

Women of Fashion Like to be Seen With Good Dogs

A dealer in an American city has in his store window a sign that reads. "Dogs let on hire by day, week, or hour. Rates reasonable." A man asked the dealer the significance of the sign. "Oh, it means just what it says," the dealer said. "People like to hire dogs now and then, the same as they like to hire horses or pianos. Do you see that handsome Russian wolfhound over there in the corner? Well, he is hired out a good deal by young women who are going to be photographed. A lot of women of fashion have had their pictures taken of late with Russian wolfhounds at their side. That has set a fashion.

Do you know what a wolfhound like Pete there is worth? Well, sir, he is worth $400 or $500. And do you know what he can be hired for a couple of hours for? He can be hired for $1. Hence he is hired often. He is in great demand. Apart from lending dogs for photographic purposes, I let them for promenades. Young ladies visiting the city like to have a bull dog or an Irish terrier to walk down the street with. A good dog on a morning's walk gives a young woman distinction, and it is now possible for the girl to achieve this distinction for [illegible]

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS



SOLDIER'S POCKET BOOK

A Compact Volume of Everything a Soldier Should Know

The "Field Service Pocket Book," prepared by the General Staff of the War Office, is a marvellous 25 cents' worth, which is all it costs. How it is done for the money is really extraordinary, since it runs to nearly 300 closely printed pages, embellished with colored plates and diagrams, and is neatly bound in canvas boards. Nothing seems to be missing, for the long list of subjects treated herein ranges over such diverse matters as aircraft, astronomy, billeting, camping, censorship, ciphers, cooking, discipline, entrenching, espionage, law, pay, railways, rations, signalling, sketching, strategy, tactics, topography, and the like. Thus, if one wants to know how to cure snake bite, to calculate the velocity of a river, to load a baggage wagon, to destroy a bridge, to select a camping ground, to march by compass, to decode a cipher message, to water horses, to change foreign money, to deal with military offences, or to make tough meat tender, one has only to consult its enlightening pages. They will not be found wanting.

Real Zeppelin Outrage

It is the morning after a Zeppelin raid in a north of England town. A number of women are in earnest discussion outside a certain house. There are no signs of disagreement amongst them. On the contrary, it is quite evident that the central figure of the group has the others in entire agreement with her. "An' I axes yeh again," she is saying, amidst sympathetic murmurs, "can anyone say it's done fair? T' bomb dropped in our back yard, but bobby's gon and took it away; never even give me a note for it. An' wot I sez is, it's our bomb."

To Commemorate Event

Inhabitants of an Essex village in which a Zeppelin came down in flames [illegible] to erect a tablet in the parish [illegible] commemorating the event and the escape of the residents. The tablet may be made of aluminum from the Zeppelin.

LEATHER FROM MAMMALS

Skins of Sea Monsters a Valuable Asset

When carefully prepared, seal leather has a greater strength and durability in proportion to its weight than almost any other on the market, and on account of its choice and attractive grain is in demand for such articles as card cases, pocketbooks, shopping bags, etc.

Leather made from walrus skins was formerly used for the rigging of vessels, and was also employed to protect the rigging from chafing. Later it came into use by the silversmiths and manufacturers of bright metal objects for removing marks and scratches and to polish fine metal surfaces.

For the manufacture of small articles there is nothing that can compare with the skin of the porpoise in the way of wear, tractility, strength and suppleness. A piece of porpoise leather a foot square can be easily drawn out to a foot and a third in length, a feature that few other leathers possess. This makes it especially good for shoemaking, for in whatever direction the foot is thrust by the weight of the body the leather adapts itself to that shape. Being accordingly durable, it will outlast two or three calf leather soles. Another recommendation apparent when it becomes soft is the manner in which it absorbs water but allows no moisture to penetrate it.

REASONS WHY WE SHAVE

Political Significance at Napoleon's Downfall

It is difficult to find any practical reason why male servants should be allowed to grow hair on the cheek, but not on the lip or chin; soldiers on the lip, but not on the cheek or chin; sailors, again, if on the lip, then compulsorily on both cheeks and chin. Shaving was practiced in the New World before that was discovered by Europeans, and the Mexican barbers shaved their customers with flakes of volcanic glass, each piece as it lost its edge being flung away and a new one applied.

A curious instance of political significance in the mode of shaving may be remembered by some people. It was after the downfall of Napoleon III., when the French army ceased to be Imperial and became Republican that a general order was issued that all military chins were to be shaved, and forthwith the familiar characteristic "Imperial" disappeared from 500,000 chins. For many years before the Crimean War the moustache in England was the distinguishing badge of the cavalry; it was prohibited in the infantry, and, as for the civilian who braved public opinion by sporting it, he was looked on either as an artist, an eccentric, or as wishing to pass for a Hussar.

MOUSE AS ENGINEER

Nature Often Teaches Ingenious Lessons to Man

A field mouse which had fallen into a hole dug to receive a telegraph pole displayed ingenuity and perseverance in affecting its escape. The first hour or so he ran round the bottom of the hole trying to find some means of escape, but could not climb out. Then he settled down to business. He began steadily and systematically to dig a spiral groove round and round the inner surface of the hole, with a uniformly ascending grade. He worked night and day, and as he got farther from the bottom, he dug little pockets where he could either lie or sit and rest. The telegraph workers, who were curious to know how he would escape, supplied the little engineer with food. At the end of two weeks the mouse struck a rock. For nearly a day he tried to get under, around, or over the obstruction, without success. With unflinching patience he reversed the spiral, and went on tunnelling his way in the opposite direction. At the end of four weeks he reached the top, and probably sped away to enjoy his well earned freedom.

IS LACQUER WARE DOOMED?

Some Interesting Facts About Japanese Art

The ancient Japanese art of lacquering is in danger of extinction, for the supply of lacquer is threatening to give out. Lacquer is made from the juice of the lacquer tree, or varnish tree. It forms a very hard surface, and stands heat to such an extent that the Japanese use lacquered vessels for hot drinks. They consume about a thousand tons of lacquer every year for all sorts of articles both for export and home use—work boxes, tables, fire screens, trays, breadbaskets, carriages, and musical instruments. Three-fourths of the lacquer comes from China, but so much has been used of late years that the demand exceeds the supply. The lacquer tree is something like an ash, and takes a good time to grow to maturity. The method by which the sap is handled is wasteful, it costs a great deal to get the varnish to a market, and the native exporters have the monopoly of it. These causes together account for the shortage of the supply.

Killed—40 Years After

An accident in 1877 caused the death of Ada Blanche, a Haggerston woman of sixty. At that time, when she was single, she was in a railway accident on the South end line, and had a piece of bone removed from the brain. For twenty years she was under treatment at a nervous hospital, and a silver plate was inserted in the skull. She had suffered from epileptic fits as a result of the injury, and died in one.

Origin of Wood Paving

Wood paving was first used in Russia, being introduced into England in 1836. Its great advantage is that of deadening to a certain extent the sound of the traffic that passes over it; its disadvantage that of becoming very slippery when wet.

CANADA EMPIRE FARM

Proposal For Reducing National Debt —Buy Lands

A London paper writes: Mr. Frewen sees great possibilities in the acquisition and ultimate sale by the State of farm lands in Western Canada. It is pointed out that certain lands in the United States, inferior in fertility to those in Western Canada, originally bought for nominal prices, have advanced to $100 per acre. It is suggested that there might be lands in Canada which could be bought from the Dominion Government at five dollars an acre, which twenty years hence, under proper development might realize $100 an acre. This would naturally depend upon the fertility of the soil, transportation facilities, proximity of elevators and markets. The fact that the United States will in future become a large purchaser of Canadian cereals, coupled with the fact that European wheat lands have suffered owing to the war, would exercise an important influence in these upward values. If these anticipations proved correct, then the purchase of 200,000,000 acres from the Dominion Government at five dollars an acre, re-sold twenty years later at $100, would redeem the whole of the national debt of $20,000,000,000. At the same time the Dominion would benefit by the attraction of a great body of immigrants of the land settlement type so much preferred.

X-RAY TO PROVE AGE

Trial in Criminal Court on Juvenile Proved by Ray

The physicians connected with the juvenile court of Cincinnati were assigned the unusual task of determining the age of a lad by the use of the X-ray, according to the Popular Mechanics Magazine. Under the laws of Ohio a boy 17 or younger, comes under the jurisdiction of the juvenile court, whereas one 18 or over would be tried, on a criminal charge, in the criminal court. The parents of the boy claimed that he was 17, while the physicians were strongly of opinion that he was 18 or older. To settle the question X-ray photographs were taken of the bones of his arms and lower limbs. It is a fact, well recognized by the medical profession, that in the transition from childhood to maturity these bones undergo a change that is quite distinct. The photographs in this case showed such a development of bony tissue as to prove conclusively that the boy was 18 years old or over, and consequently his case was turned over to the criminal court.

Strange Wish of Deceased

Strange directions were left in his will by Mr. Henry M. Blyth, of Westbourne-terrace W., London, and late of Mauritius. One direction was that after his death "a surgeon's knife should be inserted into his heart and remain there until cremation takes place." Another was that should he die in Mauritius his heart and lungs were to be removed from his body and sent to London for internment in the family vault.

SPEECH RECORD HELD BY CANADIAN SPEAKER

Twenty-six Hours' Speech Killed Bill in B.C. Legislature and Saved Settlers Their Lands

The longest speech on record is believed to have been made by Amor De Cosmos in the Legislature of British Columbia, when a measure was pending, the passing of which would take from many settlers their lands. De Cosmos was in a hopeless minority. The job had been held back till the eve of the close of the session. Unless legislation was taken before noon, on a given day, the Act of confiscation would fail. The day before the expiration of the limitation, De Cosmos got the floor about 10 a.m., and began his speech against the bill. Its friends cared little, for they supposed that by 1 or 2 o'clock he would be through and the bill could be put on its passage. One o'clock came and De Cosmos was speaking still—had not more than entered upon his subject; 2 o'clock he was saying: "In the second place." Three o'clock he produced a fearful bundle of evidence, and insisted on reading it.

Speak and "Kill the Bill"

The majority began to have a suspicion of the truth—he was to speak till next noon and "kill the bill." For a while they made merry over it, but as it came on to dusk they began to get alarmed. They tried interruptions, but soon abandoned them, because each afforded him a chance to digress and gain time. They tried to shout him down, but that gave a breathing space, and finally they settled down to watch the combat between strength of will and weakness of body. They gave no mercy, no adjournment for dinner, no chance to do more than to wet his lips with water, no wandering from his subject. Twilight darkened, the gas was lit, members slipped out to dinners in relays and returned to sleep in squads, but De Cosmos went on. The Speaker, to whom he was addressing himself, was alternately dozing, snoring, and trying to look wide awake.

Day Dawned; Speaker Held On

Day dawned and the majority went out in squads to wash and breakfast, and the speaker still held on. It cannot be said it was a very logical, eloquent or sustained speech; there were digressions, repetitions also. But still the speaker kept on, and at last noon came to a baffled majority, livid with rage and impotence, and a single man, who was triumphant, though his voice had sunk to a husky whisper, his eyes were almost shut and were bleared and bloodshot, his legs tottered under him, his baked lips were cracked and flaked with blood. De Cosmos had spoken twenty-six hours and saved the settlers their lands.

CANADA SHOWED WAY

Gifts to British Red Cross Made Good an Ontario Boast

The London newspapers contained reports of the meeting of the British Red Cross Society and the Order of St. John with respect to the collections of money made throughout the Empire on "Trafalgar Day." His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught presided, and Sir Robert Hudson, chairman of the committee on Finance, paid a gratifying tribute to the Province of Ontario, in the course of which he referred to the unique proclamation issued by Sir John Hendrie, and said the result had been that £400,000 of the total of £1,098,000 collected from all parts of the Empire, including the British Isles, had come from that province.

It is interesting to recall that the Lieutenant-Governor had expressed the belief, when Canada was asked to contribute to the British Red Cross Fund, that Toronto would set the pace for Ontario, Ontario for the Dominion, and the Dominion for the Empire. He was not disappointed and the people of Ontario were to be congratulated on standing first on the list of contributors.

RUSSIAN KINDEST OF FRIENDS TO CANANDIAN

"Gentle as Women," Writes Canadian —Their Self-Sacrifice When Prisoners—Fine Testimony

Pte. C. V. Coombe, No. 238, 8th Canadians, British interned prisoner, sent an interesting letter to a Winnipegger from Eiger hotel, Murren, Switzerland, in which he wrote: A pair of socks or mittens never come amiss to British prisoners in Germany. My own experience in Germany, however, was that I had about six times as many pairs as I could possibly hope to use. But there are always plenty of Russians and Serbians in direst need. At Lichtenhorst we often had visits from Russian working parties going out to farms, etc. These poor fellows, starved and beaten, often had not a pair of socks to their feet nor a shirt to their backs in the dead of winter. It was then that I, a man who am not super-religious, lifted my eyes to heaven and thanked the kindly powers which moved our people to send us these things in abundance.

Starved For Canadians

In all Germany I do not know of more deserving fellows than these same Russians. When our boys were first captured in April, 1915, the Russians, after seeing the starved and wretched state they were in, saved their bread rations and gave it to "the Canadians." When you remember that these "Russkies" themselves were more than half starved, you will appreciate the largeness of heart which made them stand around all day and hungrily look at the food that they were saving for their Canadian comrades. In the future whenever I meet a Russian I meet a friend, and my experience is the same as that of all my comrades. I have never yet heard a Canadian, or for that matter, a Britisher of any nationality, say anything except good of the Russians. These men are our constant good angels in bad times as well as in good. I have seen a Russian, sick himself, stay by the bed of a very sick Englishman the entire night through. There are not many Britishers who would do as much for their own compatriots.

Much Maligned Race

The Russian is essentially a religious man. His religion seems something like the religion of the Mohammedan in that he practices it very much in public. A Russian will seldom eat any food without first calling down the blessing of heaven upon it. He will seldom depart on a journey, even under the shadow of German bayonets, without first asking the blessing of heaven. And when a Britisher leaves a camp where his Russian friends are staying there is such a palaver of blessings and partings that one is rather glad to get away.

I know that this is very far from the average conception of the Russian. We commonly think of the ferocious Cossack as the representative Russian, but that opinion is very much in error. I have read of Russian barbarities and I have shuddered to think what would happen if Russia were ever to plant her foot firmly in German soil. And yet actual contact with the Russians leaves only a good impression on me. It is hard to think that men who act as they act in misfortune could act as the German press says they act when things are going well with them. The great mass of the Russians are as gentle as women, and it seems to me that when religious and political emancipation shall have ennobled their lives, broadened their visions and quickened their wits, we can look for great things from the civilization of these men who are our allies of to-day.

QUERIES FOR NEUTRALS

Clever Re-statement of the Case of the Entente Allies

The following was sent by "Armi Des Hommes" was published by the Boston Transcript: If a savage had broken into your neighbor's house and killed your neighbor. And if the brute had then attacked your neighbor's wife and daughters, committing bestial outrages upon them. And if you had gone to the rescue, though poorly prepared, and had fought the beast for over two years.

And if one of your other neighbors had done nothing to help, and had told his family that they must be absolutely neutral even in thought. And if this neutral neighbor had made every endeavor to get your customers away from you, while you were necessarily absent from your business.

And if at last you had succeeded in securing a strangle hold upon the assassin so that he suddenly became very anxious to escape with his booty. Then, if your neutral neighbor should send you a "note" stating that he thought you and the ravisher were fighting for the same objects.

And if he should ask you to give the murderer a written statement of your peace terms. And if the speculative friends of your neighbor's son-in-law should get the tip in time to raid the stock market and make it look like Belgium. And if the friend with whom you where fighting for your life should derive new hope and courage from your neighbor's intercession in his behalf.

Wouldn't you feel grateful to your neutral neighbor? And, wouldn't you consider him a man of rare tact and discernment? And, wouldn't you wish that people that were too proud to fight were also too proud to write? And, wouldn't the episode give you that happy, happy Christmas feeling?

Canadian Chaplain's Bravery

The Rev. William Robert Fountain Addison, V.C., Army Chaplain, was reported wounded. The official record of the deed for which he was awarded the Victoria Cross said in part: "By his splendid example and utter disregard of personal danger he encouraged the stretcher-bearers to go forward under heavy fire and collect the wounded." The Rev. Mr. Addison was, as a young man, for some time in a lumber camp in Canada.

CANADIAN'S BIG POST

Interview With Major Boyer, Returned French-Canadian

After nearly two years on the firing line and being wounded four times, Major Guy Boyer, of the famous 22nd Battalion, was given leave of absence and visited Montreal. He left with the 22nd with the rank of captain. He earned promotion through his devotion to duty and became attached to the British General Headquarters Staff, engaged in railway construction "Somewhere."

Only those in khaki have the right of criticism as to the conduct of any of the combatants, says Major Boyer. The splendid harmony existing on the Western front between the English, French and Canadians is a big feature. There was no such a thing as race or creed cries there. The war and how to win was the uppermost thought and that is how it should be in Canada. Major Guy Boyer speaks with pride of the gallant work of the 22nd in the battle at Courcelette, when the French-Canadian unit at half strength resisted fourteen attacks in forty-eight hours and captured nearly two thousand prisoners.

DID it ever occur to you that all teas are not "Just tea?" In reality, there is as much difference in teas as there is in silks.

There are many varieties of tea: Indian teas, Ceylon teas, Java teas, China teas, etc.—Indians and Ceylons being the choicest of all.

These teas are all just ordinary garden teas, while Red Rose Tea is a blend of teas selected from as many as sixteen different gardens, using largely Assam-Indian teas skilfully blended with Ceylons. The result is that rich strength and smooth flavor that has made Red Rose Tea so popular.

One level teaspoonful of Red Rose Tea goes as far as a heaping teaspoonful of ordinary tea—that proves the true quality and economy of Red Rose.

LABORER DIED ON C.P.R. TRAIN

Larry Crane, a French-Canadian, died on the C. P. R. train between Tweed and Havelock on Saturday morning.

In company with a number of his fellow countrymen, he was on his way to Nobel to work in the mills there. The party were in very fine spirits and were apparently well supplied with liquid refreshments. Some of the men fell asleep, and when Peterborough was getting near some of the more careful members proceeded to wake the tired ones up. When Crane's turn came no response was forthcoming, and upon medical aid being called at Havelock it was ascertained the man was dead. Acute alcoholism was attributed as the cause of death.

Coroner Holdcroft was notified, but after explaining the circumstances to Crown Attornew Hatton, decided an inquest was not necessary.

The remains are at Curtis' undertaking parlors, Havelock, awaiting instructions from relatives in Montreal.

A few of the party remained in the village, but the majority proceeded to their destination by the Port McNichol train.

Crane was 65 years of age.

MEETINGS AT GOSPEL HALL

HAROLD HARPER WILL CONDUCT ONE WEEK'S SERVICES.

Dwight L. Moody had a dream of a college where young men could be educated and fitted for service in a scriptural way, which was realized during his lifetime, and Mr. Harold Harper, who commenced a week's meetings in Gospel Hall last night, is one of the many young men who have been blessed with the privilege of thus serving in a great cause. Everyone is invited to hear him. The singing at these meetings will be a special attraction every night this week. Young folks are especially invited.

DR. ANDERSON TO GIVE LECTURES

Arrangements have been made for Dr. George Anderson to deliver his lecture on The British Navy in Wartime on Wednesday night at 8:15 in the Collegiate Institute Assembly Hall. The lecture will be illustrated by views of the navy life. Mayor Duffus will preside.

Thursday evening Dr. Anderson will deliver in the same place a travelogue lecture without views on Gibraltar. Ald. A. H. Stratton will act as chairman.

Friday night at the same place he will give an address on British Rule in Egypt. Has It Succeeded?

There will be no charge for these lectures, but a silver offering will be taken at the door for the Royal Canadian Naval Institute.

Special Meeting At Gospel Hall

EVANGELIST H. HARPER HELD FIRST OF SERIES OF SERVICES.

The question raised by the disciples in Matt. 19: 25, "Who then can be saved?" was the subject of an interesting address delivered by Mr. Harold Harper, late of the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago, last evening in Gospel Hall. The speaker proved from various parts of the Scriptures that man was in need of a Saviour by showing that man had departed from God in the beginning and had continued in that condition, and further, that God had tried him under various conditions, and His verdict is given in Romans 3: 23, "All have sinned and come short of the glory of God."

The speaker then showed from I. Timothy 1: 15, that God had made provision for sinful men, and this He did, not by holding up the life of Christ as an example to follow, and thus put away sin, but by the sorrow and anguish that was the portion of Jesus Christ upon the Cross was sin atoned for. On the basis of the finished work of Christ, God was dealing in grace with sinners, forgiving their sins and giving to them eternal life.

The appeal was then made for all to decide for Christ and to have their sins forgiven.

Special evangelistic services will be conducted by Mr. Harper each evening at 8 o'clock in Gospel Hall, preceded by a song service, to which the public is cordially invited.

HUNS MAY HAVE TO FIGHT ALONE

AUSTRIA MUST HAVE PEACE AT ANY PRICE

Offer of Separate Treaty With Russia Likely to be Rejected---Germany May Be Left to Face World Alone.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, April 17. — Diplomats and military men here are satisfied that the offer of a separate peace to Russia made by Austria will not be accepted. Austria's move is supposed to be the result of a quarrel between the German and Austrian emperors, and there is a strong impression that Austria would make a separate peace for herself, thus cutting off Bulgaria and Turkey and forcing them to come to terms immediately, leaving Germany alone against the world.

Two Explanations.

A Daily Telegraph despatch from Milan offers two explanations for Austria's move. One is that it is a trick instigated by Germany to induce Russia to desert her allies; the other is that Americans who have just reached Switzerland declare the awful economic condition of Austria has not been exaggerated and that she must have peace.

DEFEAT AT VIMY RIDGE REGARDED AS DISGRACEFUL BY PRUSSIANS

Captured Officer Says His Forces Should Have Held Position But Became Panic Stricken---More Gallantry of Canadians.

By Stewart Lyon)

Canadian Army Headquarters in France.—The Battle of Vimy was a disgraceful defeat for the enemy troops who took part in the action. This is the strongly held opinion of high born officers of the Prussian guard, captured by patrols on our front, where a whole brigade of this guard has taken thee place f Bavarians drawn out of the battle.

An officer who is well known in British Columbia, says that despite the intensity of the canonade, of which it is only fair to say he had no personal experience, the ridge could have been held against infantry attack by resolute men, who had served on the ridge, and who knew the extent of measures and means of the sheltering force holding it from bombardment. The blow has been the most serious yet inflicted, for the battle not only deprived his country of much war material, but indicated a demoralization of the garrison.

The Mass Meeting Tonight

Hon. W. D. McPherson, Provincial Secretary in the Hearst Cabinet, will be one of the speakers at the public meeting tonight in the Grand Opera House. Mr. McPherson is one of the leadng orators n Canada, he is a man experienced in public affairs, and well posted in all questions now before the nation. His popularity in his home city, Toronto, was demonstrated in his re-election by a tremendous majority on the occasion of his appointment to the Ontario Cabinet. His department has the management of some of the measures which most directly concern the people of the province.

Miss Constance Boulton, one of the most prominent equal suffragists of the day, will deliver a message to the newly enfranchised women of Peterborough. Special arrangements have been made to care for the large attendance of the new voters that is expected.

J. H. Burnham, M. P. for West Peterborough, will be one of the speakers. The Opera House orchestra will begin the program at 7:30 to entertain those who arrive early.

FRENCH WIN THEIR GREATEST VICTORY SINCE THE WAR BEGAN

HAVE PAPERS AND MAGAZINES READY

The Ladies' Patriotic League of Ashburnham beg to announce their intention of making the usual paper collection on Thursday, the 19th inst.. If the citizens will meet the collectors with their usual kind consideration by having their papers tied and placed on the verandahs on Thursday morning it will be greatly appreciated by the League.

WILL CONSIDER THE SUBJECT OF DAYLIGHT SAVING AT THE NEXT MEETING OF CABINET.

OTTAWA, April 17th.—A Federal enactment for daylight saving in all of Canada was strongly urged upon the Government by a delegation representing the Federal Boards of Trade of Ontario, and the Toronto, Montreal, Winnipeg boards. The proposal is that between the third Sunday of April and the third Sunday in September the clock be put forward one hour. Meeting a question which was raised as to the international effect it was stated that a similar proposal is to be made to Congress. Sir George Foster expressed his personal view in favor of the scheme, and promised that it would be given the fullest considaration by the Cabinet.

GUN. GEO. HANN DIES IN BATTLE

PTE. CHARLES W. JOHNSON SLIGHTLY WOUNDED.

Two additional local casualties were noted today in the report from the war office.

Gunner Arthur G. Hann, who left this city with the 4th Battery, is reported killed in action on April 3. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Sarah Hann, London street.

The other is Pte. Charles W. Johnson, who enlisted with the 93rd. The report says he is in No. 7 General Hospital at Etaples with a slight wound in the jaw. His wife, Mrs Maggie Johnson, lives at 268 McDonnel street.

In Offensive Between Soissons and Rheims They Dispose of 100,000 Germans Killed Wounded and Prisoners---Austria Sues For a Separate Peace.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, April 17.—It was estimated at midnight that the German losses in killed, wounded and prisoners in the successful French offensive between Soissons and Rheims totalled one hundred thousand. The victory does not compare with the Somme offensive, which started a month ago, in point of territory gained, but in the destruction to the enemy's armed forces and damage to his military prestige it is a far greater success.

TURKS STILL RETREATING.

LONDON, April 17. — British troops in Mesopotamia are continuing their advance up the Tigris in pursuit of the retreating Turks, it was officially announced today. They have pushed to within a little more than ten miles of Samara, seventy miles northwest of Bagdad, and within a mile and a half of Istabilat, where the Turks apparently are expected to make their next stand.

The official statement reads: "Gen. Maude, telegraphing yesterday, reports the advance of our forces on the right bank of the Tigris by means of a night march to within one and a half miles of the position occupied by the 18th Turkish Army Corps, covering Istabilat station on the Bagdad and Samara railway. The enemy's advanced troops fell back without offering opposition."

ALLIES MAKE AN ATTACK.

LONDON, April 17. — An official announcement from Berlin says 11 persons were killed, 29 injured and considerable damage done to the university building at Freiburg by an Allied air attack.

BRITISH GAIN GROUND.

LONDON, April 17. — (Official Statement.) — "In the neighborhood of Epehy we captured during the night the Le Tombois farm on the Lempire-Vendhuille road and gained ground along the spur northeast of Epehy station. We took a few prisoners. Weather continues stormy with high winds and rain squalls."

THE CALM OFFICIAL STATEMENT.

PARIS, April 17. — North and south of the Oise there was intermittent artillery fighting. Our patrols brought back prisoners. Between Soissons and Rheims our troops are organizing the positions captured. In the region of Allies a strong German counter attack on our new lines was broken by our artillery and machine gun fire, which inflicted severe losses on the enemy. Other German counter attacks in the section of Coucy also were broken up. The weather continues very bad over the whole front. In the Champagne the night was marked by more active artillery fighting west of Auberive. Everywhere else the night was calm.

DARING DASH OF OFFICER SAVES LIVES OF HIS MEN

Young Lieutenant of Cavalry Charges Alone on Machine Gun and Kills Gunner.

(Special Cable by Stewart Lyon.)

Canadian Headquarters in France (via London), April 17. — The day of the cavalryman in war has not passed. Details are now available of recent operations of the Canadian cavalry in a wooded region wherethe enemy's withdrawal shows that the Canadian horsemen were used to keep him on the move, and they did so with such success that in four days the horsemen captured six villages. Three of them were well-organized for defence, and made an advance ahead of the infantry on a 12-mile front to a depth of six and a half miles.

This cavalry dash into the enemy lines was one of the first operations of the sort on the Western front since the Marne campaign, and it furnished many incidents that but for great events taking place elsewhere would have afforded much material for descriptive writers. Most dramatic of all is the case of a young lieutenant who, while leading his troops to an attack on one of the villages the Canadians had captured, came upon a trench which was protected by three strands of wire and was occupied by twenty Germans who had a machine gun.

The lieutenant jumped from his horse and ran straight for the machine gun, clearing the wire in the best cross-country running form. He shot with his revolver the machine gunner and captured the gun.

He found out afterwards that the unexpected appearance of the body of horsemen had made the gunner nervous and prevented him from getting into action before being shot down. A few seconds' hesitation on the part of the horsemen would have meant many casualties to the men of his troop.

The first time in over two years in which cavalry galloped straight at a position occupied by the enemy with rifles and machine guns was in the capture of high ground in the same area. The enemy, after they had been ejected from a village, held a clump of woods; then the horsemen attacked it in open order at a gallop.

Cavalry Supreme.

The enemy fled in haste, taking their machine guns with them; but suffered many casualties before they found safety in a trench on the far side of the wood. The element of surprise caused the enemy to shoot wild. There were few Canadian casualties, though some horses were hit.

The capture of the village, upon which the Canadian cavalry were congratulated by the commander of the army to which they are attached, followed. Before the Germans knew any horsemen were near the village their wire defences had been turned from the rear.

In the capture of Certain Hill from a body of enemy infantry, a squadron of dragoons charged with drawn swords, capturing nine and killing and mortally wounding six of the enemy.

Machine guns are carried into action at a gallop and aid in effectiveness of the work of our cavalry as open warfare develops.

LOYAL RECEPTION FOR THE DUKE AND DUCHESS

Arrangements Made for Entertainment of Governor-General and Party in the City May 25.

The entertainment of the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire on the occasion of their visit to Peterboro next month was the subject of much discussion and planning at a joint meeting of the city reception committee and citizeens. The route over which the party will travel, the trip over the lift lock, and the welcome at Central Park were all finally dealt with.

Those present were Rev. Father McColl, Messrs. J. J. Turner, A. L. Killaly, V. Eastwood, A. Mowat, R. H. Turner, J. J. Hartley, Colonel D. Walker, Mayor Duffus, Aldermen Duncan (chairman), Dobbin, Stratton, McIntyre Worth, Taylor, and Langford.

Chairman Duncan explained to the committee that the Governor-General, in accepting the city's invitation to visit Peterborough, expressed a wish to inspect a munition works where large shells were being manufactured, and the Metal Products plant was decided on as the handiest one for the party to go through.

The Route.

After hearing a proposed route, which bad been laid out by a subcommittee, a few changes were made, and the following route was approved of on the motion of Ald. Dobbin and Father McColl:—

Starting at the C.P.R. Station, north to Charlotte, west on Charlotte to Aylmer, down Aylmer to Metal Products Co., then north to Landsdowne, west to Park, north on Park to Wolf, east on Wolf to Rubridge, north on Rubridge to Charlotte west on Charlotte to Monaghan Road, north to Gilmour, east on Gilmour to Park, north on Park to Smith, a trip through Jackson Park, then down Monaghan Road to Weller, down Weller to Belmont, south on Belmont to Hunter, east on Hunter to Aylmer, south on Aylmer to Charlotte, east on Charlotte to George, north on George to Central Park.

After the ceremonies at the park the party will proceed to the Empress Hotel for luncheon.

Over the Lift Locks.

In the afternoon the party will start north on George to Hunter, east on Hunter to Rogers Street, south on Rogers to Maria, east on Maria to No. 6 Lock, where the steamer, "Bessie Butler," will be taken for a trip over the Lift Lock.

The autos will again be taken and proceed west on McFarland to Concession Street, north to Inverlea Park, where the oval will be circled, coming out on Smith Street, proceeding west to Water, north to Argyle, west to George, south to Murray Street, east to Water, south to Hunter, west to George, then south to C.P.R. Station, when the Vice-Regal party will take a special train to continue their trip.

The Arrangements.

Mayor Duffus, Chairman Duncan, and Aldermen Stratton and Dobbin were appointed a committee to arrange for the luncheon, and to issue the invitations.

The regents of the different chapters of the Daughters of the Empire will be asked to undertake the entertainment of the Duchess and the ladies of the party. For this purpose they will met the City reception Committee on Thursday night, at eight o'clock.

Col. Walker, Mr. A. L. Kilally and the City Reception Comittee will arrange details of the program.

The chairman of the public and separate school boards will be asked to co-operate with the reception committee as to the part the school children will take in the ceremonies at the park.

Ald. Weir, Chairman of the Board of Works, with Ald. McIntyre and Langford weree entrusted with arranging the accommodation at Central Park.

Ald. Worth and Taylor, and Mr. R. H. Turner were appointed to arrange for the street decorations. Residents along the route of travel are asked to have their places appropriately decorated for the occasion.

If the weather should be bad, and it is found necesary to use the armouries, Col. Walker, Messrs. J. J. Turner, and J. J. Hartley were appointed a comittee to arrange for this emergency.

Ald. Dobbin and Stratton will arrange for the band. Lieut. Giddon, it was stated, would be willing to furnish one.

Mayor Duffus, City Clerk Armstrong, G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., and officers of the automobile league will arrange for the autos.

There was some discusion as to having the two holidays together, but it was pointed out that the city could not alter statutory holidays. May 24th is Victoria Day, and the citizens will likely observe the 25th.

The committee adjourned to meet next Monday at eight o'clock.

Y.M.C.A. WILL REGISTER BOYS AS FARM HELPERS

Secretary Galley Returns From Important Conference at Toronto---Greater Production Urgent.

Mr. G. L. Galley, boys' secretary at the Y. M. C. A., has returned from Toronto, where he attended a conference of fellow secretaries from all over the province, called to consult with Dr. Riddell of the Committee of Resources, on the matter of assisting the farmers in the Greater Production Campaign. The object was to get as many boys as possible from the age of 14 to 18 years to volunteer for farm work.

It was decided to establish a labor exchange for the benefit of the farmers at every Y. M. C. A. in Ontario. The boys willing to engage in farm work can register at bese places. They can be sent directly to the farmer in need of help. The names of those taken at Peterborough will be forwarded to Toronto if there are more than the local demand calls for and places will be found for all of them.

The seriousness of the situation was brought home to the visiting secretaries by Dr. Riddell. The crop harvested last year was the lightest in Canada since 1861, and the amount of wheat required to feed the world before next August is short by 190 million bushels. There is an immediate danger of a dearth of food. In 1916 not only were weather conditions unfavorable, but the acreage sown was away below the average.

The wheat crop in the Argentine Republic has proved a failure, so no help is to be expected from the

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, APRIL 17, 1917

THE NEED OF FARM LABOR.

STATISTICS ON FILE in the office of the Department of Agriculture in Toronto show that the crop harvested last year was the lightest in Canada for the past thirty-five years, or since the dark days of 1881. It was only 63 per cent. of a normal yield.

This year the outlook is little, if any, brighter. Owing to weather conditions last fall, very little winter wheat was sown. What was planted came through the winter well, but has suffered considerably since the snow disappeared owing to the nuseasonable weather. The soil and the climatic conditions of Ontario are such that the raising of spring wheat has to a large extent been abandoned as unprofitable. The staple article required to feed the Canadian people and the Allied Nations must be produced in the Prairie Provinces. There, too, the season promises to be backward.

Eastern Canada can supplement the food supply raised in the West by the production of fruits and vegetables. More and more the seriousness of the situation is being impressed upon the people. The world is standing on the threshold of a famine, as Lloyd George, by no means given to pessimism or alarms, has said. The wheat-fields of Argentine have been blighted by drought, and no help can be expected from that quarter. Sixty million soldiers have been taken from the producing ranks and have become members of a community of consumers and destroyers. There is a shortage now of wheat estimated at 190 million bushels of what is required to feed the world until August of this year, by which time the grain from the season's crop in certain sections should be placed upon the market.

It is evident, then, that the threatened dearth of food is not so remote as some people have imagined. It is likely to be painfully apparent long before the first sheaf of the 1917 crop is garnered. The farmer has so long been striving against odds due to the scarcity of labor that it is little wonder if he has become discouraged and is not inclined to plant more than he can cultivate and gather with such resources as he may possess.

The earth is the heritage of the people, the source of food and all other forms of wealth. The people have a right to look to is for subsistence. Not a single tract of fertiel soil should be neglected while there is the slightest danger of general starvation. Every able-bodied man, woman or boy should exert themselves in this campaign for increased production. The success of the Allies, the welfare of the Dominion and of the entire Empire, as well as the very existence of the people themselves, depends upon the amount of grain and vegetables planted in the next four weeks. The price, too, will be regulated by the same condition, and as the people sow, so shall they also reap and eat for the next year and a half. However great the area planted, however bountiful the yield, it will be impossible to reduce the price of foodstuffs this year to anything like a normal figure. No owner of land need give himself any anxiety on this account.

The Department of Agriculture for Ontario, working through the Committee of Resources, of which Dr. Riddell is head, are doing their utmost on behalf of greater production. The interest of the boys of Ontario, those husky young citizens from 14 to 18 years of age, who have passed the playtime of life and are yet too young to enlist, are the present hope of the nation among those left at home. The Boys' Secretaries of the Y. M. C. A. branches in all parts of Ontario were called to Toronto last week for consultation with the committee. Mr. G. L. Galley, of the local Y. M. C. A., was among those who met for consultation.

If there are any persons in the Province who are able to reach the boys, it is surely these secretaries. They are in touch not only with a large percentage of the youth of Ontario, but of the better classes of them. They have been asked to co-operate with the Government in this matter, and it is hardly necessary to say that the response was unanimous and hearty.

The Y. M. C. A.s everywhere will become labor exchanges where boys willing to work can register, and places will be found for them, and where farmers in need of help can be accommodated. The boys so placed will be under the supervision of the Y. M. C. A., who will see to it that they are given a square deal in everything.

This system has already passed the experimental stage. There were over two thousand Y. M. C. A. boys sent out to Ontario farmers last year, and the innovation proved mutually satisfactory. The farmers were pleased and suited and the boys were benefited. No better course in physical culture could be devised to supplement that which they had already received in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasiums.

The present food shortage is easily accounted for. Last year the acreage of crop sown in Ontario was 365,000 less than in 1916.

MANUFACTURERS AND PRODUCTION.

WHEN THE SPEAKERS' Patriotic League appointed a committee to wait on the manufacturers of the city with the object of enlisting their co-operation in the production campaign, the members were not very optimistic. One member of the committee remarked that the employers of labor would probably slam the door in their faces when they learned their mission.

The result must certainly have been an agreeable surprise. The committee were well received everywhere and were given every encouragement. Every manufacturer in the city promised to help the movement by releasing from duty any man willing to go on the farms and to give them their positions again when they returned.

The citizens of all classes realize that the situation is serious and that the country is threatened with a food shortage. Every resident of the city seems willing to do his part, and the matter is now up to the farmers. Any man in the country who is in need of help knows where it may be obtained. The High School boys have entered the ranks of the farm volunteers, and the officers of the Y. M. C. A. have become so many empolyment agencies.

Probably all the help that is offered may not be desirable from the farmer's standpoint, but there is plenty of it which can be utilized to advantage, as among the volunteers there are plenty of experienced men.

The man who wants laborers and the one who requires a job on the land must be brought together. The proper agencies for the purpose have been established. District Representative McRae, on behalf of the Government, has offered his services, and no man in the county understands better the needs of the farmer.

MR. GARLAND OF OTTAWA.

A LOCAL CONTEMPORARY need not lose any sleep over the case of Mr. Garland, the deposed member of Parliament for Carleton. He is not likely to offend that paper's sense of the eternal fitness of things politcal by getting back into the Federal House, even if some of his misguided friends are working for his renomination. Even if he succeeded in capturing that honor, the party of which he was formerly a member will do unto him even as they did to Mr. Fall's of Peel. Mr. Garland has no longer any standing among his former political associates.

The paper in question will not rest until Sir Robert Borden claps the ex-member for Carleton into the penitentiary. It would be interesting to be told what clause of the code Mr. Garland has violated to warrant his arrest and incarceration. He attempted sharp practice, but his scheme failed. What he did was an evasion of the law rather than a transgression of the letter of it. Such sharp practice is of common occurrence in ordinary business, and the punishment for it may be effective even if it falls short of a jail sentence. A man may do something to cause his expulsion from his club and yet not place himself in a position to be proceeded against in a criminal court.

Mr. Garland got his punishment when he was cast out of the House of Commons. The report of Sir Charles Davidson on his case removes his last chance for future preferment. He is a dead duck in the political pond, as dead as some of our contemporary's own party whose offences it covers with a mantle of the charity of silence.

A GENERAL ELECTION.

(Hamilton Herald.)

"THERE IS no doubt now about the why and wherefore of the Liberal gathering in this city yesterday. Although Mr. Rowell told the women and men in conference assembled that the paramount duty of the hours is the carrying on of the war work, it was not the sort of work that Mr. Rowell meant that made those Liberal women and men from seven counties meet and take council together at the local Liberal headquarters yesterday and dine at the Connaught hotel in the evening. It was not to promote war work that Sir Wilfrid Laurier sent his greetings to the assembly and that Mr. McClemont's prose-poem in eulogy of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, put into the form of a resolution, was adopted with enthusiasm. It was not to stimulate war work in Canada that those speeches were made by Hon. Geo. P. Graham, Mr. Rowell, Mr. Dewart, Mr. Pardee, Mrs. Macdonald and others, all tending to deepen the conviction of the assembled Liberals that the Borden Government at Ottawa and the Hearst Government at Toronto are accursed and that the duty of the hour is to drive them from office and emolument, to be succeeded by Liberal Governments more worthy of exercising power and enjoying emolument.

"It will be remembered how Hon. Robt. Rogers was anathematised by the liberal press some months ago because he was suspected of making preparations for a general election. It was then the profound conviction of the Liberal press and politicians that to bring on a general election while the country was at war would be a crime little short of treason. But Canada is still at war. Why a general election would have been damnable in 1915 but is necessary and desirable now is a proposition the reasonableness of which it will be the task of the Opposition to make clear when Parliament meets next month."

COST OF LIVING 90 YEARS AGO

Following, from one of the American exchanges, are a few prices of commodities and luxuries prevailing in Eastern Ohio nearly a century ago. The prices are taken from charges in an old "counter book" of 1825-1826:

Eggs, 4c a dozen. Whiskey, 28c a gallon. Butter, 3c a pound. Wheat, 40c a bushel. Sugar, 10c a pound. Oats, 15c a bushel. Pepper, 50c a pound. Corn, 25c a bushel. Coffee, 31c a pound. Muslin, 29c and 37½c a yard. Tea $1.50 a pound. Calico, 36c and 50c a yd. Bacon, 6¼c a pound. Salt, 2½c a pound. Flowered wall paper, 4½ c yard.

The Walkout.

Climax Yarn was by nature a poet (his hair simply would not stay short and he kept putting more salt on his smoked salmon), but since his father has been a great friend of Saxaphone Sounds, Sounds determined to give him a chance when he applied for a job at the real estate office.

At 10 o'clock the first morning Sounds went out to collect the rent for a row of skyscrapers, a delicate mission which he always attended to personally. Before leaving he gave Yarn a typewritten speech to read.

"Study it," he cautioned. "Memorize that speech, and if anyone comes in to inquire about a house, you will be competent to answer any, all and sundry questions."

About half-past eleven Horace Stittles, a valued customer, dropped in

"What can you tell me about the dwelling on the southwest corner of Northeast boulevard?" he inquired.

Climax Yarn looked at him soulfully and answered, "It has running exposure, southern plumbing, hot and cold gas, hardwood water, brass light and electric fixings."

"I suppose every day is April fool with you, you walking floor mop!" said Stittles, and left in a huff and a Crackard car.

Climax brushed back his luxuriant hair with an inimitable gesture and flounced out, leaving this note on Saxaphone's desk: "I have been insulted, and I resign."

Defendant—I know, sir, but put yourself in my place.

His Honor—Willingly, if you'll put yourself in his.

The Real Danger.

"Father, would you advise me to marry a girl for her money?"

"I wouldn't, my boy, but if you've made up your mind to do it, I would advise you not to let her find it out."

Playing for Bigger Stakes.

"Why didn't you accept the Browns' offer to take us in their car to the party?"

"I thought I'd wait. They have just an ordinary auto, and the Watsons have a limousine. They might offer to pick us up."

Trials of a Mother.

"Mary, I shall take one of the children to church with me this morning," announced Mrs. Fashionet.

"Yes'm," replied the maid.

"Which one do you think will go best with my lavender gown?"

Unnatural.

Young Man (milking cow) — 'Cos there ain't any milk at that end, missus.

Temptation in His Way.

Mrs. Nuroz (to friend)—Yes, the clerk at the store suggested my getting a pair of opry glasses for Jake, but I said that I didn't want my man going out between the acts to fill 'em.

Explained.

"When I was once in danger from a lion," said the old African explorer, "I tried sitting down and staring at him, as I had no weapons."

"How did it work?" asked his companion.

"Perfectly. The lion didn't even offer to touch me."

"Strange! How do you account for it?"

"Well, sometimes I've thought it was because I sat down on the branch of a very tall tree."

Special Research Work.

The assistant professor of biology of Macdonald College, W. P. Fraser, M.A., has been appointed in connection with the special investigations on grain rust to be conducted at the recently erected field laboratories at Brandon, Man., and Indian Head, Sask. The Western farmers have suffered serious losses from the uncontrolled ravages of this wide-spread disease of grain. The average annual loss throughout the world from rust exceeds $100,000,000, but in years when the disease appears epidemically, as in 1904 and 1916, losses for Canada and the U. S. A. alone amounted to nearly $280,000,000 ($180,000,000 actual report from U.S.A. and $100,000,000 estimated for Canada). From these figures it will be seen how very important every effort must appear directed against the losses from this source in the future.

Mr. Fraser is a Canadian by birth, he is a graduate in Arts (B.A.) of Cornell University, and a Master of Arts of Dalhousie University, Halifax, N.S. For a number of years he has carried on successful experiments with plant rusts, the results of which have established the life histories of fourteen species previously unknown to science, besides having confirmed the life history of many more and having added much to a general knowledge of the rusts. He is the author of numerous contributions on the subject to leading scientific periodicals. In grain rust he has made special researches, which have not yet been published. It would appear from these qualifications that Mr. Fraser is eminently suitable for this difficult research.

Women Get Votes.

Before the outbreak of the war, the coming of woman's suffrage in Canada was looked upon as a certainty, but a thing of the dim future. In less than a year, however, it has swept to success in half the Dominion. Women got the vote last year in Manitoba, Alberta, Saskatchewan, and British Columbia, in the order named, and now Ontario has come into line. The history of women's suffrage in the rest of the world may be briefly summarized as follows:

Niagara Falls Erosion.

Canada is rapidly gaining possession of the greater part of Niagara Falls. The American Falls now carry less than a twentieth of the entire flow. For 200 years or more the centre of Horseshoe Falls has been receding by erosion at the rate of about five feet a year. The edge of the American Falls recedes much more slowly—only a few inches a year. As the Canadian Falls drop back toward Lake Erie they receive a larger and larger volume of water

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor, Review:

I wish to draw your attention to certain incorrect statements regarding prosecutions under the Ontario Temperance Act. I have not asked for any extra remuneration, as The Review has stated, but I said that if I was asked to perform extra duties, some extra remuneration should be given.

The Review stated that I claimed $60 by reason of a fine being imposed in a recent case in which I prosecuted under the Ontario Temperance Act. This is also incorrect, and this statement can be confirmed by every member of the council who was present at the meeting Friday night. I said I had acted in this case at the invitation of Mayor Duffus, and out of deference to his request, but that if the city desired me to prosecute in all cases under the Ontario Temperance Act, I felt that as these cases came up some arrangement should be made, if I was required to leave my office for a day at a time to do this extra work.

Further than that the inference is drawn that Mr. Hatton performed the same services for $6 that I would be paid $30 or $40 for. This is absolutely incorrect.

Mr. Hatton is given $6 by the government on his prosecutions for the Government under the Ontario Temperance Act, whether he succeeds or not, and whether or not the person prosecuted pays the fine. I am perfectly willing to take the same remuneration Mr. Hatton takes, but I think it is fairer to the city to leave the matter in the hands of the Chief of Police, because there may be cases in which he does not need a solicitor to prosecute. My proposition was that I would be willing to take a fee equal to five per cent. of the fines paid into the police court clerk upon my prosecutions. If a man did not pay his fine I would not get anything, neither would I be paid anything in a case where I might spend one or two days, if we did not succeed in getting a conviction, and having a fine paid. In the case of a person taking a penalty in jail instead of paying a fine, I would be paid nothing, notwithstanding I might be engaged a day or more on the case. Neither would I be paid anything if fines were collected through the agency of the Chief of Police without my appearing on the case to prosecute.

No other city solicitor was called upon to be police court prosecutor, and this Act, being a new one, has changed the situation to some extent. If it did not mean a direct loss for me to leave my office I would be happy to assist in acting for the city in these cases, but it means a great deal of lost time, with five clerks in my office with little to do in my absence, and it seems to me that it must be apparent to the ordinary man that where extra services are performed some remuneration should be paid, but, of course, how much is a matter of opinion.

I remain,

Yours truly,

G. N. GORDON.

A NEW YEAR DAY CONTEST

By F. A. MITCHELL.

It is now something like forty years since the custom of making calls on New Year's day died suddenly. It began in New Amsterdam—now New York—having been brought over from Holland when Manhattan Island was settled by the Dutch.

About the middle of the nineteenth century, when the custom of calling on the 1st of January was observed by all classes, two colored gentlemen of the blue grass region of Kentucky were rivals for the hand of the same dusky girl. They happened to make up their minds to propose to her on the same evening. Mose Jinks was in the act of declaring himself when in came Pete Carpenter for the same purpose and surprised his rival pouring forth his love.

"Yo' git right out o' heyer," said Pete. "Wha' yo' think dat Sarah Ann's gwine to put up with any sich niggah as you?"

"Do you spect dat Sarah Ann's gwine to take up with a field hand lak you—dat a house sarvent—a lady's maid, too—is gwine to marry a good for nothin' co'n hoer?"

"Reckon Sarah Ann knows what she's about."

"Spec she does. She's gwine to tak me."

"She's gwine to tak me."

Meanwhile Sarah Ann stood a spectator to this struggle for her hand. But at this point both suitors looked at her appealingly. Finding herself called upon to decide between her two suitors, she said:

"I feels mighty complerented at bein' axed by two sich gemmelen and yo' bofe so fine that I don' know which to take."

"Tak' one or de udder," said Mose.

"Tak' de udder; dat's me," said Pete.

"I tell yo' what I do. Tomorry's New Year's day. You two come here tomorry arternoon at fou' o'clock, and de one what's made de mos' calls I take."

"Dat's fa'r enough," said Pete.

"Huh! If yo' hadn't interfeared I'd been engaged by dis time," said Mose.

However, Sarah Ann would not decide between them in any other way, and Mose was obliged to consent. It was arranged that a committee of three be appointed by the lady to arrange the terms of the contest. This committee decided that the contestants start at 11 o'clock in the morning and finish at 4. Each was to carry a paper on which the names of the women he called on were to be entered by some one who knew how to write or by making a mark.

Naturally the contest excited a great deal of attention, for it was known far and wide that the two suitors for Sarah Ann's hand were to contest for it by making calls on New Year's day. Each had his adherents, and there was a determination on the part of these persons to aid their favorite.

The rivals were started on opposite extremities of the field of operations. Each selected a friend who could write to attend him so that he might be sure all the calls he made were recorded. As the morning wore away, however, each had a train of followers that was constantly increasing. At 1 o'clock the bride to be sent out a friend to bring her a report as to how the affair stood. She learned to her satisfaction that Mose was seven calls ahead. At 3 o'clock—an hour before time would be called—she sent out another inquiry and learned that Mose had lost his overplus and six calls besides.

"Jim," she said to her messenger, "can't yo' fix Pete so's he'll fall behind ag'in?"

"Reckon I kin try," was the answer.

There was a stream between the two parts of the trial ground which was crossed by means of a log. Jim went to where Pete was calling and waited till he wended his way to the other side of the stream. When Pete was in the center of the log, followed by six attendants close packed, Jim made a rush for the rear man, and the seven men, including the contestant, went against each other like falling card houses and into the stream on either side of the log.

Of course Pete could make no more calls till he had changed his clothes, and he hurried away for the purpose. This unfair proceeding greatly outraged his followers, and since they were not making calls themselves and didn't mind wet clothing they ran off to find Mose in order to take a similar revenge. They found him near a dyehouse, and one of them going into the house came out with a bucket of dye, and, throwing it over Mose, turned him to a bright scarlet.

Unfortunately for the contestants, they were both delayed beyond the hour named for return. At 3:30 Sarah Ann sent Jim out to learn the situation. Jim returned at five minutes to 4 and reported that Pete had changed his clothes, made several additional calls and was coming to claim the prize. Mose's condition required more time, and his record was behind Pete's.

Sarah Ann waited till the clock struck 4, when, seeing Pete coming, she said to Jim.

"I don't want dat niggah, nohow. What'll I do?"

"Tak' me."

Pete arrived, the winner, but two minutes after 4. Mose arrived, loser, twenty minutes after 4. They were informed that neither having showed up on time the prize had gone to Jim.

REAL NOURISHMENT.

Hygiene Tips For the Wise Mother to Follow.

It is not enough that the body should be supplied with the kind of food for repairing it and with the kind of food to keep it warm and to give power to move. It must also have lime, iron and common salt to build up the cells and to keep them in good condition.

Bones and teeth are examples of the cells which require lime and which cannot be repaired without it. Milk and eggs are the best sources of lime for the body. Other lime giving foods are buttermilk, prunes, beans, cottage cheese, celery, spinach and cauliflower.

Blood cannot be kept rich and red unless the body makes daily many millions of red blood corpuscles. In anaemia, where people become pale and listless, the supply of red corpuscles is usually greatly reduced. Iron giving foods are whole wheat bread, egg yolk, cabbage, oatmeal, dried beans, celery, spinach, lettuce, asparagus and green string beans.

Nerve and brain cells cannot be made unless a substance for building them known as phosphorus is supplied in sufficient amounts in the food. This substance is most abundant in spinach, buttermilk, cottage cheese, asparagus, cauliflower, cucumbers and celery.

Some people buy lime, iron and salts at the drug store in various medicines. Others get them from fruits and vegetables. As a general thing our instincts may be relied upon to supply the organism with the necessary amount of common salt.

The human machine, like the steam engine, needs to be kept clean. Cellulose, a substance familiar in the long strings of old celery, in lettuce and in cabbage, is not used by the body for food, but cleans out the digestive tract. Among the other vegetables containing cellulose are carrots, green [illegible] tatoes, parsnips, fresh beets, squash, lettuce and lima beans.

A day's meals should contain some meat or eggs and milk, starchy vegetables, bread, butter, one vegetable which gives iron and one vegetable or fruit which gives lime. The phosphorus is usually insured by the milk, eggs and cereals.

LOOKING FOR TROUBLE.

There is no virtue in bearing crosses of our own seeking. Many a misguided man prays for strength to bear burdens that do not belong to him and for grace to endure trials that he has gone out of his way to make for himself. Life's blessings outweigh its burdens, its joys outnumber its griefs, and a healthful outlook is quite as necessary as a prayer for grace.

Mighty Glacier Caverns.

It has long ago been discovered that water produced by the melting of glacier ice in summer flows down through crevasses to the bottom of the glacier and, forming a channel by erosion, emerges often as a large stream. In the arctic region these phenomena take place on a very large scale. The Danish expedition to the northeast of Greenland, conducted by Mylius and Erichsen, discovered and explored vast caverns thus formed by glacial streams. Some of these caves are sixty to seventy feet in height and more than a mile long. In winter the streams cease flowing, but the caverns or tunnels remain ready to receive the streams of the following summer.

A Versatile Savant.

Since Sir David Brewster in September, 1831, with the help of a few colleagues gathered together at the archiepiscopal palace at York, founded the British Association For the Advancement of Science, many great savants have addressed the annual meeting. None among them, however, can have eclipsed the founder in the high qualities that make the born scientist. He found time, in the middle of researches into the mystery of light, to invent the kaleidoscope and play the part of a pioneer in photography, as well as to write innumerable magazine articles with a regularity that would have made him the favorite of the most exacting editor.—London Express.

SPRING CURTAINS

Attractive Hints About How to Freshen Your Windows.

SOME INEXPENSIVE DRAPERIES

You Need Not Follow the Established Routine Unless You Went to, For Gingham Is Being Used Everywhere Except In the Parlor.

The woman who is going without curtains or overhangings because she cannot afford to buy any is making a great mistake. In the first place, there is nothing that adds so to the "livableness" of a room as well chosen curtains. But this does not mean elaborate, expensive, lace incrusted curtains or heavy, velvet or velours overdraperies.

How many women have any idea what pretty curtains plain five cent cheesecloth makes? There is something about it that makes it hang just right. They may be hemstitched or finished with a narrow cluny edge. They are especially nice for bedrooms, but many women use them all over the house. A thin, crisp organdie makes a pretty curtain also. They should be finished with a narrow ruffle, sewed on with a heading and should be looped back with a narrow band of the material, with a ruffle on the bottom edge. These are particularly effective in colonial rooms.

One can hardly pick up a woman's magazine nowadays without reading of the decorative value of chintz and cretonne for overdraperies. It can be bought as low as 20 cents a yard, and, if the pattern is selected with care, it may be split in the middle, making one length do for a window.

Striped and checked gingham is being used in dining rooms, bedrooms and kitchens. One woman used yellow and black checked gingham for overcurtains in her blue dining room last summer, and the effect was very striking. She made little flat pads of the gingham and tied them to the seats of the chairs. These curtains should be trimmed with cotton braid or ball fringe.

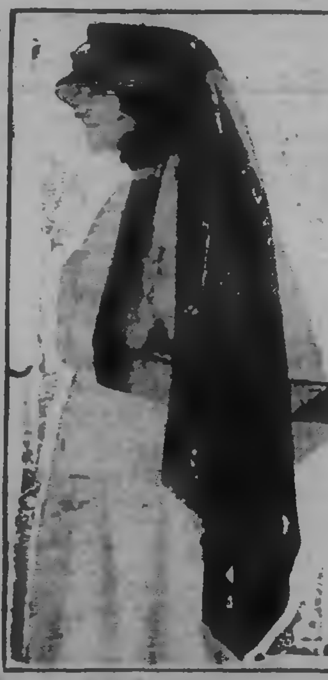
If one wants plain colors cotton crepe is very good for bedrooms, finished with ball fringe to match. There are even rooms done in percale, pink with rosebuds.

So many of our rooms that are now quite commonplace could be made so attractive for very little money if a little thought and ingenuity were used.

SHE MOURNS.

Correct Bonnet and Veil In Black Crepe.

One of the foremost designers of mourning garments quite recently put out this headpiece and face veil of hexagon mesh with the flowing drapery of crape. The brim of the hat is faced with conventional white crape.



LATEST DESIGN.

Small Detail in Dress.

The little things in dress that many women overlook are veilings, footwear, gloves, hats and handkerchiefs. Be sure that your gloves are properly proportioned and when you decide on a well fitting style buy no other. Dust a little powder into your gloves before you wear them and smooth all the seams straight, have the lines on the backs properly over the center of the hands and the fingers in the tips of the gloves. Keep your hats in their boxes until you wish to use them and put them back at once when you take them off. Always brush them before putting them away, especially if they are made of velvet or a dark material that shows the dust. Never carry a soiled or even crumpled handkerchief. Those are only little things, but it is the little things that make or mar one's appearance.

Coats Are Worn.

Wherever one goes in fashionable places in the evening one sees that the ultra smart women are not only wearing gowns and wraps to match, but are not discarding their wraps if the place can be entered by the public and not through cards of invitation.

This is the new note—remember that unless you are at a dinner party or a private ball you retain the wrap as you do the coat to a tailored suit in the daytime.

Republic in Portugal

Growing Much Stronger

In Spite of Its Enemies

THE ease with which the latest "revolution" in Portugal was suppressed, a short time ago, serves to emphasize, once again, the fact that the Republic has come to stay. It does this in a specially interesting way. Ever since the Republic was first established, some six years ago, risings against the Government have been frequent. In certain sections of the press, all over Europe, these have been made to assume extraordinary importance, and the newspapers so dealing with them have been in no way disconcerted by the consideration that the facts of each case, as they became available, showed the latest revolution to have partaken more of the nature of a comic opera even than any of its many predecessors. The recent rising of the malcontent Machado dos Santos certainly possessed wonderful possibilities in this direction. Proceeding towards Abrantes with 300 soldiers, says a recent description of the incident from Madrid, he was arrested at the gates of that town by the colonel commanding. Many of his companions had already thought better of it, and the remainder gave themselves [illegible]. Their leader was delivered to the military authorities of Entrencamento, and was taken to Lisbon and there put on board the Vasco da Gama.

So ended yet another revolution. Nevertheless, the incident was by no means without importance. It is a well established fact that the action was fomented and assisted by the Germanophiles in Spain, and that it was only one amongst many devices resorted to by these people "to put a stick between the legs of the Allies" in the prosecution of the war, as a well-known diplomatist once described such tactics. Machado dos Santos plainly declared that his movement had for its object the prevention of Portugal taking an active share in the war, and in this he was only developing further the policy followed by the Conservatives of the old regime ever since Portugal threw in her lot with the Allies. They have lost no opportunity for promulgating their views. They have urged that the absence of large numbers of men on active service will seriously jeopardize the future of the Republic, and they have insisted that Portugal, with the greater part of her army abroad, would be at the mercy of Spain. Then, in order to prove this latter point, they have done their utmost to stir up strife between the two countries. Rumor has been made to follow rumor, and no amount of denial has been sufficient to prevent the reiteration of these reports. This was specially noticeable in the case of the notorious canard regarding the passage of Portuguese troops across Spanish territory on the way to France. It was emphatically denied by the Portuguese authorities, and even more emphatically denied by the Spanish authorities, but the story has gone on appearing at intervals, in various forms, and with ever new embellishment in the matter of detail.

Now, all these efforts have been singularly unsuccessful, and the position as between republican Portugal and monarchical Spain is steadily becoming clearer. The recent visit to Lisbon of Senor Melquiades Alvarez afforded a notable proof of this better understanding. Senor Alvarez went to Portugal at the head of a mission of the Spanish Reformist Party. His mission, which had for its object the bringing about of better relations between the two countries, had the frank approval of the Spanish Government and the obvious sympathy of the great mass of the Spanish people, and it was, from beginning to end, something in the nature of a triumphal success. Senor Alvarez returned to Madrid "full of enthusiastic optimism as regards the future."

So the work goes on, and, in spite of any rumors to the contrary, those who fully understand the position in the country recognize that every month that passes finds Protugal more firmly established than ever in her position as a republic, and on better terms than ever before with her monarchical neighbor.

Wind and Sound.

A scientist gives an interesting explanation of the action of the wind in preventing the spread of sound.

It is, he claims, not the wind, as such, that prevents sound from travelling against it, but differences in the strength of the wind. If, for instance, the wind is stronger above than below, or stronger at one side, its effect will be to tilt the sound waves in one direction or another. Differences of temperature in the air also cause deflection of the waves of sound. Other atmospheric causes exist which deflect sound from a straight course and prevent it from going as far in a certain direction as it may have been expected to do.

Some of the sirens in this country, says this scientist, produce sounds which ought theoretically to be audible at a distance of 1,500 miles, but, in fact, the authorities are satisfied if they are heard only two miles away. The reason for the discrepancy between calculation and experiment was probably atmospheric deflection of the sound.

Added Offense.

Country Justice—"Ten and costs for reckless driving."

Young Motorist—"Listen, Judge! We were on our way to your office to have you marry us."

Justice—"Twenty and costs, then. You're a darned sight more reckless than I thought you were."—Judge.

Apples and Morality.

Coleridge would have been in sympathy with the prison governor who regarded a liking for apples as indicative of moral soundness. "No man can have a pure mind who refuses apple dumplings," he said, and Coleridge's friend, Charles Lamb, who reports this saying, adds: "I am not certain but he is right. With the decay of my first innocence, I confess a less and less relish daily for those innocuous cates. There is a physiognomical character in the tastes for food. The whole vegetable tribe has lost its gust with me. Only I still stick to asparagus, which still seems to inspire gentle thoughts."—London Mail.

Many Kinds of Monkeys.

The ordinary reader hardly realizes how many varieties of monkeys exist. We hear of monkeys in the Indies with reddish brown bodies, black heads and faces of a sky blue. There are monkeys with white eyelids and green monkeys to be found on the African continent and Cape de Verde islands. The howlers, which inhabit South America, are large and fierce, and travelers describe their yells as absolutely appalling. So dreadful is the sound of their roarings that one would imagine that all the beasts of the forest had gathered together for a battle. These creatures are so fierce that even the most skillful and adventurous trainer is unwilling to teach them tricks.

Showed Them How.

In "Welsh Humor" is this story: "Sir Foulk Fitzwarren was recounting to his knights his exploits against the Saracen. These being calmly received, Sir Foulk said, 'But right here, the other day, I jumped from the ground to the top of my castle.' The knights being skeptical, Sir Foulk invited them to come the next day and see him perform the feat. When they assembled he jumped up one step of the stairway and continued jumping, step by step, till he was on the top of the tallest tower. 'But we could do that too,' chorused the knights. 'Not till I showed you how,' retorted the redoubtable warrior."

Man's Limitations.

Man has been able to learn some things, but has forgotten many others. He has not added one sense to his senses, one limb to his limbs, one faculty to his soul. He has merely explored another region of the circle in which he is confined. The human mind is always in motion. It runs from one point to another. It exalts what it embraces and forgets what it has abandoned. It never manages to cultivate one part of its domain without leaving the others fallow.—"The Inequality of the Human Races."

WINNIPEG MAN CURED.

Says Dr. Cassell's Tablets Saved Him Nervous Breakdown.

Mr. G. C. Inman, 35a Harcourt St., Sturgeon Creek, Winnipeg, for many years a well-known man in the business life of Canada, says: "I was terribly rundown and weak. I had no appetite, and I suffered if I forced myself to eat. My nerves were in a bad way, and my sleep very disturbed. Everything pointed to a nervous breakdown. Then I got Dr. Cassell's Tablets. The first result was that I could sleep, and then my health rapidly improved. It was really astonishing how my strength and fitness came back."

Mr. Inman is now in England, managing the well-known firm of A. W. Inman and Son, Printers and Publishers, Leeds. Letters will reach him there.

A free sample of Dr. Cassell's Tablets will be sent to you on receipt of 5 cents for mailing and packing. Address: Harold F. Ritchie & Co., Ltd., 10, McCaul St., Toronto.

ARMENIAN LITERATURE.

Poet Writes of the Suffering of Persecuted People.

It has required the horrors of a peculiarly atrocious war situation to bring to the attention of the world that the Armenians have a literature, although until compaartively recent years there have been no epics and little or no romantic writing. What there might have been if it had not been that the ancient literature was mostly destroyed in the early centuries of the Christian era there is no means of knowing, but its place was taken by a vast quantity, in the aggregate, of writing on philosophy and history, which was to have been expected from a race that was deeply religious and got its early inspiration chiefly from its monasteries. Recently, however, there has been translated and compiled an impressive collection of more recent poems, which are published for the purpose of aiding the Armenian relief work. These might never have gained much circulation if it had not been for the tragically distressful condition in which the Armenians now find themselves.

As showing that massacres and deportations and famine and pillage and death have left a deep impression on the character of Armenian literature—the present massacres are not the first to which they have fallen victims—an extract from a poem on "The Starving" is of particular interest because it is typical, and not in any sense exceptional. It must be remembered that the shadow of death so hovers over the land that even in their games the little children employ the symbols of death, where the children of another country would play with life instead. The poet in this instance is Atom Yarjanian.

There is no harvest, no harvester, no sower and no earth to plow.
Hungry oxen bellow mournfully. Vegetation is dying with the flowers.
The plow in the corner of the barn awaits the new and ever-returning spring
The cock crows no more. The dawn, it seems, like the blood of my race, has sunk into the depths of the earth.

Here this sobbing, supplication, begging. "We are hungry. We are hungry."
There are those who tear their hair, there are those who shed tears like drops of lead.
There are those who hope they are already dead under a pall of silence.

There are those who begin horribly to dance, arm in arm with frightful madness.
And others, terrible to tell, already approach the corpses, unburied and awaiting burial.

The translator, Miss Alice Stone Blackwell, could not have depicted the situation of Armenia and the Armenians more graphically in an appeal of any length. Not only the words themselves, but the fact that anyone could have written them at all, are eloquent of the desperate plight of Armenia. The picture is vivid, but the mental impression is more powerful than all. It is not materialism to write of the woes of a starving people, the poem is not a tract, nor even an appeal for food; but it must serve the purpose not only of calling atention to Armenia but to every other unhappy land that is measurably in a similar state of chaos. The poets of Armenia are also, for the time being, the poets of a suffering world.

Very Unusual.

"Then you say you have a model husband?"

"Quite. Since we have been married he has never given the neighbors a moment's anxiety."

Gowns of the Moment.

The gowns de luxe of the moment are certainly most distinctive. Gray liberty is blended with tulle and embroidered in oxidized silver. Long capes, which really are more like trains from the shoulder, fall all over the back in tulle and gossamer fabrics. Many vivid contrasts are introduced in mere touches, which, however infinitesimal, are effective. Light and tender yellow is fashionable, especially in velvet, and such velvet dresses quite ignore the waist line, while the decolletage is mostly bordered with beads and metallic thread ornamentation in yellow, gold and silver. Many evening gowns are quite narrow and trained, having tulle sleeves to the wrist. The jewel work on many gowns is superb, but must naturally be costly.

How many telephone users have given thought to the study of what might be called "telephone courtesy"? There are various phases of it, and many of them are important. Do you ever speak impatiently to the "hello-girls" at the central? Perhaps you were at fault yourself, after all. Did you ever, on finding you had given or had received the wrong number, snap out something not real nice to the other party? Did you ever tell your assistant to call up someone, then let him wait until you had finished a conversation or a letter, regardless of the value of his time? Of course you never swear through the telephone—that is a misdemeanor, and would bring you into court; yet it has been done, for the man who is low-minded enough to be habitually profane is just as apt to so express himself at the phone as elsewhere. The telephone is becoming a home and business institution, so that telephone courtesy is as important as table manners, and should be as generally observed.

Telephone Courtesy--

A CORDIAL, kindly manner and a cheerful, smiling voice—everywhere people are awakening to the value of these in telephoning.

Not that anyone ever meant to be rude or discourteous. Many of us were just thoughtless, forgetting how sensitive the telephone is, reflecting our every mood.

And in addition to telephone courtesy, it is very helpful to speak distinctly and directly into the mouthpiece of the telephone, with the lips about half an inch from its rim.

And then, of course, we should always make sure of the number by consulting the directory before calling.

The above editorial from the Thorold Post is worthy the notice of every telephone user.

TARIFF REVISED FOR CAB HIRE

POLICE COMMISSION PUTS NEW MAN ON POLICE FORCE.

The high cost of living has hit the liverymen and yesterday afternoon Messrs. Pulkinghorn, Jones and Robinson attended before the police commissioners and asked that the tariff rates be raised for cab hire.

The commissioners thought the request a reasonable one and ordered the schedule revisd, and it will be submitted for confirmation at another meeting this week, when all of the cab and livery men will be asked to be present.

Chief Thompson was instructed to put a probationer constable on the force.

quarter. Something must be done to supply food for the sixty million men who have been taken from the producing class and have become merely consumers. The boys of Ontario are now called upon to help the nation in the present serious emergency.

Last year the Y. M. C. A. placed 2,000 boys on farms throughout Ontario. The experiment was successful, and the verdict of the farmers is that any strong boy who is willing to work and to learn can be useful in the country.

Mr. Galley left this morning on a trip through the district. He will visit Norwood, Stirling, Campbellford and Omemee to interest the school boys of these places in the movement.

Famous Adanac Quartette at St. Paul's Apr. 24th

The visit of this famous quartette to St. Paul's Church is creating as great interest as it did on its former visit Ruthven Macdonald, the basso of the quartette, says, "the blend of the four voices is finer than ever this season." The program forwarded is a very fine one and includes such splendid numbers as "What From Vengeance," from Lucia de Lamermoor, and Dudley Buck's "Lead, Kindly Light." In addition to the quartette solos will be sung by each member of the quartette, and also by Miss Dorothy Allan, soloist, of St. Paul's.

Mr. Arthur Blight will sing that fine recit and aria, "Why Shakes the Earth," by Johnston. Miss Allan and Mr Macdonald will sing the brilliant duet "I Feel Thy Angel Spirit," which was received so enthusiastically at Owen Sound when sung by them there recently.

St. Paul's choir will contribute two unaccompanied numbers to the program, and the quartettes will also be sung without an accompaniment.

Unaccompanied work is the truest test of a choir's worth. Many choirs can sing well to an acompaniment, but fail when tested without one.

St. Paul's choir has undertaken to provide a worthy and permanent "Roll of Honor," to be erected in the church, and the entire proceeds of this concert are towards this object.

The dance and card party held in the town hall last night under the auspices of the Lakefield Curling Club was in every way a most gratifying success. The weather being favorable, the surrounding country was well represented. The hall was artistically decorated with flags, the stage also being arranged with flags and small tables with ferns. At both ends of the stage clusters of curling stones were placed, in the centre of which were inserted three brooms tied with red streamers. Mr. Munroe of Warsaw, Mr. J. Blewett, violinists, and Misses E. Tucker, Warsaw, and A. Hunter, pianists, supplied the music. Those not wishing to dance assembled in the fine hall, which was arranged for cards. Mr. A. O. Sawyer, substitute for a lady, won the lady's prize, and Mr. H. Sherin's the gentleman's, in progressive euchre. Refreshments were served in the firehall by the ladies of the Soldiers' Comforts Club. During the evening Mr. B. Skene of Havelock (guest of Dr. and Mrs. Smith) rendered a solo, ably accompanied by Mrs. Smith, which was much appreciated. A raffle was part of the evening's amusement. A quilt, donated to the Club was disposed of in this way, the lucky ticket being No. 90. The proceeds, which amounted to over $100, will be donated to the Soldiers' Comforts Club.

LOCAL COUNCIL TO MEET.

The regular monthly meeting of the Local Council of Women will be held in the green room of the Y. W. C. A. Thursday at 3 p.m. It is urgently requested that representatives and members of affiliated societies be present. Important questions on the agenda of the annual meeting of the National Council will be discussed and voted on. There will also be discussions on several questions of much importance locally.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES.

Preparations are being made for the closing of the gymnasium work, to be held at the Y. W. C. A. on the evenings of April 26 and 27. The exhibition this year promises to be even better than that given last year. Following is the program for gymnasium classes this week:

Friday
8:00 to 9:30—Beginners' Class.

Saturday
10 to 12 a.m.—Saturday Morning Juniors.
2:00 to 3:00 p.m.—Saturday Afternoon Juniors.

AFTER THE 21st FINE WEATHER

Not until the first full moon after Easter will the weather enter into continued spring conditions. This is the statement of a railway man, who quotes the experience of an old citizen, and so on, but wherever this "old saw" originated, if it has any influence behind, the home garden club need not worry for a week or two. Of course this does not mean that there will be no fine, bright days, but these will come merely as a reminder of the spring that might have been.

MARCHING SONG OF THE STURDY MEN OF THE NORTH

Three Peterborough Boys Are With the 227th Battalion Now on Their Way Overseas---A Husky Unit.

The men of the 227th are recruited from the lumber camps and forests of Northern Ontario, and in the aggregate make a husky battalion over nine hundred strong, which is now on its way to England. This reference to it is of local interest, in as much as three Peterborough boys are with the unit, viz.: Lieut. McDermid, brother of the local druggist of that name; Sergt. Sig. Instructor C. V. A. Mitchell, and Pte. Hugh Robinson.

The following is the marching song of this battalion:

The 227th, Men o' the North.
The Northern boys are all in line,
From woods and stream and lake and mine;
We're on a trip to cross the Rhine,
For Men o' the North are we
We're from the Soo, and Sudbudy, too,
We hunt the moose and caribou,
Our rifles are sure; our aim is true,
For Men o' the North are we.

CHORUS

Algoma East, Algoma West,
The Two-twenty-seventh will stand the test;
Hold up your head, throw out your chest,
For Men o' the North are we.
We're here, we're here,
The Two-twenty-seventh will show no fear;
We're here, we're here,
For Men o' the North are we.

From Manitoulin and St. Joe's
The boys will fight Great Britain's foes;
Our blood is red, Old England knows,
For Men o' the North are we.
We chase the bear into his lair,
So let the German fiends beware;
They'll hunt their holes when we get there,
For Men o' the North are we.

For North Shore boys know how to fight,
And when we know we're in the right
We'll fight and fight with all our might,
For Men o' the North are we.
Algoma's Sons will beat the Huns,
We have no room for timid ones;
Just give us a chance and give us the guns,
For Men o' the North are we.

OBITUARY

MRS. ARCHIE McGREGOR.

Died at Modora Man., on the 28th March, Mrs. Archie McGregor in her 80th year, eldest daughter of Archie Lillico, deceased, of North Monaghan, where she was born, and passed her girlhood days. She was a sister of the late Richard Lillico. Her husband pre-deceased her some fifteen years ago. About thirty years ago the family moved from Chesley to Man., where she leaves to mourn her loss two sons and one daughter, also two brothers and two sisters, Archie in Chesley, and Donald in Toronto; Mrs. Wm. Fowler and Mrs. Joseph Forster, Bolivar Street, Peterborough.

The late Mrs. McGregor had many fine qualities, and although away from this district for a number of years, her death will be much regretted by those who knew her when she was a resident of North Monaghan.

FREDERICK GEORGE WILMOT.

Frederick George Wilmot, formerly of Indian River, son of the late Frederick Wilmot, of Dorset, England, died at Weston, Ont., Saturday after an illness of about a year. He was 24 years of age and had lived here for about eight years. He is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Frank Merritt, 363 Babbs lane, and Miss Agnes Wilmot, city.

The funeral took place this afternoon to Little Lake Cemetery.

HELD ON CHARGE OF SEDITION

CHANDOS MILL OWNER FINDS HIMSELF IN TROUBLE.

COE HILL, April 16. — Chas. Hawkes, of the township of Chandos, a local mill-owner, was committed to stand trial on a charge of uttering seditious language. The complaint was laid by a member of the 247th Battalion, the circumstances being that on the evening of February 27th, William Crosby, a private in the 247th, was canvassing a probable recruit at Wilson's boarding house at Coe Hill, when, it is alleged, Hawkes interfered and said he did not think it was right to coax any young fellow to enlist. Further words ensued, and Crosby said: "What about the dirty work Germany was doing, killing and mutilating women and children in Belgium, and sinking neutral merchant ships?" Hawkes, it is said, replied that it was untrue, andd that Great Britain did more dirty work than Germany, only she covered it up.

ALBERT BROWN IN NEW COMEDY

POPULAR ACTOR WILL BE AT THE GRAND ON APRIL 21ST.

To the Canadian theatre-goers a new production by the great comedian, Albert Brown, is always an event of first performance, and from the Atlantic to the Pacific the announcement that he will present the sensational English laughing success, "A Little Bit of Fluff," for the first time in this country at the Grand next Saturday, April 21st, matinee and evening, has been hailed with delight. This play has a record unique in the history of the British stage. It is a straight farce of the same type as "The Private Secretary," "Charley's Aunt," and "Pink Dominoes," and has already been presented for upwards of 500 consecutive performances at the Criterian Theatre, London, with no signs of waning popularity.

Every successful farce deals with the misadventures of a uniquue central character, and "A Little Bit of Fluff" is based on this time-honored rule. It affords Albert Brown an opportunity to play a type which he has never before presented to the Canadian public. His part is that of a good young man, a London mission worker, who by an extraordinary disarrangement of circumstances, is compelled to assume many guises foreign to his character. Each transformation is accompanied by screamingly funny episodes, and before the curtain drops something of the old Adam develops in him. It is a part that calls for the highest ordeer of comic versatility, and the English producers, Messrs. Herbert Jay and Anthony Ellis, have decided that Mr. Brown is the one actor on this continent who could do it justice. Br. Brown has been carefully rehearsing the piece since the late autumn, and the production will be an exact replica of that at the Criterian Theatre, London, in costumes, scenery and

A GREAT VICTORY

At one time the fitting of eyes with glasses that were best suited to give the best aid to defective eyesight was largely a matter of guesswork. It resulted in a great deal of dissatisfaction and worry, but with Dr. Fowler's modern optical equipment, the diagnosis resulting from the test is absolutely correct, and efficient service is guaranteed. Science has triumphed over haphazard methods to a remarkable degree.

A TITLED NURSE

Awarded a Silver Medal by the King of Italy.

HELPED MESSINA REFUGEES.

The Mother of Two Sons, the Duchess of Aosta Is One of the Chief Inspectors of Italian Red Cross and Personally Nursed Sick Soldiers.

The king of Italy has awarded the silver medal for military valor to the Duchess Helene of Aosta, whose husband is a lieutenant general in the Italian army. Although a daughter of the Bourbon-Orleans house, the duchess is an English princess, having been born at Twickenham and married at Kingston-on-Thames. She is noted both for her beauty and her intelligence. She has been associated with the Italian Red Cross on the battlefield in two wars and in the terrible Messina earthquake.

DUCHESS OF AOSTA.

The military medal goes to her not only for her bravery in caring for wounded soldiers under fire, but for nursing those suffering from cholera since the beginning of the Italian campaign against Austria. She has been active in Red Cross work in the present war since Italian troops took the field and now is one of the chief inspectors of the organization in Italy and a wonderfully energetic worker, who permits nothing to interfere with her war duties.

The Duchess Helene saw active service in 1911, when she went to Tripoli with Italian troops and took charge of the Red Cross units there. She was also one of the first to carry aid to the sufferers of the Messina disaster and stayed among the refugees until all had been provided for.

The duchess is the daughter of the Count of Paris, head of the Bourbon-Orleans family, whose secretary she was as a girl. She was married in 1895. Her elder son, the Duke of Apulia, was only seventeen years old when the war began and was a student at a military school. He enlisted as a private soldier and won his corporal's stripes on the battlefield.

Her second son, the Duke of Spoleto, is only fifteen and frequently accompanies her to the front when she goes to inspect hospitals.

Blarney Stones.

One cupful sugar, one-half cupful butter, one cupful milk, one and one-half cupfuls flour, one cupful chopped walnuts, one cupful chopped raisins, one-half cupful sour milk, two eggs, one-quarter teaspoonful cloves, one teaspoonful cinnamon, one quarter teaspoonful nutmeg, one teaspoonful soda and one teaspoonful vanilla. Cream butter and sugar, add eggs, milk and extract, stir into dry ingredients and beat thoroughly. Drop by spoonful on to greased pan and bake a delicate brown.

CANADA LOSES LITTLE.

Loss by Abrasion on Gold Coins Negligible.

The circulation of gold coins in Canada never gained large proportions, but since the war none of the Government gold is sent out whatever. Consequently, the loss which Canada sustains is a negligible consideration in this country. However, some countries, notably the United States, lose large amounts in this way.

Reports indicate that half the gold in circulation on the Pacific slope in the States is lightweight, ranging from 51 cents to $3.75 per $1,000. While Canada has lost very little in this way, there is, nevertheless, a law to provide against it. This law states that when one-half of one per cent. of a gold coin is lost through abrasion, it is no longer legal tender. On the smaller gold coin the loss through abrasion is proportionately larger.

Immediately the war started an order-in-Council was passed by the Government stating there would be no Government movement of gold, and the banks took all theirs in. The weights of Canadian gold coin are: Twenty dollars, 516 grains standard, too light for currency, 513.42 grains; ten dollars, 258 grains standard, too light for currency, 256.71 grains; five dollars, 129 grains standard, and too light for currency, 128,355 grains.

Silver is known as token money, and the weights are: one dollar, 360 grains; fifty cents, 180 grains; twenty-five cents, 90 grains; ten cents, 36 grains; five cents, 18 grains. As long as silver is recognizable it is legal tender.

England has a different law. Gold there is sold by the ounce, and the denomination or the amount of abrasion is not taken into consideration.

On the Wall.

Those who go to war without their parents' consent and are killed in battle occupy a peculiar position in the after world in Mohammedan theology. They are on Al-Araf, the wall separating heaven and hell. Because of their treatment of their parents they should be in hell, but death in battle is martyrdom, which entitles the deceased to enter heaven. Because they are martyrs they should not be sent to hell, hence Al-Araf for them. There are other denizens of Al-Araf, among them those whose good and evil deeds so exactly balance that they are neither fit for heaven nor hell.

CITY TEMPERANCE LEAGUE AND THE MEETING TONIGHT

Decline to Ask Provincial Secretary McPherson, as Mr. Burnham Suggested, Why Province Was Not Made Bone Dry.

The following correspondence is published at the suggestion of the City Temperance League, and consented to by Mr. Burnham, M.P.:—

To the Peterborough Temperance Association.

Dear Mr. Cowan,—

In view of the fact that the whole "difficulty," if such it could be called developing at the temperance meeting in the Public Library, on Tuesday evening centred around the Ontario Government and the Federal Government with regard to temperance or phohibition measures, I, in my own behalf, solely, would be very glad to have someone, on behalf of your organization—say, Rev. Mr. Peever, or yourself—ask Hon. W. D. McPherson, when here on Tuesday, why the Ontario Government did not give Ontario bone-dry or absolute prohibition. I have written Sir Wm. Hearst that this question may be asked Mr. McPherson, and to prepare for it. It is only in such a way as this, in my opinion, that matters can be brought to a head.

If you consent let us know, and there will be no difficulty about it.

Yours,

(Signed) J. H. BURNHAM.

MR. COWAN'S ANSWER.

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P.

Dear Mr. Burnham,—Your letter of the 14th inst. has been carefully noted, and your interest in the matter of temperance reform, as indicated therein, is appreciated. After thinking your suggestion over, however, and consulting with members of the executive of the City Temperance Association, I would advise you that we hardly think it necessary to ask Hon. Mr. McPherson the question you suggest, although we would note with interest any reply he might make to it should you ask him the question yourself. There are two main reasons why we do not think it necessary to raise this point.

First, while there is strong legal opinion in support of the view that the provinces have power to pass legislation guaranteeing absolute prohibition within their borders there is also very learned legal opinion which claims that the provinces have not got that right. Were the provinces to atteempt, therefore, to enforce such legislation, it would almost inevitably result in such legislation being thrown into the courts, and much confusion result.

Second, the conditions under which "bone-dry" legislation can be secured under provincial enactment are not such that the temperance forces care to advocate them, at least, not until other methods have been tried and failed. It may interest to know that Mr. Haverson, representing the hotel-keepers' interest, suggested to the provincial temperance forces that it would be possible to obtain "bone-dry" legislation if they would ask for it, but they declined to do so under the conditions involved, because they felt sure they knew what his object was in suggesting it.

While a province has been given power by the Dominion Government to enact "bone-dry" legislation, it can only be enforced by interfering with the rights of private citizens, who under this legislation, would be prevented from keeping spiritous liquors in their homes. Hundreds, if not thousands, of people who are in favor of the prevention of the manufacture and importation of liquor would not favor such provision as mentioned. To attempt to enforce it would arouse strong opposition, and might bring about a re-action that would injure the cause of temperance. It is not until the provincial government passes such legislation that the dominion government's enactment becomes operative and prevents the importation of liquor into the province. Thus, in order to take advantage of the dominion legislation, the temperance forces would be forced to assume a position, which, under the conditions stated, they do not care to be forced into.

What the Temperance People Desire

At present it is an offencee in the dry provinces for one citizen of a province to traffic in spiritous liquor with another citizen of the same province. What the temperance people desire is to have this same form of legislation extended by the Dominion Government so that it will become an offence for the citizens of one province to traffic in liquor with the citizens of another province, or with the citizens of a foreign country. Of course, they desire also that the manufacture of liquor in Canada shall be prevented. This form of legislation as it affects inter-state trade has been granted recently by the Unitedd States Congress. It is now a crime in the United States for any person in a wet state to ship liquor to a person in a dry state. Surely, in the face of world conditions, and for the national problems the Allies are being called upon to face and solve the appeal of the temperance forces to the Dominion Government on this question is a reasonable one, and one that should be granted in the best interests of the country and of the Empire at large.

What we would like to see you do is forget all about the powers of the provincial government and give the proposed measure your hearty support in the dominion sphere of legislation. We will not fail in the meantime to bring all possible pressure to bear on the provincial government for such measures as we may feel are there required, and will do so with all the more confidence, because we heartily appreciate the splendid stand taken by Premier Hearst last year in the enactment of the provincial prohibitory law. We appreciate your expresed willingness to support a national plebiscite on this question, and would still more appreciate your stand if you can see your way clear to support the desired legislation without its being found necesary to submit it to the people, whose verdict on it, under existing conditions in Canada, no one can doubt.

Sincerely yours,

H. B. COWAN

President.

THE MANY WAYS OF USING RICE

To boil rice in water and leave every grain separate, the water should be slightly salted and brought to a violent boil, and before washed in cold water should be sifted in by hand, so as not to check the boiling, and kept in violent agitation by the action of the boiling water until soaked. As soon as the grains lose their raw, starchy flavor rice is cooked. Some cooks add a little grated lemon peel to the water and steam the rice in a sieve over boiling water for a few minutes after it has been boiled. Rice so cooked may be eaten with gravy or butter as a vegetable with any meat.

Rice can be baked, steamed, and boiled with milk and eggs, to which all sorts of fruits can be added according to taste. It is the foundation of a number of Turkish delicacies, and it is the chief ingredient in pilaff, a Turkish meat dish that is equal to East Indian curry.

WEESE—REYNOLDS.

A quiet wedding was held at Wilkie on April 11th, when Miss Annie Reynolds, only daughter of Mr. Chas. Reynolds, of this city, was united in marriage to Mr. Albert Weese, of Kimermuir, Alberta. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Smith of Windsor.

Mr. and Mrs. Weese will reside at Kimermuir, Alberta.

ORME—COLLINSON.

A pretty wedding was solemnised this afternoon at 2 o'clock at St. John's Church by Canon Cornish, when Miss Estella Collinson, daughter of Mr. James Collinson, Sherbrooke street, was united in marriage to Mr. Martin Orme, of Ottawa. The young couple were unattended. The bride, who was given away by her father, looked very pretty in her travelling suit of navy blue, with hat to match. She wore a corsage bouquet of marguerites and roses.

After a buffet lunch at the bride's home the happy couple left for a trip to New York. On their return they will reside in Ottawa.

SHAUGHNESSY—FITZGERALD.

A pretty wedding took place at St. Joseph's Church, Douro, this morning, when Rev. Fr. McGuire united in marriage Miss Loretta Fitzgerald, daughter of Mrs. Ann Fitzgerald, of Otonabee, and Mr. James Shahghnessy, son of Mr. John Shaughnessy, of Otonabee. The attendants were Miss Rose Fitzgerald, sister of the bride, and Mr. Leo Shaughnessy, a brother of the groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Shaughnessy, after a short honeymoon, will reside on the Neil Power farm, Otonabee.

GOOD PRICE FOR DEBENTURERS

BANK OF COMMERCE PURCHASES PATRIOTIC FUND BONDS.

The city finance committee met last night for the purpose of opening tenders for the $60,000 5% 20-year Patriotic Fund debentures, and the successful tenderer was the Canadian Bank of Commerce, who secured the issue for $56,820, being at the rate of 94.70. This is considered by financial men as a good price, considering that they were offered following the Canadian war loan.

The tenders received were as follows:

Canadian Bank of Commerce 94 70—$56,820.

Imperial Bank of Canada 94.28—$56,568.

Wood, Gundy Co., Toronto—$56,142.

SPAIN MAY BE NEXT TO ENTER WAR

ANOTHER VILLAGE IS TAKEN BY BRITISH

Heavy Rain Does Not Dampen Ardor of Troops---German Losses Now Placed at 30,000---Naval Battle Reported off the Coast of New England.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, April 18. — "During the night we made further progress southeast and east of Epehy, and this morning captured the village of Villers Guislain, north of St. Quentin, with some prisoners. We also improved our positions in the neighborhood of Laguicourt. Heavy rain is again falling."

GERMANS LOST THIRTY THOUSAND.

PARIS, April 18. — The French victory yesterday, in which German first line positions and part of their second line from Rheims to the Champagne front, was staged on ground which saw the great offensive of 1915. The German losses are estimated at thirty thousand killed, wounded and prisoners.

FRENCH STILL PRESS FORWARD.

PARIS, April 18.—(Official Statement.) — "In the region to the south of St. Quentin, last night was characterized by great activity on the part of opposing artillery forces, together with numerous encounters between patrols. Similar conditions prevailed south of the Oise, in the sector to the east of the lower forest of Coucy.

"Northeast of Soissons a surprise attack upon the enemy lines north of Laffaux resulted in our bringing back about twenty prisoners. Between Soissons and Auberive French troops last night conducted at various points of the front operations which brought us distinct advantages. A particularly brilliant movement resulted in our occupying the village of Chavonne and in completing the occupation of the village of Chivy. To the north of these locations we have taken possession of ground as far as the suburbs of Breyen Laonnois. Our patrols have gone into this village. We took here 250 prisoners. In the sector of Ville Aubois we have won several fortified positions as well as those we took to the east of that place. We captured 400 prisoners.

FOURTEEN THOUSAND PRISONERS IN TWO DAYS.

"In the Champagne district three counter attacks of the enemy upon our positions at Mont Cornillet we re-checked by our fire. The enemy gained nothing and suffered sanguinary losses. Artillery fighting has been violent along a large portion of the front attacked. War material found in the territory was taken by main force from the enemy and includes a considerable number of machine guns and numerous trench mortars. The enemy drew back behind his second positions his heavy artillery as well as his field pieces. Nevertheless we captured twelve cannon, including three heavy pieces. Most of these were taken on the Champagne front.

"The number of unwounded prisoners taken by us since April 16th is more than fourteen thousand. There has been intermittent artillery fighting and encounters between patrols along the remainder of the front."

RUSSIANS HOLD THEIR OWN.

PETROGRAD, April 18. — Teutonic forces yesterday made a violent attack upon Russian positions on the Danube River northwest of Braila, according to the official statement. The attackers were repulsed by rifle and artillery fire.

FIGHTING OFF U. S. COAST.

BOSTON, April 18. — Several coast guard stations on the Massachusetts coast reported heavy gun-firing this morning.

SPAIN NEARER WAR.

MADRID, April 18. — A Spanish steamship has been torpedoed and sunk with eighteen lives lost. It is expected that the news will further inflame public feeling in Spain.

FIVE PETERBORO MEN ARE REPORTED IN HOSPITAL

One of These Lt. Gillman, Formerly of 93rd Battalion.

The casualty list issued this morning by the War Office contain the names of two Peterboro men as among the wounded.

Mrs. Richard Bradfield, of Douro, has been notified that he son, Sergt. Frederick Bradfield, had been wounded on April 10th, and had been admitted to No. 13 General Hospital at Bologne, suffering with a gun shot wound in the knee.

Private Norman Henry Rodgers is reported wounded on March 30th, but no further particulars are given His father Mr. Walter Rodgers, formerly lived at 115 Gladstone Ave., but a short time ago he moved out west.

Lieut. H. C. Gillham, formerly of the 93rd Bn., is reported in today's list.

Lieut. P. B. Harris, Gore's Landing, is also reported wounded. He is a son of Capt. Harris, owner of the steamer Geneva.

Pte. P. Gordon Fairbairn of Lakefield, a member of the 93rd, is reported wounded.

Lieut. Dunsford Came Through Big Battle Unhurt

Mr. W H. Dunsford received a cable today from his son Lieut. Martin Dunsford, of the 18th Battalion, containing the words: "All well," which is taken to mean that the young officer has been in the recent fighting, and had come through safely. An officer who was in the same company as Lieut. Dunsford is reported killed.

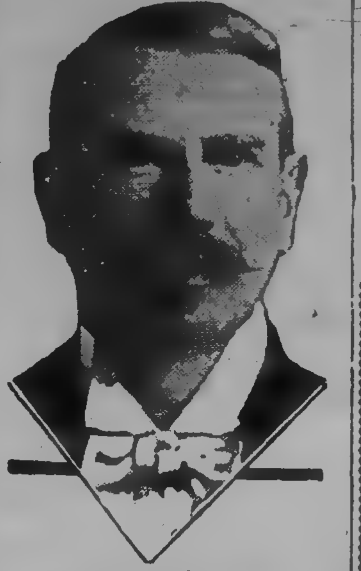
MILLIONS FOR MUNITIONS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

OTTAWA, April 18. — J. W. Flavelle has informed the Minister of Finance that the total values of orders received for munitions totalled eight hundred and fifty million dollars. Munitions shipped to April 30 are valued at four hundred and seventy millions, and disbursements to that date totalled five hundred and forty-three millions.

NO NOTE OF CONTROVERSY HEARD AT MASS MEETING IN GRAND OPERA HOUSE

Addresses Were Made by Provincial Secretary McPherson, Miss Constance Boulton and Capt. J. H. Burnham---Women Advised to Join Old Political Parties Instead of Forming an Organization of Their Own.



W. D. McPHERSON,
Provincial Secretary

J. H. BURNHAM, M.P.
West Peterborough

Points Made by the Speakers

W. D. McPHERSON.

It is only natural that there should be opponents of votes for women. Plenty of men are opposed to manhood suffrage.

Where on this earth are there a more advanced or intelligent people than the eight millions who make their homes within the borders of the Dominion of Canada?

It was not necessary to submit the question of women's suffrage to a vote of the people. It would have carried beyond all doubt.

In every step of this reform the Government was supported by the Opposition. There was no suspicion of manipulation from start to finish.

There never was a time when we were prouder of our nativity or of our connection with the British Empire than we are today.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

MISS CONSTANCE BOULTON.

I have been a suffragist as long as I can remember, but when the war broke out I ceased to be a suffragist. With me, winning the war came first.

Women must organize. They must get ready for their great responsibilities.

Women will use the franchise now that they have it. Ninety per cent. of the women of Austrlia voted at the first election.

Reforms will come more quickly now that women have the vote.

We owe a great deal to our Premier. Canada has done great things in the war. It could not have done these things if the country had not had great and worthy leaders.

The world is threatened with famine in 1918. Production should be the watchword.

Women can accomplish most, not by forming an independent party, but by joining the party with which they have the most sympathy.

Compulsory military training in a sane form, such as prevails in Australia, should be introduced in Canada.

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

CAPTAIN BURNHAM.

We wish the women to co-operate with us, to take part in all our meetings. We wish all Conservative women to join the Conservative Association as soon as they feel inclined.

If women sit on the fence and allow others to do the work they will not be popular.

Schools of thought have existed from the beginning of the world; schools of independence never.

Men think that God thinks as they do, or that He ought to do so.

Women will introduce the element of order into the political meetings and the elections of the future.

Capt. Burnham was right when he stated some days ago that the mass meeting in the Grand Opera House last night would be Conservative in name only. There was not a single controversial issue raised by any of the speakers during the course of the evening, nothing to which the most devout partisan could take the slightest exception.

Provincial Secretary McPherson confined his remarks to patriotic sentiments and to a clear and full explanation of the Equal Franchise Act, why it was deemed wise to pass it and to do so without submitting the matter to a popular vote. In every step taken the Government had the support of the Opposition, which was conclusive proof that there had been no self-interest on the part of the Administration, nothing like manipulation either in the matter of preparing the new voters' list.

Miss Boulton advised the women of Ontario not to form an independent party, but to associate themselves with the political organization with which they had the most sympathy. She praised the leaders of the day, those in Ontario for what

FRANK H. DAWSON,
Secretary of West Peterborough
Liberal-Conservative Association

they have done for women; those at Ottawa for the wonders they have accomplished in the conduct of the war. The franchise has been given women without any unseemly struggle. It was really unexpected, for when the war broke out the suffragists dropped their agitation and devoted all their energies to helping the Empire and its defenders.

Capt. Burnham, too, advised the women to be other than neutral and to take sides with one party or the other. He believes that with women in politics the tone of political meetings and elections in the future will be elevated.

No public meeting in Peterborough is complete without a military address, and this was supplied last night by Col. D. Walker, who appealed for recruits for the new regiment now being raised at the Armories for home defence.

The musical numbers furnished by the Grand Opera House orchestra, Miss Worth, Mrs. J. H. Renwick and Mr. Ed Hanrahan, was one of the most pleasing features of the evening's program. When Mrs. Renwick sang her first solo Provincial Secretary McPhreson followed her to the wings and complimented her upon her performance.

President Moore.

C. E. Moore, president of the West Peterborough Liberal-Conservative Association, in calling the meeting to order, expressed his pleasure in seeing so many ladies present. The war had brought the ladies so prominently to the front that the Provincial Government had seen fit to give them a right to vote, and on behalf of the Association he welcomed them to the ranks of qualified voters and hoped that they would take an active part in deciding who should be elected to take up their battle in the Federal House.

An Appeal for the C. D. F.

Col. D. Walker, O. C. the 57th Regiment, Canadian Defence Force, apologized for taking advantage of them, but laid the blame on Capt. Burnham. He had asked that an explanation be made of the new military unit and was requested to do it himself. Everyone in Canada was most concerned now in "How to finish the fight." The Government had called for fifty thousand men, under the voluntary system, to form a home defence and take the place of the men now ready to go overseas. It would be a serious matter if our shores were invaded, and Peterborough had been asked to furnish one thousand men, 250 of whom must come from Peterborough county itself. He did not expect to fail, but asked the co-operation of the citizens in raising the required number.

Capt. Burnham, M.P.

Capt J. H. Burnham, M.P., stated that the idea in holding the meeting was to follow up the Legislature in granting equal suffrage to women. There were critics of the example set

CHARLES E. MOORE,
President of West Peterborough
Liberal-Conservative Association

by the Provincial Government acting unanimously, and the Conservative Association of West Peterborough wished to welcome to its ranks the ladies and to let them know that it was with a feeling of admiration that the members desired to assist the ladies in taking a place in the political world. He hoped to see them take part in all future meetings, and the invitation was extended to join the association as soon as they desired. It would wear away the novelty.

Men to Take Notice.

Capt Burnham wondered if it was going to be a change or an addition to the list of voters. If it is the latter, men will have to take notice in order to analyze the situation. If

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 18, 1917

THE AGITATORS SILENT.

THE TEMPERANCE QUESTION was not raised at the mass meeting in the Grand Opera House last night, notwithstanding the invitation previously extended the members of the City League to ask questions of the chief speakers of the evening. Had the meeting been held under different auspices, the matter would beyond a doubt have been brought up by some of those whose object seems to be to embarrass the Administration rather than to advance the cause for which they profess so much friendship.

The temperance people asked the Provincial Government for prohibition, and got it. They have no cause for complaint, having received rather more than they expected or hoped for. To offer any criticism of the Government on this score would not advance the object which some of the leaders are suspected of having in view. The only course left them is to urge the Federal powers into a course which some of the highest legal authorities in the country declare would be unconstitutional.

Mr. H. B. Cowan, in his letter published in the local papers yesterday, says that for the Legislature to prohibit the private use of liquor would arouse the animosity of hundreds, perhaps thousands, of those who are now friendly to the Ontario Temperance Act. He adds that Mr. Haverson, solicitor for the liquor party, urged or at least suggested such action, and intimates that his real object was obvious.

Mr. Cowan is probably right in his surmise. Mr. Haverson was anxious that the Province go to the limit of its power, believing that prohibition would become unpopular and would be the more likely to be defeated after three years of trial than if a milder form was put in operation. It is, however, impossible to follow Mr. Cowan's line of reasoning when he attempts to show that a Federal enactment would be any more popular than a Provincial measure accomplishing the same purpose.

THE LAWYER AND HIS COMPENSATION.

CITY SOLICITOR GORDON has asked Council for additional compensation for prosecuting violations of the Ontario Temperance Act when such charges are brought by the Chief of Police. What he wants is a commission on all the fines he is able to have collected in his official capacity. The aldermen appear to be under the impression that he asks for one-fifth or twenty per cent. of all such fines. Mr. Gordon says that the commission he asks for is five per cent. There is a grievous misunderstanding somewhere.

Mr. Gordon must know that it is contrary to the ethics of his profession for a lawyer to work on the commission basis. The fee system is falling into disfavor in every walk of professional life, even as it applies to rural constables. Some county councils have abolished this system of compensation, as it is held that it develops excessive official zeal. The county officer has waxed rich in some places, doing a thriving trade laying complaints against visiting autoists for exceeding the speed limit.

All Crown prosecutors work on a salary basis and for a reason. Their remuneration does not depend upon the outcome of the case which they conduct. They are paid the same amount for their services, whether the defendant is found guilty or adjudged innocent. A prosecutor is not supposed to attempt to convict an innocent man. If he is satisfied that no offence has been committed, it is his duty to so advise the magistrate, a course not every prosecutor would be likely to adopt if a conviction meant a fat fee for himself. This method of compensating prosecutors is one of the best safeguards of a just administration of the criminal law.

Why should Mr. Gordon be paid a commission while the Crown Attorney receives a straight compensation? The same principle holds in both cases. If the city solicitor's present compensation is inadequate by reason of the extra duties imposed upon him by the Ontario Temperance Act, then the proper course for the aldermen to adopt is to make an addition to his regular salary.

TO FILL VACANT PLACES.

THE GOVERNMENT has issued another appeal for recruits for the Canadian Defence Forces so as to release all overseas troops now in Canada for duty at once.

Some men are unable to go overseas. Business or family reasons stand in the way of many in this regard. They recognize the need and have sought by what means they can do their share to help the Empire and her Allies in the great struggle now taking place.

An opportunity is given to these men in the raising of the new Canadian Defence Force, which is now being organized, when the overseas units now in training leave for Europe, which will be in the next week or two. Canada will be left without any defence force except the militia regiments, which are for various reasons inadequate.

In order that there may be a force upon which Canada may depend in case of emergency, the Department of Militia and Defence has called upon the militia regiments throughout the country to raise a force aggregating 50,000 men. Filling a place in the ranks of this force releases a man for overseas service.

There are many men in Canada to whom this service will appeal, and the Dominion Government has undertaken an advertising campaign to lay before these the conditions and need. The daily newspapers will carry from time to time announcements bearing on these points.

The militia regiments which have been asked to aid in the raising of the force have appointed their staffs for their battalions, and these are now ready to enrol recruits. The officers speak hopefully of the prospects of getting these. It is generally recognized that this is the last opportunity which Canadians will have in the present struggle of joining voluntarily, and this fact is expected to make many think more seriously of the question than they have done heretofore.

Rates of pay, term of enlistment, training, clothing, equipment and subsistence are the same as for men joining the overseas forces. Separation allowances are given to married men.

SHORT SERMONS.

REFERRING TO Rev. T. H. Mitchell, formerly of this city, The Toronto News says:

> The new minister of Old St. Andrew's Church promises short sermons. Rev. Dr. Milligan, who is now pastor emeritus, used to be good for forty-five minutes, and sometimes an hour in the same pulpit. We are travelling far from covenanting times, when a sermon would last half a day.

The News, as well as Mr. Mitchell's new congregation, will find that the brevity of his sermons is not their only charm.

SOME METHODS OF TAXATION.

THERE HAS BEEN in recent years, particularly in the Western Provinces, considerable legislation which is beyond a doubt, however well intended, keeping people and capital out of the country. Such penalty taxes as the unearned increment tax, the wild land tax, surtax, hail insurance on wild land, hospital aid tax, charities aid tax, noxious weed tax, etc., are not working out—they are not causing people to sell or put their land under cultivation, but, on the contrary, are keeping out the very people and capital who would buy this land and put it under cultivation. Where such taxes exist there is always the fear of what might come next, and prospective immigrants and investors simply back away, as aynone will tell you who has been talking Canada during the past few years.

The surtax in Saskatchewan is paid by one man and not by another—it is discriminatory.

The hail insurance tax in Saskatchewan—a man pays insurance on land which is not even under cultivation: he is paying the other man's insurance—this is discrimination.

The hospital and charities aid tax—excepting where people are destitute and a charge on the public, there is no reason why free hospital service should be furnished. In Alberta there is talk of having a hospital tax apply on lands only. There is no reason why the land should carry this tax any more than town property, stocks, or merchandise, chattels, monies, credits, etc.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

MORE AND MORE it becomes apparent that a place in the Ontario Cabinet is the best possible proof of a big man.

THE MAN who rushes into matrimony to escape conscription may live to regret that he has placed himself in a class apart from the eligibles.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

A Profitable Asset.

(Ottawa Journal-Press.)

Nobody can discover any argument against good roads except expense—and anybody can with a little trouble prove that most good roads will pay, no matter what the expense.

Inexpedient.

(Toronto Telegram.)

A war-time election will prove to be disastrous to the party that forces the people of Canada to go to the polls when the people are bearing the burdens of a great war.

Would Not Be Surprising.

(Calgary Herald.)

In the last municipal election in Winnipeg there were bunches of bogus ballots stuffed into the ballot boxes in at least two polling places. Manitoba's reputation has become so bad, it wouldn't be surprising to hear of crooked work going on in connection with the election of church officials in that province.

The Pacifist Argument.

(Boston Transcript.)

The timid pedestrian handed his pocketbook to the footpad. "This foils his carefully-laid plans," he explained, "to take it away from me with a club."

An Initial Opportunity.

(New York Evening Sun.)

There seems to be an excellent chance for a smart U. S. cruiser or two to go down to the West Indies and round up that German raider which is masquerading as a Norwegian trading vessel and thus luring the ships of the Allies to destruction. We could not begin the war better than by blowing her out of the water.

How to Carry on the War.

(Hamilton Herald.)

Mr. Rowell having declared that the carrying on of the war is the paramount duty of the hour, one must conclude from the proceedings at the Liberal conference here that the best way to carry on the war is to lambast the Borden and Hearst Governments.

LIGHT ON SALONIKI; QUAINT GREEK CITY

Striking Pen Picture of Street Scenes and Costumes in Saloniki—Mingling of Many Races

A striking picture of street life in Saloniki, Greece, is given in a bulletin of the National Georgraphic Society compiled from a communication to the society from H. G. Dwight.

"To loiter among the booths of Saloniki's bazaar," says Mr. Dwight, "to explore the busy squares and markets beyond it, to stroll in the crowded street of the Vardar—or to idle among the coffee houses of its western end is to take in something of the Macedonian question. Tall Albanians, variously braided according to their tribes and wearing white skullcaps on one ear, stalk through the crowd with that lordly swing of theirs. Bulgarians, less lordly, but no less indifferent to the opinion of the world at large, mind their own business in brown homespun. Kilted Greek peasants in tight white trousers under the knee, booted Montenegrins with hanging sleeves, lend the scene an operatic air. Women in hats, women in kerchiefs, women in embroideries that you want to buy off their backs—and sometimes do—women in the Turkish domino, offer a complete exhibition of Balkan fashions

Take Their Ease in Bathrobes

"A most striking note is afforded by numerous dignified old gentlemen taking their ease in their bathrobes, as it were, slit a little up the side and tied about the waist with a gay silk girdle. Over the bathrobe they usually wear a long, open coat lined with yellow fur, which guards them from the cold in winter and in the summer from heat. And none of them is without a string of beads, preferably of amber, dangling from his hand and giving him something to play with. But the old lady contributes what is most characteristic to the local color of Saloniki. The foundation of her costume is a petticoat of some dark silk and a white bodice crossed below her throat—a very thin bodice, cut very low at the neck and unstiffened by any such mail as western women arm themselves with.

Headdress is Crown and Glory

"Over the superstructure the old lady wears a dark satin bolero lined with fur and two striped silk aprons, one before and one behind. But the crown and glory of the old lady is her headdress, a sort of flat frame tightly wound about with a stamped or embroidered handkerchief and crowned with an oval gilt plaque set off by seed pearls. Whatever its color, this creation invariably ends in a fringed tail of dark green silk, also ornamented by a gilt or gold plaque of seed pearls hanging halfway down the old lady's back. In this wonderful tail she keeps her hair, of which you see not a scrap unless at the temples. And about her throat she wears strings and strings of more seed pearls.

"She is, this decorative, this often extremely handsome old lady, a mother in Israel. The old gentleman in the gaberdine is her legitimate consort, while many of the modernized young people at the cafe tables are their descendants—very many. A dozen different estimates of the population are given, varying according to the race of the informant, but they all agree on the point that Saloniki contains not far from 150,000 people and that more than half of them are Jews.

ORIGIN OF CHAUFFEUR

A London paper sends the following: "More than a hundred years ago, in the Rhenish provinces on the borderland between France and Germany, there flourished a particularly atrocious variety of bandits. These desperadoes made a practice of holding the soles of their victims' feet in front of a fierce fire in order to force them to reveal the hiding places of their valuables. So they came to be known as 'scorchers,' or, in French, 'chauffeurs.' After a century had passed the French were in need of a term to apply to the driver of an automobile, and with a certain sardonic humor they used the old 'scorcher.' It was applied in derision, and is not closely applicable, but it has stuck."

TRANSPLANTING PALMS

Big Trees Moved Many Miles Without Wilting a Leaf

A scientific paper writes: It is almost impossible for even a lettuce slip to be removed from the spot where it has taken root without a consequent drooping and period of suspended growth. But nowadays, great palm trees are uprooted and carried hundreds of miles from their native soil and climate with scarcely a wilted leaf. The secret of the success of transplanting such trees lies in the preliminary work. This is begun fully six months before the time for the moving of the tree. First, the roots are dug around and carefully cut, and the plant is side-boxed. Three inches are allowed between the balls of roots and the boxing. This space is next filled with earth, which is well tamped down. Thus the tree is made to stand in the box in which it is to be moved, without lifting it from the ground. Here it remains during the six months of preparation. It is thoroughly mulched and given the best of care so as to induce a plentiful side growth of roots. At the end of the six months it may be lifted and shipped. It will show no signs of fatigue at the end of its journey, however far it may travel.

Seventeen Years Sleep

Some time ago a woman in Brussels was aroused by church bells ringing in consequence of a fire. She had been asleep for nearly seventeen years. When she awoke she was in perfect health, and remembered in detail events that had taken place seventeen years ago, before she fell off into her long nap. [illegible]

NATURE'S WONDERS IN WESTERN CANADA

Beautiful Spots in Alberta Unspoiled by Civilization—White Mud Canyon and Opow Rapids

A writer in Rod and Gun gives the following description: When one compares the wilderness of Canada with the slight impressions that civilization has made upon it he can see how vast and gigantic it is. True, the railroads have penetrated into it, but civilization remains but a trifling touch on the map. From Montreal to Winnipeg one traverses a country with a thousand miles of almost unbroken timber and rock. The distance is filled with watercourses and lakes. It is a wild section and contains thousands of square miles of as civilization-free land as there is to be found. Save for the cities at the lower part of the Province of Ontario, a few smaller towns, and villages slightly north of the railroad which form the highway to this land of fish and game, there is nothing but an unbroken solitude where the hunter, fisherman and trapper, if they so will, have complete sway.

Work of "Mighty Mechanic"

Perhaps the most picturesque river in Alberta is a portion of the Clearwater River, from the Cascade to the Whitemud Canyon, a distance of about ten miles. It is rough water in places with groups of islands, while between the rapids, mill ponds of calm, silent water glides along. No two islands are alike. There are islands of jungle, islands of evergreen and jack-pine ridges, islands with rocky towers and islands of rock only. An admirer of nature cannot help but fall in love with the beautiful surroundings. One would almost believe that the finger of God in times past had performed the work of a mighty mechanic. Still, though at the head of all this marvelous beauty, the Whitemud Canyon has often been described as the Gates of Hell. When standing on a cliff over a hundred feet high the mad water rushing through, beating about and roaring the solid rock you stand on seems to shiver and many a faint heart has turned back terrified at the scene beneath. It is an old Indian saying that nothing ever came through the Whitemud Canyon alive.

Home of the Angels

Next for the Opow Rapids at the head of which stand the prettiest island of the run called Sophie Island. It has towers of rock, caves and beauty spots of evergreens. It is the home of the angels, Indian good spirits. The Opow carries the roughest water of any of the following rapids but is only a short run and rough water can be avoided by following the right channel.

Between the Atlantic coast and Montreal there are lakes and streams known to the fishermen of two continents. Thousands of men seek this sport for recreation; many have gone to the district between Maine and Quebec City to enjoy it. Notwithstanding the popularity of these districts the supply of fish seems to be as large as it was in the days of the aborigines. The compelling forces of civilization have not extended far enough into the woodlands of this territory to cut the trees, to harness the streams, and to drive beast, bird and fish from their natural habitat. It is easy to travel a short distance from the cities and still be in the midst of a country nearly as wild as it was in the days of the early traders.

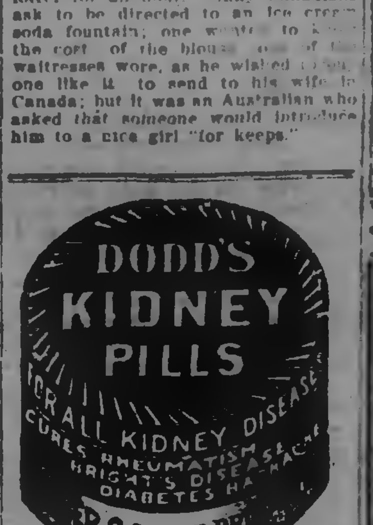
ON LEAVE IN LONDON

Original Requests of Overseas Men in London 'Seeing the Sights'

A London paper says: "I wish you would tell me where I should go to see suicides throw themselves into the Thames," was the request of a New Zealander, a cheerful, kindly lad who said he had laid there in the hospital all the way from Egypt just dreaming of the things he would see when he reached London. He seemed quite deeply disappointed that visits to Waterloo and London Bridge had failed to provide him with this sight he had apparently yearned for so long.

Then some boys' greatest ambition is to take an actress out to supper. Many of them are very anxious to hear the mob orators in Hyde Park, though they have been known to express it as "the Suffragettes addressing the crowd in Kensington Gardens." A certain South African wanted to see our best low comedians, and the next man wanted "something high class, opera preferred, as he didn't care for these vaudeville shows at all."

Another demand was for a shorthand writer—this man could not write to his mother, but if he saw her he could talk for an hour, so he thought the best thing would be to dictate a letter for an hour. Many Canadians ask to be directed to an ice cream soda fountain; one wanted to know the cost of the blouse one of the waitresses wore, as he wished to buy one like it to send to his wife in Canada; but it was an Australian who asked that someone would introduce him to a nice girl "for keeps."



EDITOR'S MAIL

A PLEA FOR THE HEROES.

Editor Review:—Give me space in your paper to say a few words. I have noticed in the arranging of the visit of the Duke of Devonshire that there is no mention of our heroes in this city taking any part. I am almost sure the duke would like to see some real men when he came here—I mean men who suffered that Canada should remain a part of this great British Empire, and who shed their blood on the field of Flanders for that cause. Don't let him think this city has not done its duty. We have over one hundred men, some wounded, and I think these men are entitled to a prominent place in the proceedings of the day. I am sure his highness would be pleased to see them.

Let us show to these men we are proud of them before it is too late. See what happened in one of our big cities the other day through forgetting about these men.

"O Canada" Our National Song

THE British National Anthem is the Imperial Anthem of Canada. It is played or sung at official functions, at the large social gatherings, at the close of entertainments, and so on; and at the sound of the first bar all present arise, or uncover, or exhibit some other mark of respect. But, in addition, Canada has a national anthem of her own, and to the playing or singing of this also public respect is shown. Instinctively Canadians realize when the Imperial Anthem is called for and when the national songs are appropriate. From the beginning of the present war the Imperial Anthem has been heard in Canada more than ever before. "God Save the King" is accepted, in Canada, as it is played and sung in the United Kingdom and throughout the British Empire. "O Canada!" is the finest of our national songs and may be called our National Anthem, but it varies greatly as to words. There are many versions of the original, and each version has its supporters, but since the aim of every revisionist, new and old, seems to be the attainment of a single ideal, namely, the giving of the fullest possible expression to patriotic devotion, there should be no complaint among the sons and daughters of Canada on this score.

There is, nevertheless, no end of room for controversy, just as, south of the line, apparently irreconcilable differences of opinion obtain with regard to the merits of the rivals in the National Anthem field. The same difficulty presents itself in both countries, that of finding anything in verse with a sufficient appeal at once to national idealism and popular sentiment. A national song may be ever so fine from a technical point of view, and yet fail to meet the popular taste; or, it may win popular approval and yet fail utterly as a dignified or adequate expression of national sentiment. Again, it may be adequate and dignified with regard to one section or one element of the country, and fail to reflect the emotions or ideals of another section or element.

Canadians are apparently very nearly a unit in accepting the air of their national anthem, although there are some who differ, as for instance, Arthur Stringer, who not long ago, in MacLean's Magazine, ventured to point out what he claimed were serious shortcomings in the tune. Since then a letter has been received from "Sapper R. Smith, Canadian Engineers, somewhere in France," in which "O Canada!" is defended with all the ardor of one who has gone into action under its inspiration. Mr. Stringer had criticized the anthem on the ground that its air was dirgelike. Says Sapper R. Smith: "If Arthur Stringer could stand beside the 'Road to Glory' on which troops march to the Somme and hear company after company stumbling by in the dark to the lilt of 'O Canada!' while the whole country is a mass of flashes and the thunder of the guns keeps the ground all a-tremble, and every one of those half-seen figures, grotesquely burdened with his overland kit, is just a boy thinking of the morning and the home he'll probably never again see, then I think Arthur Stringer would forget that dirge stuff."

A recent participant in the "O Canada!" controversy, Herbert Sanders of Ottawa, after claiming for the anthem a full measure of musical merit, and joining in the common verdict that it is an air peculiarly suited to the crowd, had this to say: "It is a pity that there are so many versions of words set to our new national tune, but it is unlikely that any official act can rectify this undesirable condition." Time can, however, do what no act of Parliament can accomplish. The process of elimination is already going on, and there are certain stanzas to which the Canadian public is showing an unmistakable preference. One of these, from a version composed by Richardson and sung with excellent effect by the Sheffield choir, gives utterance to the universal appeal which the people of the Dominion are seeking to express:

Altar and throne command our sacred love,
And mankind to us shall ever brothers prove;
O King of Kings, with Thy mighty breath
All our sons do Thou inspire,
May no craven terror of life or death
E'er damp the patriots' fire.
Our mighty call—loudly shall ring
As in the days of old "For Christ and the King."
As in the days of old "For Christ and the King."

CANADA AND THE WAR.

A Letter That Has Been Much Discussed in England.

Under the heading "Canada and the War," a writer signing himself "Maple Leaf," has contributed a column to The London Evening Standard, which should help to clear up some present misconceptions in the Old Land as to Canada's position. Replying to "The Londoner," a writer who stated in the press that "some fifty per cent. of the people of Canada have given their all, but the remainder appear to take only a lukewarm interest in the war," "Maple Leaf" says in substance that Canada stands in a very different position from Australia, whose population is almost entirely of British extraction, citing the large American and European population in the west, where thinking imperially is not a sudden conversion, like Bethmann-Hollweg's new submarine policy; also there are a million and a half French Canadians whose nerves have been rasped to supersensitiveness by demagogues on the language question, and are practically excluded from recruiting possibilities. In the last eighteen months or so, from Canada's residue of British population and those of extraction totalling five millions, the contribution has been about one in twelve of the total population of men, women and children. He declares the climate, situation, and close influence of the United States have developed a system of life less in accord with that of the Motherland than that of the other Dominions, and says that thousands of ardent young Canadians have been prevented from enlisting by parents on account of the opportunity to obtain liquor near camps in England, and the presence of undesirable women about the camps. He concludes that Canadians became impatient at Asquith's dilatory tactics and the blunders as regards Antwerp, the Dardanelles, Mesopotamia, Roumania, and Greece, and finally expressed their disapproval by a falling off in recruiting, but he concludes that Canada will, after all, prove herself true.

A Minister's Salary in 1756.

According to an account book of the Second parish in Falmouth, Me., dating back to 1755, which is in the possession of Henry S. Thrasher of Portland, the minister received $31,33 for preaching seven Sundays. His salary for the year 1756 was $400, and the salary of Widow Elwell the same year for taking care of the meeting house was $6.66.

A Famous Old Structure.

Santa Barbara, probably the most visited of all the California missions, presents a perfect example in stone of the mission style of architecture. Established Dec. 4, 1786, this is the only mission still in the hands of the Franciscans, who founded them all. This structure is situated in the city of Santa Barbara, in the foothills, two miles from the ocean.

FOUR DOCTORS DISAGREED

Pains Disappeared After Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Wilmington, Del.—"I was suffering from a terrible backache and pains in my side, with bearing down pains and was very nervous. I was always tired, always drowsy, never could get enough sleep and could not eat. I had four doctors and each told me something different. I read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it. I got good results and I now feel better than I have felt for years and I am gaining in weight. I can gladly recommend it to all women."—Mrs. GEORGE W. SEBOLD, 1611 West 4th Street, Wilmington, Del.

Backache and bearing down pains are danger signals which every woman should heed. Remove the cause of these aches and pains by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, that good old root and herb medicine. Thousands of women have testified to its virtues.

For forty years it has been making women strong, curing backache, nervousness, ulceration and inflammation, weakness, displacements, irregularity and periodic pain.

NEWEST MILLINERY.

Some Distinctive Points About Spring Hats.

Following the lead established during the winter, many of the new shapes are repetitions or adaptations of models built on Turkish lines in fez effect or on the contour of the Russian turban. Then there are hats that for want of a better name are termed Egyptian. Usually they have a veil accessory, which forms the chief trimming.

The large hats maintain sailor lines. Some of them have a rolled brim, which may turn backward from the face or from one side. There are those, too, which are turned up at the back somewhat after the manner of the poke. The so called Breton sailor shows the brim of irregular width, somewhat narrower in front and back than at the sides, and the brim may be slightly bent up almost anywhere it proves becoming or suits the fancy of the possessor.

One must not forget mention of the dressy hats which are named for Marie Antoinette. For the last four or five years it has become the custom of foreign modistes to bring out a hat flat in shape and mounted on a bandeau which tilts the hat itself forward on the face and presents most of the trimming under the brim at the back.

Sometimes this type of hat has the appellation "shepherdess," or it may be termed "sixteenth century" or "Watteau." No matter what the official title, the hat in its modern representation is suited only to the few, and those few must take heed to wear it only on special occasions with the lingerie frock or the dainty gown of chiffon or summer silk.

Other than the Japanese and Chinese motifs there are trimmings of wooden beads colored in Indian effects and laid on in rows about the crown of the hat. It is very likely that a lot of the Indian beads will reproduce the colors and designs of the Aztec tribes. Indeed, not a few of the patterns suggest the totem poles of the American aborigines. All this adds to the gayety of millinery models as well as a historic interest if one is inclined that way.

The mushroom shape varies the monotony of the straight brim sailor. It is a bit smarter and less tailored in its suggestion. It is to be had in colored leghorn, sometimes combined with georgette crape, satin or taffeta. There are also mushroom hats entirely of satin, with the exception of the band, which is generally of straw.

A LOST UTOPIA.

Mariners From the Dominion Visit Tropical Island.

The story of an island that nobody owns, an island dropped out of the pockets of struggling Great Britain and picked up by no one; an island where the only wars are those of the long-tailed squawking parakeets in the tops of the palm trees, where the only shells that ever drop are cocoanut shells, tossed down by frolicking monkeys; where the beach is of pink coral dust; there everyone is prosperous, there is no road tax, or war tax, or any kind of a tax, and no government to need a tax, and no laws to need a government, and no misbehavers to need a law. Such a story in the midst of submarine alarms, came placidly bobbing to Brooklyn on the tiny cocoanut schooner Canada, sailed by marines from our Dominion, which was discharging her cargo of juicy nuts at Atlantic Basin recently.

The Canada left Philadelphia three months ago for a cruise among the coral islands off the coast of Honduras and Guatemala. She drifted about from one to the other on the summer breezes of the Carribean, and when she had filled her hull with the brown nuts that most of us see only after they have been shaved up and put into pies or sprinkled on baker's cakes, she battened down her one little hatch and spent a couple of weeks cruising among the keys and atolls, looking for inhabited islands not on her regular sailing list.

Many of the coral keys showed traces of having once been inhabited; others were too small for anyone to live on. On one or two stood little villages of empty palm-leaf houses, nesting places now for sea birds. The bland climate had left even the prints of the bare feet of children in the sand floors of the little houses.

One of the few islands, big enough for any nation to want to own, was the Island of Roatan; it was inhabited, but according to the men on the cocoanut schooner, it has dropped between two owners and belongs to neither the one nor the other.

The people of Roatan told the sailors that the island once belonged to Great Britain, but that it had been sold to Guatemala. Guatemala had never paid for it and had never taken possession. The British Government officials left some time ago and no one has ever come to take their places.

The people of Roatan like being ownerless. Every family seems to have a little farm and one or two horses, and to be thoroughly prosperous, without having to work.

The cocoanuts ripen and fall, while the people, mixed Spanish and West Indian, picnic on the sand, and the only labor falling on the people is that of getting nuts peeled and down to the wharf when the schooners come.

The demand for cocoanut pie and cake in the civilized world keeps the market from ever becoming slack, and the Roatanians are able to live like the lilies in the Song of Solomon, toiling not nor spinning.

The Canada can carry a crew of only men, and there are no passenger accommodations on board. There is no tourist line running to the islands, and if tired, war-weary people want to go there they will have either to supply their own boats or swim.

PREPARING THE SOIL

First Things to Do in Getting the Garden Ready.

FEW TOOLS ARE NECESSARY

Information on Digging, Planting, and Transplanting Which Will Help the Amateur to Get Started Right.

(By S. C. JOHNSTON, Vegetable Specialist, Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

The soil is the workshop in which is found many of the constituents which go to make up plant food. These foods must be so treated that they will be in such a condition that they may be readily taken up by the slender rootlets of the plant so that the plant will thrive and mature.

If possible add some manure to your soil and work it up well before planting time. This manure may be obtained possibly from various sources close to your home; livery stables or firms dealing entirely with manure would be willing to supply it at a reasonable rate. On heavy soils it is particularly recommended that heavy applications be made in order that the soil will be of a much finer condition so that it will retain a large quantity of plant food. Many of the garden soils will be benefited by the application of lime. This may be secured from various sources such as the contractor and builder, lime and cement dealers, and may be in the form of fresh lime or even slaked lime. This lime should be scattered over the surface of the soil after the digging has taken place, and a sufficient amount should be applied to make the surface of the ground fairly white. This should be gently raked into the soil just previous to the planting of the seed.

DIGGING. It is necessary in all gardens that the soil be turned over at one time or another during the early spring in order that it may become dry and fined. We find that many of the troubles of the back yard gardens are caused by digging the soil too early in the spring. One of the easiest ways to tell when the soil is ready for digging is to gather a handful and press the fingers over it. If the soil in the hand sets in a somewhat compact mass the time is not far enough advanced for commencing digging. If, however, the soil falls apart into several small parts we may rest assured that it is perfectly safe to dig.

TOOLS. It is unnecessary for the backyard gardener to purchase many tools for this first garden. Those who have been growing vegetables in their backyard for a number of years gradually add to their supply until after three or four years they have accumulated many special tools which are suited for particular operations in the garden. Complaints are sometimes heard that the expense necessary to commence a backyard garden is very great. Many very good backyard gardens have been made and excellent harvests obtained with very few and comparatively inexpensive tools. A digging fork or spade, a rake, and a hoe are about all the tools essential at the outset, and these are inexpensive.

PLANTING OF SEEDS. When it has been determined that the soil is suitable for digging and the weather is nice and warm, it is necessary that the seeds be planted in the garden. As fine a surface as possible should be secured, so that the little seeds will quickly germinate and grow. To sow the seeds quickly, evenly, and thinly requires considerable practice and care. The row may be made straight by stretching fairly tight a piece of string from one portion of the garden to another and using this as a guide for making the trenches or drills for placing the seeds in. After the seeds have been dropped in they should at once be covered with soil by gently drawing some of the loose surface soil in over the seeds with a piece of stick or with the hands. This soil should, however, not be heaped up over the row but should be placed evenly with the rest of the garden soil and packed down.

THINNING. Backyard gardeners should not attempt to grow immense quantities at first. It is necessary to plant sufficient seed to secure a good crop of plants, the more slender plants being thinned out soon after they are above ground so as to assure reasonable room for a good crop of healthier plants. The thinning should be commenced when the plants are from one to two inches in height and should not be left until the plants have become long and slender, because if they are left one plant simply tries to smother another one out; whereas, if they are thinned to the proper distance they will have room to grow to their required size of maturity.

TRANSPLANTING. The city dweller will find it almost impossible to grow plants of first-class quality of such vegetables as tomatoes, celery, or cabbages unless he has other appliances such as a hot-bed, which enables him to start the seeds very early in the spring and some time before they could have been planted out in the garden, in order that he may secure early crops. It is good practice for him to purchase plants which may be taken to the backyard garden and transplanted or set out in the garden at a required distance and good healthy crops grown from them, and in all cases when purchasing plants only sturdy and vigorous growing plants should be accepted. Tomato plants to give the best results should be eight inches high, and the stalk should be at least as thick as a lead pencil and thicker if possible. If the plants already are in bloom this may be considered a very good feature. The root system of the plants should be large and having fine rootlets. When transplanting individual plants care should be taken to make sure that quite a good deal of soil is left around the root of each plant

The earliest known almanac devoted expressly to the year of issue was published by Rabelais in 1533.

April Fool.

In France the April fool is called "poisson d'Avril"—a silly fish—and in Scotland a "gowk."

Origin of the Word "Pagan."

The Latin word from which pagan is derived originally meant a fountain or spring; then the village which sprang up around it, and finally the residents of the village. As Christianity took strong root at first in the large centers of population and the worship of the pagan deities lingered longest in the country and among the country villages, it came to be understood that a pagan or villager was, in virtue of his residence, a worshiper of the old gods, and thus the term acquired its present significance.

SAVE but HOW?

You are daily admonished by Bankers, Cabinet Ministers, Judges, and by all the Press of the Country, to save and be thrifty. In fact, the stamps on our letters are cancelled by the admonition to "Save, Save, Save, etc."

Outside of the Bankers' Association, who have recommended the Banks, very few other suggestions have been made.

Why has no person suggested or recommended the greatest thrift producer and the greatest anti-poverty institution known to the Public?

For instance, let us suppose two thousand men at say age 25 propose to test this principle for say twenty years, and one half of them invest a small sum annually in a bank and the other thousand deposit an equal amount annually with this anti poverty institution. Now, if I can show you that those who deposited with the anti-poverty institution not only received more than those who deposited in the bank, but that the anti poverty institution paid to the beneficiaries of the unfortunate depositors who were unable to continue their payments, the large additional sum of $159,000.00 which the banks kept for their stockholders, WOULD THAT INTEREST YOU?

The banks are all right, but if I can show you that this anti-poverty institution not only gave better security and actually gave better returns, but in addition they gave a Bond that if anything unforeseen, such as Death, happen you, they would protect you and your estate to any extent desired, WOULD IT INTEREST YOU?

The above facts can be verified to you by calling at, 'phoning or writing the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada, 402 Water Street, and such action on your part places you under no obligation whatever.

PRESIDENT HARSTONE MAKES ANNUAL REPORT

What Was Done by Belgian Relief Fund in 1916.

The annual meeting of the Belgian Relief Fund was held on Monday afternoon, when the following report was submitted by Mr. R. Harstone, the president:

In presenting the annual report of the Fund, I shall endeavor to be as brief as possible and will merely mention in passing the outstanding features.

The organization, as you are aware, had its origin in a meeting of the citizens called by the Mayor in the City Council chamber on the 31st of January, 1916, to consider ways and means to render assistance to the starving and destitute people of Belgium. At this meeting Miss Peck, president of the Peterborough Progressive Club, and the ladies of the auxiliary were present.

It was pointed out to the meeting that the auxiliary had been contributing from time to time to the relief of the Belgians, but it was now felt that they could not meet the constant and growing demands under the present organization. It was therefore desired that an organization of the men of the city be formed to canvass and collect for the Fund.

Mr. Dan O'Connell, who was present at the meeting, assisted in forming the present organization.

The necessary officers were appointed and committees were formed.

At a meeting of the executive committee held in the T. A. S. rooms on the 9th of February, 1916, the ladies kindly undertook the collection of the subscriptions under the leadership of Mrs. Morris.

The Canvass.

The canvass of the city by the captains and their teams occurred on February 23-25, 1916. The result of the three days' canvass was very gratifying, the amount subscribed by the citizens reaching well beyond our objective of $10,000, the sum subscribed being $10,766.35. The City Council responded to the call for help in a most hearty manner with a subscription of $2000. We were favored with a splendid subscription of $100 from the Knights of Columbus, in addition to which we received a handsome subscription of $80 from the Red Cross. This made a total subscription to the fund of $12,946.35.

The number of individual subscribers is over 1,250. In addition to these we were generously supported by the various manufacturing concerns and business interests throughout the city.

Collection of the Fund.

The amount of the pledge cards for collection by the ladies as entered in the treasurer's book represent the sum of $323.80. The unpaid balance, as represented also in the treasurer's collection books amounts to $880.20 on April 12th. There have been some payments since, together with corrections in amounts pledged which will reduce this unpaid balance.

The number of individual pledges still unpaid in whole or in part represent approximately 195 names.

Distribution of Money

Your committee forwarded to the Central Committee in Montreal a cheque for $1000.

May 27, 1916—Purchased from Quaker Oats Co. 1000 sacks of flour representing a payment of $2875.01.

June 22, 1916—Purchased from Campbell Flour Mills 500 sacks of flour, representing $1425.00.

May 29, 1916—Peterborough Cereal Co., 598 sacks flour, representing $1689.35.

January 12, 1917—Cheque to the Central Committee, Montreal, $3600.

Paid expenses in connection with the fund during the year, $265.17.

Total amount paid out, $10,854.53.

In conclusion, I wish to emphasise the important duties performed by the ladies in the collection of the amounts pledged on the cards. They directed a portion of their time each month during the past year to this work. Collections have been well met, with a few exceptions, and the success of the fund is due in large measure to the thorough manner in which the ladies carried out their duties.

Are we to continue the good work? I feel confident the answer will be in the affirmative.

The citizens of Peterborough have done nobly in the past two and one-half years in the stress and strain of this world war. May we continue to do our part until victory is assured and peace and harmony shall prevail.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Aim of Pirate Warfare Is to Cripple the Allies When Peace Has Returned

THERE is no man in England who can, to-day, claim to speak with greater authority, in the name of Labor, than Mr. Arthur Henderson. Mr. Ramsay Macdonald, who at once succeeded and preceded him as head of the Labor Party, and Mr. Philip Snowden, the hope of the Independents, are both lost leaders. But Mr. Henderson, without their eloquence, and devoid of their emotions, holds straight on, in his course, despite shot or storm, like some great three-decker, of the old days, when fleets fought in the Atlantic. For some fourteen years this undemonstrative Scotsman has sat in Parliament, for the great Durham mining constituency of Barnard Castle, with the result that the boy who began life as a molder's apprentice, in the famous Stephenson works, at Newcastle, has grown to be the Privy Councilor, Cabinet Minister, and Member of Parliament, who is one of the tiny group of five men to whom the Empire has intrusted its destinies for the greatest war the world has ever seen. It is for these reasons that Mr. Henderson is so peculiarly entitled to speak in the name of the workers of the British Empire.

Mr. Henderson expresses the deliberate opinion that the German sea campaign, not only as far as belligerents, but even more as far as neutrals are concerned, is designed for the purpose of so reducing shipping as to more than counterbalance her own losses, during the war, and so to leave her mercantile fleet proportionately stronger than any other carrying fleet at the termination of hostilities. In support of this, it may be pointed out that, as the Dutch have insisted, the ships of the smaller neutral nations have been sunk indiscriminately. Dwelling on this aggravation of the offense, Mr. Henderson goes on to declare that the punishment for such a policy is one which Germany will eventually find to increase with its perpetration. It is practically an accepted fact, in the United Kingdom, that a bill of keel for keel shall be presented to Germany, at the termination of hostilities, and if this actually comes about, Germany will prove to have gained a temporary advantage at the expense of her eventual welfare on the high seas. The Allied nations, Mr. Henderson insists, have not the slightest intention of attempting the destruction of Germany as a great power, but they have every intention of proving to her, if they are able, that the effect of what they consider an immoral policy is one which pays neither in moral nor in material advantage.

ARTHUR HENDERSON, M.P.

The present war, however, Mr. Henderson clearly sees as an incident, colossal as it is, in the world's history. Like Sir Edward Grey, he realizes that if advantage cannot be taken of the present struggle, to prevent future struggles, nothing but a positively disastrous incident will be added to the experience of humanity. For this reason he welcomes warmly the proposal of a league to insure peace, in the days beyond the war. If this can be wrought out, he foresees a period when treaties amongst nations will take the place of statute law, and the moral and unwritten demands of Principle become the common law of mankind. The recent exchange of notes between President Wilson and the Foreign Office, in London, have resulted, he insists, in something more than a mere succes d'estime. Though, of course, they have not had, and could scarcely be expected to have an immediate and a direct result, they have, in his opinion, been distinctly indirectly beneficial, especially in regard to the fact that they have enabled the Allies to make clear their intention, that the peace shall only leave a condition of things which will prove to the most hardened disregarder of international law that such contempt can in no way prove profitable.

A DINNER FOR LOCAL AUTOISTS NEXT MONDAY

ARRANGING FOR PARADE AT MOTOR SHOW NEXT WEEK.

The Peterboro Automobile Association will hold a dinner for all the members on Monday evening, April 23rd, at p.m., at the Oriental Hotel, at 50c per plate. There are 125 members of the local association and every one of these are urgently requested to attend this dinner.

A general meeting of short duration will follow the dinner, the object of which is to get the membership as a whole interested in the advancement of the association, the coming season, and particularly in connection with the Motor Show of Thursday, Friday, and Saturday of next week.

The Motor Show Committee has been requested by the Red Cross to inaugurate the opening of the show with a motor parade to start about 7.30 p.m. Thursday evening, and terminate at the Armouries for the final opening of the exhibit.

It is hoped that every motor owner in the town will take part in the parade, and it is particularly urged upon every member of the association that they act as a committee of 125 enthusiasts to interest the other 175 motor owners to make the parade the greatest automobile event that Peterboro has ever seen. Let every member therefore come to the dinner.

MORE LICENSES WERE ISSUED

OVER 33,000 AUTO LICENSES HAVE BEEN SENT OUT.

Despite the lack of steel which prevented the manufacturers of auto license plates from having the plates ready at he time appointed, there have been a considerable number more licenses issued up to date this year than for the same time last year.

In 1916 there were 26,000 licenses issued by the middle of April, while up to date there have been 33,000 issued from the office at the Parliament Buildings, Toronto, and other places where the plates can be obtained.

It is thought that by the end of the month enough plates will be on hand to supply all that will be needed during the year.

HUM HOY FINED FIFTY DOLLARS THIS MORNING

FOR HAVING OPIUM IN HIS POSSESSION ILLEGALLY.

The police court this morning had the appearance of a real Chinatown, as it was the date set for the trial of the seventeen Orientals who were caught in a store at 385 Water St. when the police raided it on April. At the opening of the court Mr. G. S. Gordon, who appeared for the defendants, Hum Hoy and Jim Hum, entered a plea of "guilty" on behalf of Hum Hoy to the charge of having on April 8th, without lawful or reasonable excuse, in his possession at 385 Water St. a drug to wit, "Opium prepared for smoking, contrary to Section 4 of the Opium Drug Act."

Police Magistrate Dumble imposed a fine of $50.00, or three months in jail.

The taking of the evidence in the charge against Jim Hum was then proceeded with, and it was a very interesting procedure to hear the witnesses for the Crown tell what they knew about the use of the drug by what is commonly called "hitting the pipe." After hearing the evidence and argument the magistrate reserved judgment.

The charges against all the 17 defendants for gambling on Sunday afternoon is being heard this afternoon.

When the police took possession of certain articles at the store, there were two crocks found which it had since been ascertained contain some kind of a Chinese refreshment. License Inspector Stewart has laid informations for having intoxicating beverages in a place other than a residence.

Hydro rates were reduced in Brantford so as to cause a net saving to consumers of $9,000 for the year.

ORVILLE MOORE JOINS AIR CORPS

LEAVES AT ONCE TO TAKE UP NEW DUTIES.

Mr. Orville Moore, son of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Moore, Aylmer street who a short time ago passed his qualifying examination for the Royal Naval Air Service, received word today to report at once to Ottawa prepared to at once proceed for duty overseas. Orville will be greatly missed at the Banks garage, where he has been employed as salesman for the past two years, and the customers of the firm wish him every success in his wish to do his bit for King and country.

He expects to sail in company with a number of other successful candidates for the service next Wednesday.

The Fortress of Ham.

It was in the old fortress at Ham that France's last Emperor was a prisoner for many years. After Napoleon's downfall at Waterloo a Bonaparte was as popular with the succeeding French kings as Jim the Penman with banks presidents. So Louis Napoleon Bonaparte, heir to the Little Corporal's dynasty, was first banished and then shut up at Ham. He escaped from that place after fixing up a dummy in his bed to fool the attendants and putting on the clothes of a carpenter. He walked through the prison gates with a piece of timber on his shoulder, went to Paris, was elected president, made himself emperor, and was snuffed out finally at Sedan. It was Ham from which the routed Germans fled recently and whose fathers were his own conquerors that Napoleon III. found himself another man of destiny. And for a couple of decades it seemed as if he were.

MORE PAY FOR THE DISABLED

RETURNED SOLDIERS IN TRAINING TO GET $1 A DAY.

OTTAWA, April 18. An increase of the subsistence allowance for disabled soldiers in training for new occupations from 60c to $1.00 a day—has been decided on by the Government at the request of the Military Hospitals Commission. By the same order-in-Council which embodies that decision men of the naval and flying services are brought into the scheme of training on the same footing with land fighters; a single single man is to get $8 a month pocket money, besides his maintenance, like the married men; and the allowance for dependent kinsfolk are extended to relatives who have not been drawing separation allowances.

NO NOTE OF CONTROVERSY HEARD AT MASS MEETING

..e women propose to form an association of their own and be absolutely independent and sit on the fence, then their action won't be popular. They cannot be independent of party, as if all did that there would be no one to represent the people at all, no Commons, no Senate — everyone waiting for someone to take action that could be criticized.

There have been schools of thought, but never schools of independence. Unless you belong to a party, you belong to nothing. If you are not for us, you are against us. People who are not hot or cold are of no use to the State, but just ready to throw bricks, and never help. The time for people to be independent was before the act was committed, and not after it was done.

Just Take Part.

The women had asked for the vote so that they might take part in the affairs of State, and whether or not they became an influence depended on the response to the invitation to share the responsibilites of the Government. If they propose to establish themselves as a class, men will do likewise; then there will be conflict instead of co-operation.

Referring to the election meetings of the past, the member for West Peterborough felt sure that the day of obstreperousness and cat-calls was gone. Henceforth there must be order at elections or there will be trouble. He expected that lots of meetings would end up in a mutual admiration society. This is no joke. We have equal suffrage and we have got to put up with it. Unless the women are prepared to co-operate they will excite the suspicions of the men. Wives will be against husbands and families will be divided.

The mere men of the Conservative party invite the ladies to lend a hand in the purification of the State and the downfall of our enemies.

Miss Constance Boulton.

Miss Constance Boulton had tried very hard to make up her mind just what to say to the women of Peterborough. Mr. Burnham had chased ideas away. She had been overwhelmed and appalled at the responsibilities that Premier Hearst had placed upon the women. For the past two years her heart and soul had been in the war. Since the war began she had hardly dared to speak on woman suffrage. The winning of the war was more important, and it was hard for her to pin herself down to a speech on the votes for women question without referring to the war. She had never dreamed that Premier Hearst was going to give women the vote, in fact she was afraid that a Conservative Government would not, and she did not want the Liberals to do it, as they had denied an emergency to the British Empire in 1913.

With the splendid British Navy standing between us and the enemy, Australia and New Zealand with battleships for their own protection, Canada was not there. Before the United States came into the war Canada was glad of the protection of Japanese ships on her western coast. These were some of the things that the women were thinking about. Some people had said that a woman's place was at home. She was sorry for a woman who had not a home.

By tradition, education and affiliation she was a Conservative, and people would say she could not possibly be a Conservative because she was a suffragist. The reason she had advocated woman suffrage was because of the things she believed in first, "duty to work for the country" and "Imperial unity in the British Empire." The women could do better with the vote than without it.

Get Down to Business.

The woman have the suffrage and all stupid arguments against it have been set aside, and it was now the duty of the women to accept the responsibility and get down to business. Women must proceed to fit themselves in order to vote. The men of Canada had the vote thrown at them when they were twenty-one years of age. Men in the old days had to fight for it, and when they finally got it hey were not prepared to use the vote.

Some women were not ready for it now, but thinking women would soon fit themselves for their new responsibility. Voters who did not use their franchise should be ashamed of themselves. The vote is a sacred thing, and our country is the most sacred thing we possess. Canadian women should follow the example of their Australian sisters, ninety per cent of whom turned out to vote at the first election after enfranchisement had been granted. They would be the power behind the throne. Men had made reforms, but there were more reforms to come.

Pledges Support.

Miss Boulton hoped that all would realize what it meant to be a country in the British Empire with its glory and splendor. She was proud to belong to that Government that had responded to the call for men in August of 1914. Men and money had been sent and Canadian blood shed for the honor of the British Empire. We were in it at the first, and she twitted the United States for waiting three years before getting into the fray. The war was colossal, and she pledged loyalty to that Government that had so unshrinkingly tackled the problems confronting it. Canada with its 8,000,000 population was the marvel of the world today. She had done great things, and the speaker was proud to be taken into the body politic of the government of Canada.

Produce, Produce.

The threat of a world famine in 1918 would be met by an increased production in Canada this year and the next. Everyone must do his or her part to help produce, produce, produce. We must not put the burdens of the war on the future, but prepare to handle them ourselves. People had not yet realized the full meaning of war, and she was strong for compulsory military education of the young men.

In conclusion, she asked that the women co-operate with the men, get their advice, and they could do better by joining the party they had the most sympathy with and the one they thought lived up to the best ideals. See that the great central aim is to do nothing that will loosen the tie that binds us so closely to the British Empire.

Hon. W. D. McPherson, Provincial Secretary, appreciated very much the invitation from the executive of the Conservative Association to address a meeting in West Peterborough. He congratulated Miss Boulton and Captain Burnham on their admirable addresses and pointed out that the address of Miss Boulton was evidence of the capabilities of a woman. He had been a member of the Legislature for many years, and for a short time a member of the Cabinet. For some time there had been a desire in certain quarters on the part of women for the right to vote. Other quarters did not want it. The Government had considered the matter very thoroughly and had reviewed the extension of the franchise. Ninety years ago the franchise was narrow and restricted, but gradually it had been extended until at the last election every male of 21 years of age and a British subject could vote; and at the next election the same privilege would be enjoyed by the women. On every change the liberties of the people had been made more substantial and more secure.

He was not going into the Genesis of the question, but he did want to compare Canada with other countries and you cannot find a more advanced people than in the Dominion of Canada. The Province of Ontario on short notice had enacted the measure whereby every women of 21 years will be a qualified voter on equal terms with the men. Some thought that it should have been submitted to the people, but he knew from the results in municipal elections that the people wanted the women to vote, and the Government had concluded that the time was opportune to extend the franchise, and it had passed without opposition, and last Thursday had received the assent of the King through the Lieutenant-Governor.

What Difference?

How will the women use the franchise? What is the essential difference, if any, between the interests of the men and those of the women? We are all human, live happily together, a big family, all citizens of Canada, for a long or short period as God saw fit to grant us. It was our duty to leave things a little better than we found them.

He wondered why the question was ever raised that he women would array themselves on one side and the men on the other. In all countries the people are arrayed as for or against the government. How is it with the men today? Sons are not always found following the political opinions of their fathers slavishly. Some belong to the Liberal party, some are Conservative. And it will be the same with the women. They will be attracted by the measures of which they approve and support. It is surprising how little our parliamentary affairs interest the people. In West Peterborough we have a Liberal and a Conservative Association, and not more than ten per cent. of the voters on either side belong to them. When the election comes on the association calls a convention, the rank and file turn out and make up their minds whom they will support.

He hoped that the introduction of women into the association would result in a different state of affairs. They were mentally the equal of men and would be able to cast an intelligent vote when an election was called.

Placed on Voters' List.

The system the Ontario Government had adopted so that the women would be placed on the voters' list by enumerators was explained. It was impossible for the party to manipulate the lists to the unfair advantage of their opponents. The judicial officers of each county had the appointment of enumerators in their hands and the lists would be prepared as soon as the House was dissolved. When the lists had been posted and omissions found, a day would be fixed for an appeal to the judicial officers, and if no objection was made the name would be added. The list would thus be up to date, and he hoped would meet with the approval of all.

During the recent session some of the most important legislation since Confederation had passed the House. The concurrence of the Opposition in agreeing not to have any bye-elections until the general election was held was referred to. All our minds were devoted to the question of how to win the war.

Canada's Proud Position.

The proud position which Canada occupies in the minds of the people of the world was marked. There never was a time such as the present moment. Added lustre to Canada had been given by the records of the last day or two when Gen. Sir Douglas Haig had given the Canadian troops the responsibility of taking Vimy Ridge. The penalty had been great, and if any of the relatives of the men who had fallen were present he extended the country's sympathy to them.

The Provincial Secretary appealed to all to be thrifty and join in the splendid work which had been undertaken by the Resources Committee. Help greater production, curb extravagances so as to be able to forward men, money and munitions to the men overseas. Show them that we are behind them in the fight for humanity, civilization and liberty.

Col. J. W. Miller and Mr. Charles McClelland moved a very hearty vote of thanks to the speakers, which was tendered by President Moore, and the meeting closed with the National Anthem.

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

A GREAT VICTORY

At one time the fitting of eyes with glasses that were best suited to give the best aid to defective eyesight was largely a matter of guesswork. It resulted in a great deal of dissatisfaction and worry, but with Dr. Fowler's modern optical equipment, the diagnosis resulting from the test is absolutely correct, and efficient service is guaranteed. Science has triumphed over haphazard methods to a remarkable degree.

For Home Service

"We should send overseas with as little delay as possible the troops now in Canada which have enlisted for overseas service".

CANADA

"It is necessary that the country should not be left without an adequate force for home defence in case of emergency".
SIR EDWARD KEMP,
Minister of Militia and Defence.

HERE IS YOUR CHANCE—
You Men Who Cannot Go Overseas

Take these two statements above and you will realize your opportunity. Who will enlist for Home Defence, and release a trained soldier, ready and anxious to fight in France?

You can stay in Canada, yet serve the Empire in its greatest trial. In this day, when every man is needed, you can help to provide adequately for home protection by enlisting in the

Canadian Defence Force

The term of enlistment, training, equipment and clothing are the same as for overseas service. Pay the same as that for Militia on Active Service. Separation allowances for married men in addition to pay.

Enlist now in the Canadian Defence Force if you are between 18 and 45, physically fit, and anxious to serve to the best of your ability.

For full particulars enquire at Armories of the Regiments listed below.

MEN STILL REQUIRED FOR OVERSEAS IN THE CANADIAN EXPEDITIONARY FORCES.

More men are required for reinforcements at the Front. Those who desire to volunteer for Overseas service may enlist through one of the regiments ordered to mobilize for Home Defence.

IRISH OPPOSED TO EXTENSION

NATIONALISTS SEEM TO BE INTENT ON FORCING AN ELECTION.

LONDON, April 17.—Bonar Law, in the House of Commons, this afternoon moved the second reading of the bill to extend the life of Parliament until the end of November, said the British troops were engaged in the greatest operation since the commencement of the war, and were meeting with success which exceeded his expectations. It would be highly disadvantageous if the country should be plunged into the turmoil of an election with the possibility of division and certainly the energies of the nation would be diverted from the prosecution of the war.

At a meeting of the Irish Nationalist party it was decided to oppose the bill for the extension of the life of Parliament.

EMPLOYES TO BE PENSIONED

BELL TELEPHONE COMPANY INTRODUCE A NEW SYSTEM.

The Bell Telephone Company is establishing a pension and employes' sick benefit fund which will go into effect July 1 next. When established each of the 9,000 employes who have been notified will benefit by the fund. The fund will be administered by five officials of the company.

In brief the plan includes the following: Employes whose age is 60 years or more (females 55 or more) and whose term of employment has been 20 years or more may be retired on pensions either at their own request or at the discretion of the committee.

Employes whose age is 55 to 59 years (females 50 to 54), and whose term of employment has been 25 years or more, as well as those whose age is less than 55 years (females less than 50), and whose term of employment has been 30 years or more, may be retired on pension only at the discretion of the committee.

Fifteen years' service entitles one totally disabled to pension for such a period as the committee may decide. The pension in the above cases is 1 per cent. of the average annual pay for ten years. Employes who reach 70 years of age shall retire from the company's service.

SICK DISABILITY BENEFIT

From two to ten years full pay, from 4 to 13 weeks, from 9 to 39 weeks, half pay.

Benefits are not to be allowed for sickness of employes of less than two years' service.

Death benefits are payable only to wife (or husband), or dependent relatives of deceased employes.

Stupid Foreign Policy
Pursued by the Germans
Causes Many Disasters

WHEN Dr. Alfred Zimmerman became Foreign Minister for Germany, the world looked on to see if he would show any modern and enlightened tendencies. Zimmerman has proved himself utterly Prussian in his mental qualities. Imperial Germany's low estimate of human nature and her belief that peoples could be ignored have not resulted uniformly in failure for her; in fact, she has scored some notable successes thereby, but the successes are greatly outweighed by the failures. The net result is so discouraging as to suggest that the time has arrived for a complete revision of ideas at Berlin. These two opinions have been the mainspring of German policy. Their most colossal and reverberating crash has come about in Russia, but they have been split to ruins in other countries, too, and as Germany stands amid the wreckage of her Russian policy she may come to think at last that there has been something fundamental about her mistake. Napoleon's error, by which he fell, was his belief that outside of France peoples could be ignored, and it was necessary only to bribe or bully thrones. When the peoples slowly rose at last he misunderstood the phenomenon because he had never made provision in his calculations for such a possibility, and he never did come to an understanding of it. The Hohenzollern imperium has the same idea, joined to another—also quasi-Napoleonic and erroneous—that outside of Germany everybody has his price.

There is no denying that this double error has sometimes been applied with results which have convinced Germany that it is no error at all. That is simply because there are some people who have a price, and because there are some nations in which, for a time at least, the people do not count. The day when Germany should discover that her theory was an error has been postponed by disastrous successes in its application. As long as it worked so well in Greece, for instance, there was no use telling Germany that the theory was erroneous. In the presence of so gigantic a failure as that in Russia, however, it becomes possible, one may hope, to obtain a German audience for that information.

The Napoleonic theory about dealing with a throne and ignoring a people, applied with such limitless trust by Germany in the case of Russia, has simply resulted in overturning a throne and giving Germany what, so far as power to harm her is concerned, is actually a new enemy. If it is true that it was only the Czar who kept Constantine on his throne, the failure in Russia will be succeeded promptly by one in Greece. The theory worked out well in Turkey and Bulgaria. It failed in Italy, where both branches of the double-headed error were confidently employed. In the United States the first of the Napoleonic postulates was never invoked, there being no throne, but the second has had exasperating, though useless, illustration. The irresponsible innocence with which Zimmerman proposed to influence Japan and Mexico by the second of the Napoleonic postulates —that everybody has his price—demonstrated a blind German faith in the double theory which is as pathetically touching as that of a fortune-teller's clients. Belgium, too, was to be bribed; England was besought to consider her own interests instead of the obligations of a "scrap of paper"; and the failure of the late attempt to bribe Spain into acquiescence in the U-boat war shows that Germany has learned nothing on this score.

Merely Incidental.

Children.

The talkative young father concluded a tiresome anecdote purporting to show the cuteness of his baby. It was the last of five such, each of which had been more wearisome than its predecessor. "Smart, eh?" he chortled. The long suffering listener grabbed the other by the lapel and held him. "Reminds me," he said, "of one of my children. He remarked to me the other day, 'Pop, you talk a whole lot, but you never say anything.'"

"My, that was bright! How old is he?"

"Only twenty-three years old."—Catholic Standard and Times.

"So you are still gambling? Boy, you have broken your old father's heart."

"But, dad, I broke the bank."

"Broke the bank! Well, your disobedience need not make any break in our family relations."—Los Angeles Express.

"I shall never speak to George Welldone again. I used to think he was a gentleman, but his wife and I had a confidential talk today, and the things she told me about him have convinced me that he is not fit to associate with respectable people."

C.G.E. BOWLERS TAKE TWO GAMES FROM KING PINS

INTERESTING PLAY DURING LAST NIGHT'S CONTESTS.

The Water street alleys was the scene of three interesting games last night when the King Pins succeeded in taking the last game from the C. G. E. team. The Electrical team won the first two games, and put on an expert bowler for the last contest, but the King Pins were not to be denied and came through with flying colors, rolling 852. Nicoll, Somerville and Fielder of the C. G. E. were over the 500 mark, while Stewart, Moffatt and Solomon performed in a like manner for the King Pins. Difficult spares were made by Stewart, Phillips, Ross and Solomon of the King Pins, and by Somerville of the C. G. E. team. The treat of the evening was the exhibition of bowling put up by Mr. Jardine of the C.G.E. He had lots of "juice" on the ball, and the "battery" of pins suffered heavily as a result. Nicoll, of the C. G. E. had high three games with a 558 count, also the high single of 209. Fielder being a close second with 538 for three games. Moffatt "shaved" the pins for a total of 528, and walked off with a count for high single for the King Pins of 205.

The score:

KING PINS
Stewart	160	151	189	500
Phillips	120	154	143	417

O.H.A. TO SEND BOYS TO RESCUE

RESIDENCE RULE IS TO BE SUSPENDED IN CASE OF FARM HELPERS.

J. Ross Robertson, chairman of the sub-committee of the Ontario Hockey Association, announced yesterday that the O.H.A. will suspend the operation of the August the first residence rule in the case of High school boys and others who become members of the Farm Service Corps in the Province of Ontario, or any other province, and assist in the greater food production movement in Canada. The boys will be released from school at the end of this week for work on farms, provided they agree to remain and work on the farms for at least three months.

ROMANTIC CAREER ENDED

Soldier Killed Who Once Fought For the Turks

A romantic career has been closed by the death in action of Mr. Herbert Gerald Montagu while serving as a private in the Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire Light Infantry. Mr. Montagu came into prominence during the war between Turkey and Italy, in which he fought with the Turks as a volunteer. A stir was caused by criticisms of Italian methods of warfare which he cabled home from [illegible]poli. Questions were asked in Parliament, and Mr Montagu, who was then a second lieutenant on probation in the 5th Special Reserve Battalion Royal Fusiliers, was notified that his commission was cancelled. Invalided from Tripoli, he went to Constantinople, where he was decorated by the Sultan in recognition of the gallantry he had shown in the field.

In the present war Mr. Montagu, as a lieutenant of the Munster Fusiliers, took part in the Suvla Bay landing and other operations on the Gallipoli Peninsula. In the autumn of 1915 he returned to England suffering from wounds and nervous breakdown, and, owing to his illness, he resigned his commission. When he became fit for active service again he joined the Oxford and Bucks Light Infantry as a private.

Visored Hun in Action

After the steel helmet comes the visored casque. Germans in the trenches are now wearing shields to protect their faces against projectiles. The visored helmet is of steel, fastened by two belts of leather crossing behind the head, one going around the neck, the other over the temples. It is pierced by two small holes at the height of the eyes, and its lower edge is rolled over to the right, so as not to get in the way when shooting their rifles.

KNOW VALUE OF YOUR COW

The first and foremost essential for a profitable dairy is to know what each individual cow in the herd is doing. The question, "is it paying a reasonable profit?" is all-important. This question can be answered definitely only by the use of a milk scale and a tester. Each milking should be weighed and a record of the weight kept. A sample should be taken of each milking, and once a week during the hot weather and once every two weeks during the cooler weather, a test of the accumulated samples should be made for butter fat. For a few cents, preservative tablets can be obtained which will keep the samples of milk in condition so that a test can be made properly.

THEY CAN'T FORGET!

Extraordinary Feats of Memory by Famous Persons

It is a common complaint about people that they cannot remember things, but there are people in the world who seem unable to forget anything that has once entered their brain. Mr. Winston Churchill could tell the name, tonnage, and gun calibre of every ship in the navy without referring to any document.

But his memory is not equal to his father's. Lord Randolph Churchill could walk along the longest street in London—say, Oxford Street—and then repeat the names of all the shop signs in order, either way, on both sides. It is also said that he could repeat Macaulay's trick of reading a page of ads. from a newspaper and reeling them off from memory!

The possession of a freak memory was revealed in a trial for robbery at Melbourne. The accused man declared that when the crime was committed he was in the hut of a man named Lane hearing him recite Walpole's "Old English Baron," which occupied two hours and a half in delivery. The jury disbelieved him, and Lane was called to prove that he was capable of such a feat. This he did, and his friend was discharged.

The blind hymn writer, Fanny Crosby, who immortalized herself with "Safe, in the Arms of Jesus," was capable of the most amazing exhibitions of "inability to forget." On one occasion she contracted to supply a publisher with ninety hymns. She composed forty-five of these, simply storing them in her memory without committing a word to paper. When she had finished the forty-fifth she began to dictate them, going right through without a pause. She then did the same with the other forty-five.

DUMB WEATHER PROPHETS

Bees and Spiders, Ducks and Geese Can Teach

The spider is an excellent guide to the weather. Not only is he extremely sensitive to the state of the atmosphere, but he takes a keen interest in the habits of flying insects. He knows that these do not come out in the wet. When, therefore, he is "resting," you may be certain that he is expecting rain. But should he be busy constructing a new web it is a sign that he is looking forward to a fine spell—and he is generally right.

If ducks or geese are expecting bad weather they dash water over their backs. They do this to prevent the first few drops of rain penetrating to their bodies through the dry, open feathers. It is a sign that fine weather is going to continue for some time when bees wander far away from their hives. Owls screaming in bad weather is a sign that a change for the better is near at hand.

BLIND SOLDIER CLERK

Employer Well Satisfied With St. Dunstan's Pupil

The first blinded soldier shorthand typist to be sent out from St. Dunstan's after eight months' training finished his first month's work as a city clerk. Harold Flett, who was blinded at the Dardanelles with the 7th Manchesters in June, 1915, became employed by a London firm. "He was one of our clerks in Manchester before the war," said Mr. Williams, the manager, "but he had not then learned shorthand or typing." Mr. Williams considers blind shorthand typists are particularly suitable as private secretaries. "They can tabulate cards," he said, "and keep business engagements correctly, in fact, do all the work required."

LABOR MAN AS SENATOR

Telegrapher Robertson Was First Representative in Upper House

Gideon D. Robertson, of Welland, was the first representative of organized labor who was appointed to the Dominion Senate. He was a telegrapher and probably the most influential man in the Canadian railway organizations. The Hon. Mr. Crothers had been anxious to see labor represented in the Senate and the late Harvey Hall was slated for the Upper Chamber, but died just before the appointment was to have been made. The value of the presence of a labor representative in Parliament who does not have to make a deal with any party in order to get elected may be considerable, but the curious anomaly existed in that the labor organizations had contended that the Senate should be abolished. Senator Robertson's appointment was largely the result of services in the settlement of a C.P.R. strike in the West.

Buy at Home

Every day $100,000 is spent by the people of this province, says a British Columbia writer, for goods brought in from the outside—goods which could be purchased at home in quality just as good and for just as little money. Are you doing what you can to remedy this deplorable condition? Do you always ask for Canadian goods, or do you carelessly take what is offered, or, worse still, insist on the foreign article? Create a demand for the home article by refusing to buy the foreign.

One swallow does not make a meal.

One man's as good as another—to a bullet.

A ring on the hand is worth fifty on the doorbell.

CURE FOR LIQUID FIRE BURNS

Clever Invention to Take the Place of Antiseptic Dressings

The horrible burns caused by German flame throwers are being successfully treated with a method devised by Dr. Bathe de Sandfort. Instead of antiseptic dressings, which kill the living elements of the tissue, a mixture of paraffin and resins is melted and kept at a certain temperature on the burn. The substance, called ambrine, revives the apparently lost activity of the injured cellules and a natural skin finally appears, with scarcely any disfigurement.

"Baby-Killer's" Bible

The London Command's imperative instructions to turn over all Zeppelin relics bring keen disappointment to a Hertfordshire farmer. After the Cuffley bring-down the farmer found a German Old Testament bound in scorched black velvet and trimmed with burned German silver. He dutifully handed it in to the military authorities, but is aggrieved that they will enter into no binding agreement for its eventual return to him.

No Clergy For Captives

Reuter's Agency is informed that the proposal to send three or four clergymen to minister to British prisoners in Germany was after many months' delay refused by the German Government.

HOW FISH ARE COUNTED

Fish Compelled to Pass Through Narrow Gates

Wood River, Alaska, has been closed to fishing for many years and is resorted to for breeding purposes by red salmon escaping the nets in Nushagak Bay. The counting of the salmon was first undertaken in 1908 and has been continued annually since that time except in 1914. The counting is made possible by throwing a rack across the stream and compelling the fish to pass through a narrow gate where they are easily visible to persons immediately above. Agents of the Fisheries Bureau in relays are kept on duty day and night for the entire period of the run, and the tally is kept by an automatic counting device manipulated by hand. The highest count for any one day in recent years was 25,554.

Eastern Monarch's Costly Kitchen

Should the Shah of Persia desire to pledge his kitchen requisites he might realize $250,000. Every saucepan of this monarch is gilded inside, and the dishes which appear on the table are of solid gold, as well as the spoons, knives, and forks. The handles of the latter, moreover, are ornamented with costly stones, and some are worth as much as $300 each.

JAPAN LEADS IN DIVORCE

Most Divorces Brought About By "Mutual Consent"

In proportion to its population Japan leads the world in divorce, according to statistics by Government officials. A great number of separations come about immediately after marriage. Whereas, in England the proportion of divorce is only two to every 20,000 marriages, and in the United States it is 82, in Japan there are no fewer than 175 divorces to every 20,000 marriages. Most of the divorces recorded have been brought about by "mutual consent," and through the efforts of the go-betweens responsible for the original union. They were accomplished without submission to court or law. Out of the 59,000 divorces which were effected between 1873 and 1902 only 400 cases were obtained by lawsuits.

"Cost of Bad Roads"

Why not put it that way for once and balance the cost of Bad Roads against the cost of Good Roads when deciding a road policy? asks the Western Municipal News. The cost of bad roads in retarding the social life of a community and so costing the farm the loss of the young people; the cost of bad roads in the wear and tear of vehicular property; the cost of bad roads in the transportation of loads, grain, gravel, etc.; the cost of bad roads in endless ways each can set for himself.

ST. GEORGE'S DAY FESTIVAL

The Festival of the Patron Saint of England will begin with a national service at St. George's Church, Braidwood avenue, next Sunday evening at 7 o'clock, it being the eve of the saint's day. The preacher will be Rev. Canon Cornish, and the lessons will be read by Mr. W. F. Johnston and Mr. Scadding. As becomes such a festival, the service will be fully choral.

The festival will be continued at St. John's Church Monday evening being St. George's Day proper. The preacher will be will be Archdeacon Cody of Toronto, one of the best known and most eloquent preachers in Canada. The various patriotic societies of the city are most cordially invited to attend either the one or the other of these national services and especially the Sons of England and the Daughters of the Empire.

The festival should appeal very strongly to all patriotic people, especially this year.

St. George is always represented to us in pictures as a "warrior," and he is shown as in the very act of slaying the "dragon."

How strongly this picture appeals to us just now, for our fellow countrymen are at this moment fighting hard to conquer and to slay another "dragon."

As on former St. George festivals, red roses will be sold in the city vy the members and friends of St. George's Church. The red rose has played a very prominent part in the history of England. The Wars of the Roses are among the best remembered in the British Isles. No true Britisher should be seen without one during this great national festival.

"How old are you?" asked Col. Walker.

"Just eighteen, today," was the reply.

He was examined by the doctors and later attested to the battalion.

Pte. Webster will endeavor to secure additional recruits in Lakefield.

SISTER SQUIRE IN REVOLUTION

NORWOOD LADY IN PETROGRAD WHEN THE CZAR WAS DEPOSED.

Nursing Sister Lucy Squire, daughter of Reeve Squire of Norwood, has returned to London from Petrograd, accompanied by Sister Heaton of St. John. They had been in the Russian-Anglo hospital in that city and witnessed the revolution. They suffered no molestation, and the greatest consideration was shown the hospital, where, during the height of the disturbances, three accidental shots crashed through the windows, injuring nobody. Many wounded were brought there for treatment.

The Canadian nurses saw some service in a clearing hospital near the Russian lines. They greatly enjoyed their visit, though handicapped by lack of knowledge of the Russian language. They had a delightful journey to England through Norway and Sweden, where they were received with the greatest kindness and were looked after by the various embassies. The Queen of Sweden sent for Nurse Squire, who nursed her mother, the Duchess of Connaught, when ill in Montreal.

U.S. NAVY RELIEVES ALLIES' SHIPS

SHOULD RAISE POTATOES ON THOSE RIFLE RANGES

Trades Council to Ask Government to Utilize the 300 Acres Near This City---A Syndicate of Gardeners Proposed.

Secretary Stevens of the Trades and Labor Council was instructed at the regular meeting last night to write the Militia Department asking that the 300 acres of land owned by the government as a rifle range near the city be put under cultivation.

Ald. Dobbin attended the meeting to receive a report of the plots secured by representatives of the Council for municipal gardening. Members of the committee had little progress to report, and Delegate Crowe stated that some owners objected to having their sodded lots plowed as this would tend to encourage the growth of weed seeds now dormant. It was decided that Ald. Dobbin keep a list of available plots and that anyone desirous of cultivating a piece of land get the location from the alderman and make his own selection.

There is a piece of land 18 acres in extent, belonging to the Brown Estate just outside the city, the use of which can be had for the payment of the taxes, about $50. Some of the employes of the C. G. E. are anxious to secure it and to form a syndicate of 100 members to work it or at least finance the venture. It is estimated that a crop of potatoes can be raised upon it at a cost of something over $500. Any person desiring to enter the syndicate can leave his name with Ald Dobbin at the Patriotic Fund office.

The delegates seemed to be thoroughly impressed with the gravity of the outlook and to realize that the demand for increased production is urgent.

Ald. Dobbin stated that he has the names of fourteen team owners who are ready to plow garden plots, and anyone requiring their services can be accommodated by applying to him.

PRIVATE W. J. CARRUTHERS HAS DIED OF INJURIES

Reported Wounded in Battle of Vimy Ridge ---Six Other Local Men's Names in Casualty List.

Peterboro was severely hit with the news that came from the record office this morning. One soldier has paid the supreme price, and six others are wounded.

The news that Private William J. Carruthers had died of the wounds received on the 10th inst., was received with general regret throughout th city. His father, Mr. George Carruthers,, of the Quaker Oats Co., at Sudbury, will be extended the heartfelt sympathy of the entire community over his oss. Among the young people of the George Street Methodist Church, Willie Carruthers was very popular, and his death will be greatly felt.

Private Harold Mollon, of the 93rd,, was wounded on April 10th, and he was admitted to No. 2 Stationary Hospital, Wimereu. His aunt, Miss Ida Oldfield, 705 Water Street, received the news this morning.

Mrs. Emma Drummond, Bernardo Ave., received word this morning that Gunner Arnold Drummond had been severely wounded in the leg on April 10th, and was in No. 8 Stationary Hospital at Wimereux. Gunner Drummond has only been a short time in France, having been nearly a year in England. Mrs. Drummond received a letter from him on Monday last, and he was well.

Lance-Corporal James S. Thompson, of Warsaw, is reported dangerously ill and wounded in the head and arms. He is in the No. 13 Stationary Hospital at Bologne.

William Sproats, 384 Stewart St., was also notified that his son, Pte. Rob. Sproats had been wounded. He was a member of the 93rd.

Mr. R. Wiggins, 249 Simcoe St., was also notified of the wounding of her husband, Pte. Chas. Wiggins.

Mrs A. F. Dixon, 784 George

Mrs. A. E. Dixon, 784 George St. received a telegram today that her nephew, Lieut. Reginald Jolliffe, a Toronto University student, only son of her sister, Mrs. Rev. T. W. Jolliffe, Toronto, was killed in action.

LOCAL MEN ENLIST

Private Alfred N. Brooks, of 235 Princess St., is the second man to be attested to the 57th Batt. C.E. F.

Many of the young men of the city have a wrong impresion of the rules and regulations governing the force. There will be no interference with a man's work, and th only time he will have to drill will be on two nights a week and on Saturday afternoons when drilling commences. Drill will start just as soon as a sufficient enlistment is secured.

D. J. WINN SENT UP FOR TRIAL THIS MORNING

D. J. Winn appeared before the police magistrate this morning to hear the evidence in the charge against him of forging a check of the Canadian General Electric Co.

At the previous sitting of the court he had elected to be tried by jury and pleaded "Not Guilty."

After hearing the particulars of the case Police Magistrate Dumble committed the defendant for trial at the June Sessions, allowing him to go on bail.

MEN FOR NOBEL CAUSE TROUBLE TO C.P.R. CREW

Munition workers on the way to Noble, Ontario, caused the C. P. R. officials considerable trouble this morning, and two of them landed in the local police station.

Some place east of Havelock the trouble commenced, and the train crew, finding that it was impossible to preserve order, telegraphed ahead for Constable Greenham to meet the train at Havelock. The men refused to be bossed, and word was sent to Peterboro, where the ringleaders were taken off and locked up.

Armond Denore was fined $10.00 and $2.75 costs for being drunk; Nedon was fined $5.00 for assaulting a fellow traveller.

Unless some kind of friend comes to their rescue they will both spend a period at Castle Nesbitt.

Work at Vimy Ridge Praised By General Commanding First Army.

(By Stewart Lyon.)

Canadian Army Headquarters, April 19. — Having heard of their achievements from the outside world, the Canadian troops have now had an opportunity of hearing in an order of the day the opinion of their army commander on their operations of last week. The general commanding the first army, Sir Henry Horne, says he desires to express his high appreciation of the splendid work carried out during the days immediately preceding, by the troops of the first army. He adds: "Vimy Ridge has been regarded as a position of great importance; the Germans have credited it as impregnable. To have carried this position with so little loss testifies to the soundness of the plan, the thoroughness of preparation, dash and determination in executing, and devotion to duty on the part of all concerned. The ninth of April would be an historic day in the annals of the British Empire."

SMILE THAT WON'T COME OFF.

This statement read to the troops in orders has been even more welcome than congratulations from nonmilitary quarters, welcome as they are, too. The order represents the mature judgment of the army commander on the operations on Vimy Ridge last week. It has produced in the ranks the smile that won't come off.

There is little change in the situation on the front today.

In the region south of Avions, a suburb of Lens, a detachment of the Fifth Prussian Guards attacked an outpost during the night. The attack was repulsed, and this morning the bodies of several members of this regiment were discovered in front of our position.

SERIOUS INJURY TO OMEMEE MAN BY HIS NEPHEW

On Tuesday evening about 9.30 o'clock Chief Short, of Lindsay, received a message from Omemee, asking him to arrest one Wallace McQuade, of Toronto, but formerly of that village, who it was thought had taken the G.T.R. for Lindsay or Peterboro. The man is charged with seriously assaulting Bert McQuade of Omemee on Thursday. It appear that accused visited the latter's home during his absence, and on his return attacked him, inflicting serious injuries.

Revenues Astound Financial Experts

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, April 19. — The swelling revenues of the British Government continue to astound even experts. It is expected that the total for the year will be three billion dollars, or three times the annual revenue before the war.

SUDDEN CALL FOR ENGINEER

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ST. THOMAS, April 19. — John Rose, M. C. R. engineer, died while being hurried to a hospital here, from peculiar injuries. His train sideswiped some freight cars standing on a siding, which had tipped over owing to the sagging of the track. The locomotive was not derailed, but the cab was shattered, and a wooden sliver struck Rose in the neck, inflicing fatal injuries. He was 36 years of age.

SUPREME COURT WILL NOT SIT AGAIN TILL FALL

The courts of Ontario will not interfere with production by taking farmers away from their work to act as jurors. Assurance to this effect is contained in a letter written by Chief Justice Sir William Meredith to Dr. Abbat, secreatry of organifiation for the resources committee. The chief justice states that with the exception of the Assizes now being held in Toronto and another at L'Original, in Prescot Country, there will be no further sittings of the Supreme Court until September 15. All the farmers summoned for the Toronto jury have been relieved from attending by Mr. Justice Middleton, and it is probable that none will be required at L'Original.

As to the autumn courts no schedule has as yet been arranged, but Mr. Justice Middleton, who has he matter in hand, will endeavor, the chief justice says, to arrange the sittings so that no jury will be repuired before November.

FINE WAS $5 FOR LOSING TEMPER

Two G.T.R. conductors, who apparently are not very friendly got into an argument at the station over the small matter of backing a train so to allow sufficient clearance for the other to get on a siding. The Conductor on the passenger train would not give way and used very insulting language towards the other.

At the police court this morning the magistrate imposed a fine of $5.00 on the unobliging conductor, and at the same time a rebuke was issued for conduct so unbecoming a public officer.

Advices received at Amsterdam from Berlin say that work was resumed Tuesday in a majority of the factories which were idle,

REV. R. G. PEEVER IS TRANSFERRED

TORONTO, April 19.—The transfer committee of the Methodist Church met in the board room yesterday, Dr. S. D. Chown presiding. The representatives to the conference were Rev. J. W. Stewart, London; Rev. J. McCamus, Hamilton. The interim transfers are:: Geo F. Denizers, Alberta to Manitoba; J. M. Lovelace, Toronto to Bay of Quinte; Edwin E. Swayne, Saskatchewan to Bay of Quinte.

The following transfers were effective:

Superannuated ministers: Dr. Robert Burns, Bay of Quinte to Toronto; Dr. J. E. Moore, Bay of Quinte to Toronto; A. J. Thomas, London to Bay of Quinte; W. J. Wood, Bay of Quinte to Toronto; L. S. Wright, Alberta to Bay of Quinte; R. G. Peevee, Bay of Quinte to Toronto.

Transfers of ministers will take effect on the morning of the general session of the Conference to which they are going.

WILL ENTERTAIN INMATES.

The Temple Songsters will give a concert this evening for the benefit of the Peterborough Protestant Home. Mr. R. C. Braund will take the young people's meeting at the Temple.

YOU WANT SATISFACTION

It is useless and disappointing after you have bought anything not to be satisfied with it. This is especially so in buying glasses. When you know you need them you want to feel that you are getting them right. Dr. Lacey gives glasses only when they are needed, and guarantees satisfaction. 410 George Street.

"WAR NEARING CLOSE" SAY LONDON PAPERS

Feeling Prevails in England That End is Near---No Wheat or Potatoes in German Empire in Less Than Six Weeks---The Army is Demoralized.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, April 19. — Newspapers are full of such headings as "War is Drawing to a Close." Many circumstances support the feeling that the end is approaching. The Germans' intrigue in Russia has failed, and she is faced by the internal dangers of her own.

The Kaiser is very ill, peace advocates are speaking out with unprecedented boldness, and the German soldiers are deeply affected by the Americans' adherence to the Allies' cause.

Continued reports of separate peace moves by Germany's allies cause acute discontent in the German capital and in Hamburg. Anger in Bavaria over the salughter of her troops are all indications.

A Geneva despatch to the Daily Express reports that a neutral diplomat just arrived from Berlin declares that within from four to six weeks Germany will be without wheat and potatoes and the government forced to face a famished population.

GERMAN ATTACK FAILS.

PARIS, April 19.—The Germans threw twelve new divisions against the French between Soissons and Auberive last night. The war office announces that they were unable to check the successful offensive of the French.

The French continued to make progress north of Vailly and Ostel, notwithstanding violent German counter-attacks.

The successes of the French in the Champagne were followed by further advances in the region of Moronvillers. Several important heights and strong positions were taken. Two more batteries of German artillery were captured on the front between Soissons and Auberive.

NO SUBS IN WESTERN ATLANTIC.

BERLIN, April 19. — It is officially announced there is no submarine as yet in the western part of the Atlantic.

ALL QUIET WITH BRITISH.

LONDON, April 19. — The official announcement from the war office this morning says there is nothing of special interest to report.

IN ALL DANGEROUS DUTIES LIEUT. ACKERMAN LED

General Garnet Hughes Writes of the Brave Young Peterborough Officer Who Lost His Life in France.

General Garnet Hughes has written the following letter to his mother which refers to the late Lieut Arthur Ackerman, and Mrs. Hughes has sent it to Mrs. B. F. Ackerman here.

5th Canadian Division
20th March, 1917.

Dear Mother,—I am glad that you let me know that my letter to you about poor Art. Ackerman was destroyed. Until some time after his death, I had not known that you and his mother were friends, and I did not know her address. I wish you would tell her how much we thought of him, or send her this letter. There is no way of properly expressing our sympathy with the mothers of the boys who go down, bur I do know that there is some comfort in just a letter.

I had known him so well in his old battalion, the 2nd, without ever connecting him with the Mrs. Ackerman you knew. He was such a keen, smart officer, always active and efficient, and always looking after his men's welfare. His Military Cross might have come long before it did, but, as in so many cases, it was not awarded the first time I recommended him.

Then, when one new service, the Trench Mortar Batteries were being formed, and I was looking for bright capable, and brave officers to take it over in my brigade, young Ackerman was one of the four selected out of one hundred and eighty.

There is no service more trying than the trench mortars. They are subject to all the dangers from shell fire that the field artillary has, in addition their little guns have to be operated from the front line where the infantry is.

In all the mud and danger and work, Ackerman was a leader. When a daring job was on hand Ackerman was in the front of it, and then, on the Somme, just north of the village of Courcellette, he was hit by a shell.

He was arranging new positions for his guns further forward, and getting up amunition at the time.

I had seen him only an hour or two before, and I remember the terrible shock the news gave me in spite of all the others whom I have known so well, and who have gone the same way. His mother can be a very proud woman. No Canadian officer has ever been more thought of by his brother officers and his men. She has lost her boy—I know she still thinks of him as the little fellow she held in her arms—as I do my little Sammy now, him whom we knew as a brave and gallant gentleman but no mother has ever made a more valuable sacrifice for the greatest cause in which the human race has ever fought. I wonder if Mrs. Ackerman has his Military Cross. If she hasn't I am sure I could arrange for a duplicate to be given her. He would have sent it home, though.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, APRIL 19, 1917

THE CARE OF NEGLECTED CHILDREN.

AN UNFORTUNATE CONDITION has arisen in the city, and the matter has been presented to the Children's Aid Society as a new problem. There is at that institution no provision for taking care of helpless infants, even if the parents are unable to care for them. Shall the scope of the institution be extended so that infants in arms may be taken care of?

There seems to be a difference of opinion on this head. Some members of the society hold that to do so would tend to encourage immorality by relieving the guilty of responsibility for their acts. The parents of illegitimate children, they maintain, should, so far as possible, be made to support their unfortunate offspring.

One member of the society who holds these views has written to a well-known sociologist in Toronto asking for an expression of opinion. This he has received, and it supports the position which he has himself taken. The Toronto man consulted Dr. Franklin Johnston, the social expert of the University of Toronto, and he concurs in what the other has written to Peterborough.

The letter begins with the recommendation, invariably made in all such cases, that an attempt be made to prevent the conditions referred to. The offenders should be brought to book for their misdeeds. Feeble-minded girls should be segregated and the giddy and foolish should be made to see that consequences cannot be easily avoided. The parents of the erring, too, should be given to understand that the community is not ready to assume responsibility which may belong to them.

Exceptional cases, according to the Toronto experts, may arise in which airtight secrecy is desirable, but as a general thing, to avoid the responsibility of looking after the illegitimate child is bad for the latter, for the parents and for the community. A happy-go-lucky policy may only widen the sphere of immorality, cause people to think lightly of such conduct, and leave a festering sore for many a day in the community's life.

The opinion of Superintendent Kelso, of the Neglected Children's Department has also been taken. He says the father of the illegitimate child should be made to support his offspring under all conditions where it is possible to do so. Some way can be found for reaching him, whether he be in Canada or in Europe, and compulsion employed, if necessary, to secure part of his earnings for this purpose. He is opposed to the idea of separating the mother and child for at least several months. If the mother does not remain with her family the large maternity hospital should be avoided as in such places the mothers exchange experiences and are apt to deteriorate rapidly.

It has been suggested by local members of the society that pressure be brought to bear upon the parents of the mothers of illegitimate children to aid in their support on the ground that they are in a measure responsible for the waywardness of their own offspring. Mr. Kelso is not sure that there is any legal warrant for such a course.

The above are cold-blooded opinions of experts, who look at the matter from a purely practical standpoint. They decry anything in the nature of sentimentality, but the fact remains that the innocent babe must be cared for. A child so born should not be permitted to go through life with a stain of dishonor upon its name, something for which it is in no sense responsible. While it is helpless it must not be allowed to suffer. If the parents neglect it or are not able to support it properly then the State must step in and assume the functions of parenthood. The fact that a child is ill-born should not condemn it to neglect, especially in its infancy. It has as much right to a fair chance for existence as those whose existence begins under more auspicious circumstances.

Some of these days our lawmakers will take a leaf from the books of other civilized countries, and children born in illegitimacy will be given the same legal status as the offspring of wedlock, entitled to the name of the father, and all the other privileges which go with such a relationship. The sins of the parents will not longer be visited upon the helpless and the unoffending. With such a change in the laws of the nation another relic of legal barbarism will disappear.

BOYS FOR FARM WORK.

OVER IN THE UNITED STATES the shortage of farm labor is as acute as it is in this country, and in all American cities an agitation has been started to induce boys below the military age to go out to the country and assist in the production of foodstuffs. The Chicago News is devoting columns of space to this campaign, and the response from the school boys in the territory covered by that paper is encouraging. The News says that farmers need much additional help if the farms this year are greatly to exceed their normal amount of food production. At the same time the cities are full of boys of working age who under wise direction could be employed on farms with marked benefit to themselves. It is especially desirable that school boys of suitable years and strength should be utilized in farm work during vacation periods. In view of the emergency which must be met, it is well, as the Chicago board of education has planned, to excuse boys from further attendance at school this season without loss of credits provided they engage in approved tasks of food production.

The trouble is to place the individual boy where he can be of real service and where he will be contented and employed at suitable labor. City boys naturally and properly hesitate to face the unpleasant working and living conditions which they may encounter in taking employment with strangers. Farm work intelligently directed is attractive, but the particular conditions with which the individual boy is confronted may prove objectionable.

If city boys could be organised for farm work and sent into the country in groups under responsible direction, as has been suggested by Boys' Secretary Galley of the local Y. M. C. A., the results should be beneficial to the young workers and the productive outcome of the mobilization would be much greater than could be secured in any other way.

Organization must supplant individual effort in all branches of national service if the country is to produce the best results during the great crisis through which it is now passing. There is special need of organization to place boys effectively at farm work, in the interest alike of food production and of the young patriots themselves.

The Y. M. C. A. seems to have solved the problem and inaugurated a rational method of dealing with it. Mr. Galley is finding boys for farm work not only in Peterborough, but in every high school in the surrounding district.

The farmers have been charged with indifference in this matter and it has been said that they show no disposition to avail themselves of the efforts that are being made in their interests. On behalf of the farmers it is only just to state that the planting of the crop is not what causes them uneasiness. That is a short task every spring with the modern machinery now in use, provided weather conditions are at all favorable. The trial comes when the harvest is ready for gathering, and it is then that extra help will be required.

THE DUTY ON WHEAT.

NO MATTER WHAT the Government may decide to do, either as a settled policy or as a war measure, but the Opposition at once set up the cry of wolf—or politics, which amounts to the same thing.

The duty on American wheat, 12 cents a bushel, has been removed by order-in-council. Under a standing offer from the United States, Canadian wheat and flour now automatically is given free entry to that country. The change has been decided upon simply as a war measure, and does not imply, as the Liberals are so hasty in claiming, that the Conservative party has retreated from the position which it has hitherto held with regard to reciprocity.

Since the war broke out, the lack of shipping facilities to get the grain to Europe has become more and more acute. For the present the better route to the overseas markets lies through the United States. The removal of the duty on wheat and its products will not affect prices in this country, since all the trend of trade is across the border. The new order will not reduce the cost of flour in this country, but is likely to have an effect directly opposite. The removal of the duty is an emergency measure that is not worth all the partisan jubilation that the Liberals have vented over it as a surrender of the principles which the Conservative party so successfully maintained in 1911.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

YOUR COUNTRY NEEDS food as well as men and money.

• • • •

ONE POLITICAL JOB in a law office is worth half a dozen somewhere else.

• • • •

SPAIN APPEARS as long-suffering with regard to the submarine outrages as Uncle Sam was, but another worm may yet turn.

• • • •

DOES THE FARMER in Peterborough County want free American wheat any more than he wants free American oleomargarine?

• • • •

SOME MEN blow up bridges and factories, while others accomplish as much deviltry by merely boosting the price of foodstuffs.

• • • •

THE UNITED STATES is not to be spared the dire afflictions that follow in the wake of war. The anti-cigarette crank has broken into the arena over there, but Uncle Sam proposes to have his troops burn tobacco as well as money.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

From One Trouble to Another.

(Guelph Herald.)

There is a matrimonial boom on in the United States, due to a desire on the part of shirkers to escape the net of conscription. What right have such men to escape being henpecked? They are merely jumping from the frying-pan into the fire.

United on One Point.

(Ottawa Journal-Press.)

The attempt of the Liberal papers these days to create the impression that he Liberal party is united on a war policy, while there is only "indecision and temerity at Ottawa," would be really funny if the issues were not so great. A careful search of the Liberal newspapers reveals that he only policy on which they are united is that the Conservative Government must be turned out of power and a Liberal government put in its place.

No "Strike" for Him.

(Toronto News.)

George P. Graham is like a good many other liberal politicians. He is always about two pins short of a s"trike."

Creelman's Warning.

(Buffalo Express.)

Dr. G. C. Creelman, head of the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph, has said that wheat will be $4 a bushel before it drops back to $2. It is hoped that he said it more from a desire to frighten people into raising that and other foodstuffs than from conviction.

Bewildering Weather.

(Guelph Mercury.)

This may be Spring, but how under the sun are you suppose to know it when you crank the furnace and beat the stair carpet on the same day?

If Russia Should Quit.

(Buffalo News.)

For Russia to remove her weight from the war would mean a Germany strengthened the release of an enormous army on the Eastern front to reinforce the Western front—and if not actual defeat of the Allies, a long-drawn-out and bloody war which would cost this country blood and treasure—the menace of another alliance which would mean a fight for our very existence.

FLAX STRAW OF WEST WASTED, HAS USES

In Paper Industry Would Mean Large Extra Revenue to Farmers of Western Canada

The recovery of waste is not alone a problem of raw material, but of bringing science and skill and mechanical power and transportation to bear on that raw material. Given a unity of these elements, what a field is open to utilising some of the waste of our Prairie Provinces, writes E. B. Biggar. Take for example, straw. More of the grain straw should be returned to the soil as manure, but the native fertility of the prairies tempt the farmer to ignore this, and much wheat and oat straw is burned for fuel in the thrashers, while flax straw which is not so readily rotted, is burned in the field "to get rid of it." Yet it is from flax fibre that linen fabrics and real linen paper are made, so that a raw material of incalculable value is here lost.

No Chance For Textiles

There are difficulties of a rather obstinate nature in the utilization of the flax straw of the Canadian prairies for linen fabrics. Flax in the Canadian West is grown primarily for flaxseed, which is sold for linseed oil and for the making of oil-cake and other forms of animal food. In growing flax for the linen trade the seed is sown thickly, and the main stalk grows long and straight and unbroken by joints, but there is little yield of seed. Then to get the best results flax is pulled by hand, and not cut with a machine. Hand pulling is out of the question in the West. A linen textile industry is not yet in sight in the Canadian West, except in the use of the short fibres in mixed goods and for special purposes such as linen for medical dressings, etc.

Flax as Basis For Paper

The flax as produced in the West may be used in the paper industry, and here, without question, is a flourishing field for a new Canadian industry. The flax crop of the United States in 1915, grown on 2,200,000 acres, yielded twenty million bushels of seed and 1,600,000 tons of straw. The flax crop of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta in 1915, grown on 801,000 acres, yielded 10,559,000 bushels of seed and about a ton per acre of straw—say 800,000 tons. Of the flax crop of the United States, only about 200,000 tons a year are put to any profitable use, so that 1,400,000 tons a year are wasted. Such a tonnage would, it is estimated, make all the wrapping paper used in the country and double the amount of writing paper used in normal trade, and it would give to the farmers of the United States an annual revenue of $5,000,000 from the raw material now wasted.

The prospects in Canada for a new branch of our paper industry are more favorable than in the United States—first, because the paper industry of Canada, relative to population and wealth, is much greater, and second, because the growth and yield of flax in Canada is greater in proportion to the total tilled area, while at present practically no use is made of the flax straw, except in Ontario, which is not now under consideration.

MANITOBA'S BIG LOSS

Work of Prof. Mitchell as Dairy Expert Lauded

Says an Eastern farm paper: Press comments continue to come to hand which indicate that the New Brunswick Department of Agriculture made no mistake in obtaining the services of Prof. J. W. Mitchell. The Manitoba correspondent for "Hoard's Dairyman" an influential agricultural journal published in the United States, makes the following statement concerning Professor Mitchell: "The retirement of Professor Mitchell from the position of Superintendent of Dairying for the province of Manitoba is very discouraging to the dairy industry of the province. A survey of the development of this industry during the tenure of his office indicates somewhat of his ability, but what indicates most emphatically that he should not be lost is the remarkable improvement in the quality of the dairy products of the province of Manitoba and their gaining popularity in outside markets, and also that he has earned the enmity of unscrupulous milk and cream shippers through his endeavor to enforce the provincial act referring to shipping milk and cream, and in his endeavor to improve the quality of dairy products."

LIGHTNING IN HOUSES

Where the Most Dangerous Places In a House Are

The records show that when unprotected houses are struck by lightning people are injured or killed in almost every conceivable location in the house. It seems that there is no place in a house to which lightning will not penetrate, although many statements to the contrary have been made.

Some places in a house are undoubtedly more dangerous than others, however, among such being the vicinity of stoves, places between masses of metal on the exterior of the building, and metallic masses in the interior, whether earthed or not, and near chimneys.

An example of a place between metallic masses would be between a down spout and a steam or hot water radiator. Other dangerous places in a house during a thunderstorm are at telephones, or touching screen doors or other metallic bodies which connect with the exterior of the building.

Venice Deserted

Swiss newspaper correspondents report that the city of Venice is almost depopulated. The constant attacks of Austrian fliers created a panic and drove the wealthier classes into flight. In six weeks more than 30,000 inhabitants left for the southern provinces. Most of the art treasures were removed to Rome by the government to save them from destruction by the bombs of the Austro-Hungarian airmen.

CATERING FOR WOUNDED STATISTICS STAGGER

Big English Hospital Confronts Equally Big Problem—Steward Boasts "No Waste"

When 1,680 patients have to be fed daily—many of them on special diets—the problem becomes a trifle involved. For instance, on the days when steak-and-kidney pie figures on the menu 750 pounds of steak and kidney is used; while, in addition, about eighty chickens are used daily. Each chicken provides portions for two men on special diet; while when rabbit pies are the day's main dish no less than 400 rabbits are needed, and here three portions are made from each bunny. Some of the averages include 1,600 eggs, 940 pounds of sausages (two twice weekly) 700 pounds of beef or mutton, and 1,000 pounds of bread per day. Bacon for breakfast amounts to 2,600 rashers each of which weighs 2 ounces. As every man's allowance is 4 ounces, he gets two rashers, which are cut to a nicety by machines.

Fine Variety

Three meals constitute the soldier's daily food; but in this great hospital the organization is so efficient and economical that the catering steward has been able to provide fish, or sausages, or cold ham each day for breakfast in addition, a pudding for dinner, garden stuff or jam for tea and, on alternate nights, bread-and butter and cocoa, or bread and soup, for supper. All these meals are prepared in the great main kitchen. But in addition Tommy obtains, by doctor's orders, small delicacies such as eggs for tea, and to cook these small items in a huge kitchen would be like cracking nuts with a battleship's ram.

Percentage of Waste

Between every two wards there is a small kitchen, with gas ring, cooking stove, carving table, and hot plate all of its own. Here the willing sisters of the wards will personally cook small "medical comforts" for Tommy. A striking feature of the organization of this hospital are the precautions taken to ensure the minimum amount of waste. It is the steward's proud boast that there are not 10 pounds of bread wasted in a week out of a matter of 8,000 pounds that pass through his hands.

"TOMMY" IN GERMANY

Relates Some Facts—Every Truthful Letter Burned by Censor

A London Daily Mail correspondent writes in speaking of a meeting with a British prisoner in Germany in part as follows: Robinson Crusoe on his island was not more ignorant of the truth about the war than that man, for, while he had learned a few daily expressions in German, he was unable to read it. The only information he could gather was from the French, Belgian, and Russian prisoners with him, and some he got by bribing one of the Landsturm guards with a little margarine or sugar out of his parcel from England.

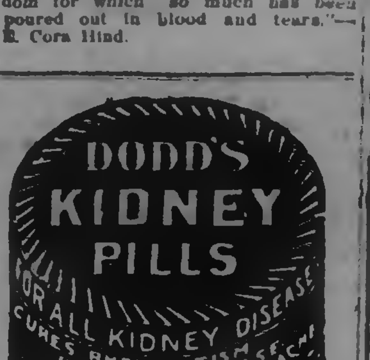
None the less, though alone, with no Englishmen for miles, living almost entirely on his parcels, absolutely cut off from the real facts of the war, hearing nothing but lies, he was as calmly confident of your ultimate victory as I am.

I asked him if he heard from home. "Yes," he said, "now and then, but the folks tell me nothing and I can tell them nothing. If you get back to England you tell the people there not to believe a word that comes from English prisoners. Those who write favorably do so because they have to. Every truthful letter is burned by the military censor. Tell the people to arrange the parcels better, and see that every man gets a parcel at least once a week not send five parcels to one man and no parcels to some poor bloke like me, who is alone."

WOMEN OF FOREIGN BIRTH

Must be Made Free, Happy and Prosperous

While something can be done with the men of foreign birth by the men of the farm organizations, the best and most efficient work can be done with the women and children and they can best be reached by women. "It is a great task, and in our minds most of us shrink from it as an almost intolerable burden, but if our men are willing to lay down their lives by the thousand for the British ideal of justice and the right of the weak against the strong, the women of Canada are assuredly ready and willing to live and work for that ideal. After all what is life but work and sacrifice and only they who are willing to lead the way of sacrifice may hope to enter in at the door of love, that love of our foreign population that will in the end make them one with us, a free, happy and prosperous people, worthy of the ideal of freedom for which so much has been poured out in blood and tears."—E. Cora Hind.



INTRODUCING THE MEN

Shall They Shake Hands?—Knotty Questions Answered

Men take very much the same view as regards introductions as do women—that is to say, if an introduction is made by a relative of the man introduced the men would shake hands, and not merely bow. This holds equally good where intimate friends are concerned; they almost rank on the footing of relations, and a cordial reception is given to an introduction thus made. When casual introductions are made of necessity rather than of intention men do not shake hands. When "I think you have met Smith" or "I think you know Mr. Smith" is said—the one by a host and the other by a hostess—nothing further is required from either than a bow and a smile of acquiescence accepting the introduction, and a disclaimer is not expected if Mr. Smith is not actually known. The uncertainty is an excuse for making the introduction.

One of the points upon which some of our correspondents are not very clear is with regard to rising from their seats on being introduced. This question does not trouble men, as they are usually found standing, or they are brought up to a person to be introduced, and even if a poor man ventures upon sitting down for a few moments at an at-home or before dinner is announced, he springs to his feet with guilty alacrity when any approach is made in the matter of introducing him to a fellow guest. With ladies it is otherwise. They do not rise from their seats either at an at-home or before dinner is announced or after dinner, or when calling people are introduced to them or when they themselves are introduced.

Half an exception occurs, it is true, at crowded at-homes, when to rise and talk to the lady introduced is almost a necessity. There is no vacant seat for her to take, and, therefore, if both do not stand conversation is at a deadlock, as the few first conventional remarks made by either are lost in the general buzz going on around, also it is awkward and ungraceful for a lady to bend over one seated for the purpose of saying a few platitudes. "Introductory remarks," or remarks following upon introductions, have too often a melancholy ring of commonplaceness about them, and are distinctly trite. How can they be otherwise? To venture out of the commonplace into originality would be suspicious of eccentricity, and no one wishes to be considered a little odd.

Paid Hired Man 2 Cents a Day

It is true that, in the Middle Ages, wheat could be bought in England at 20 cents a bushel; but at that time 2 cents a day was considered quite good wages for a farm laborer; a cow was sold for $3, a sheep for 26 cents, a goose for 4 cents, and a fat hen for 2 cents. From which you will see that 20 cents in the fourteenth century was worth a good many 20 cents in our day.

The Planet Mercury

Mercury is the planet that is nearest the sun, and is visible on but a few occasions during the year. The planet will on April 24th attain its greatest distance from the sun, but should be seen for several days before and several days after the 24th. It will be a little south of the sunset point. Prof. Chant of Toronto University says to try a field glass as soon as the sun has gone down, and, after having located the body, you will be able to see it with the naked eye. It will look like a star of the first magnitude. The planet Jupiter is also low in the west at present, but Mercury will appear higher, at least on the 24th.

DIDN'T ADVERTISE.

An advertising manager at a Sphinx club dinner in New York told an advertising story.

"A man," he said, "entered a shop one bitter cold day, and bought a woolen muffler. When he opened the muffler he found inside the photograph of a beautiful girl, together with a note saying:

"If you are single, please write to me."

"A name and address followed, and the man smiled. He was single, and he put the photograph on his sitting room mantel. There every evening looking up from his book, he beheld it. It was very beautiful, and in a week, he had fallen head over heels in love.

"So he wrote the girl. Another week of anxious suspense. Then the love-sick man received this crushing letter:

"Sir, The Mary Smith to whom you wrote was my grandmother. She died nine years ago, aged 86. Yours truly."

"Our heart-broken bachelor, on looking into this strange matter found that he'd foolishly bought the muffler from a dealer that did not advertise."

How an American Soldier In France Took on Chains

By F. A. MITCHEL

Guilford had lived in Paris several years when the pan-European war broke out. He at once enlisted in the Foreign legion and went to the front with the American corps. He was a handsome fellow and had a winning way with him. Women were easily attracted to him. There was an audacity about him that took well with them.

One day Guilford was knocked senseless by the bursting of a shell. He was carried to the rear on a stretcher to a field hospital and put in charge of a Red Cross nurse. Coming to himself suddenly and seeing a beautiful face bending over him, he threw his arms around the woman to whom it belonged, drew her quickly down and kissed her.

As soon as his arms were loosened the nurse arose and without a word left him. But she sent a surgeon to him, who examined him and found he was in nowise injured except for the shock he had received. Within an hour he was up on his feet, going to rejoin his command.

Guilford did not forget the face of the nurse nor the look she gave him as she rose and left him. He was very much ashamed of himself. The nurse had been ready to succor him; he had returned the care she would have bestowed on him by insulting her. He could have cut off the arms he had thrown around her; he could have blighted the lips he had pressed upon hers.

Guilford was struck again, this time not with soft dirt thrown up by a bursting shell, but by shrapnel. As luck would have it, he was placed a second time, under the care of the nurse who had attended him before. He recognized her at once, but whether she recognized him he could not tell. She regarded him with that impassive look usual to those accustomed to see suffering, brought restoratives as the surgeon directed and otherwise ministered to him.

A number of sick and wounded men were under her care, and she treated all alike. Guilford received his share of her attentions and no more. He wished to apologize for his action toward her when he had come under her care before, but she gave him no opportunity—that is, she kept such a reserve that he was unable to break through it. He said something about having been indebted to her for kindness on a former occasion, but while he was saying it she seemed to be thinking about something else. Before he could make up his mind to break through her reserve and express his penitence she was transferred to another ward.

Guilford received letters necessitating his presence in America, and since it was not probable that he would be fit for service again for a long while, he succeeded in getting a discharge. Before crossing the ocean he resolved to find the nurse whom he had treated so wrongfully and ask her forgiveness therefor. Guilford made inquiries for her and was told that she had been worn out by a long period of nursing and had gone to her home in Paris for a rest.

Guilford learned her address, intending to go to see her and get the burden that was troubling him off his mind. He dreaded putting an ocean between him and the only woman who had shown toward him—what? That was the trouble with him; he was in the dark as to her treatment of him. How singular that she should have treated him exactly the same as hundreds of others who had not offended her!

As soon as he arrived in Paris he took a conveyance and told the driver to take him to the address that had been given him. What was his surprise to be driven to a handsome residence in the most desirable part of the dwelling portion of Paris. Leaving the cab he looked at the house and wanted to get back into the cab. It had not occurred to him that the woman who had been nursing soldiers might be an aristocrat. The fact only made him feel the more culpable.

How could he, an American, face a lady, perhaps of rank, whom he had treated as if she had been a barbarian? But he was resolved that he would not leave France without setting himself right with her. He sent up his card, on which was written "One who has received your kind attentions in a field hospital."

When mademoiselle came down to meet the caller she stood for a moment on the threshold regarding him. Again that impassive look. Then she advanced into the room, bowed to him ceremoniously and asked him to be seated. He spoke of the good work she had done at the front; of the poor fellows who had been benefited by her tender care. He commended her especially that she, a lady surrounded by comforts in a splendid home, one who would grace society, should have assumed the duties of a nurse for men brought in from a battlefield.

All this he could say, though every word seemed like lead and his encomiums served only to make his offense seem the greater. She listened to his praise, but never for a moment did she relax from that quiet dignity of a high born dame. When Guilford could endure it no longer, he rose to go. Standing mute before her before leaving, suddenly a pent up pleading burst forth.

"Pardon," he said, almost in a wail.

With a smile she put out her hand.

Guilford has not yet returned to America. Some say he never will return. He has become the slave of the woman he kissed.

THE TONIC THAT BRINGS HEALTH

"Fruit-a-tives" Builds Up The Whole System

Those who take "Fruit-a-tives" for the first time, are often astonished at the way it builds them up and makes them feel better all over. They may be taking "Fruit-a-tives" for some specific disease, as Constipation, Indigestion, Chronic Headaches or Neuralgia; Kidney or Bladder Trouble, Rheumatism or Pain in the Back. And they find when "Fruit-a-tives" has cured the disease, that they feel better and stronger in every way. This is due to the wonderful tonic properties of these famous tablets, made from fruit juices.

A Picturesque Ceremony.

The colors of the 124th Battalion, the Toronto unit known as the "Pals," have been deposited in Witley Parish Church for safekeeping until they can be reclaimed after the war. This church, which is dedicated to All Saints, is one of the oldest in England and is so ancient that it is mentioned in Domesday Book about 1081. Architecturally and historically it appeals to Canadians as a fitting sanctuary for the safekeeping of battalion emblems, and a short time ago the 123rd Battalion, another Toronto unit, deposited its colors in the same place. The Pals Battalion, which was recruited by the Mississauga Horse and the Governor-General's Body Guard, completed its training at Bramshott and Witley Camps, going to the front from the latter. Papers recently received from England give an account of the ceremony of depositing the colors in the historic building. Under the command of Lieut.-Colonel Vaux Chadwick, the battalion marched from the camp to the church with fixed bayonets. It was an impressive sight when the four companies lined the streets in double ranks, each platoon presenting arms as the King's and regimental colors passed through, carried by Lieut. J. A. Bell and Lieut. L. B. Duckworth, while the band played "Auld Lang Syne" in slow time. The men then filed into the church to the tune of "Onward Christian Soldiers." A short service followed, and the vicar placed the colors on the altar with the following words: "We, the vicar and the churchwardens of this ancient Church of All Saints, Witley, do herewith receive the colors of the 124th Battalion, Canadian Infantry, and God helping us, will keep them in all security until such time as they are claimed by the battalion. In token thereof we lay them upon our altar in the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost."

Ladies, Try This.

Two ladies on the other side of the border were holding a stairhead confab one morning on the troubles of life, and husbands in particular.

"I dinna wonder at some puir wives having to help themselves out of their husbands' trouser-pockets," remarked the one.

"I canna say I like them underhand ways myself," responded the second matron. "I jist turn ma man's breeches doonside up and help masel' off the carpet."—Tit-Bits.

The Home of Heroes

WHAT do you think of a city of 50,000 people—secure, serene, rose-vined by the blue Pacific—that has sent 13,000 soldiers to the war for freedom, fully seventy-five per cent. of them her own native citizens! Victoria, British Columbia, has given units of every needed variety from grave bespectacled and benursed hospitals to her latest unlicked bunch of bearcubs, the 143rd Bantams. But of all the famous regiments in Canada, not excepting even the Montreal Highlanders, nor the Queen's Own of Toronto, not one has outdistanced or can outdistance the record of Victoria's adored 50th Gordon Highlanders, which three months ago had 2,000 of all ranks to its credit.

In April, 1913, when spring was smiling sleepily on the North Pacific, Major P. J. Riddell succeeded in gathering a hundred representative men at the Empress Hotel, and the Gordon Highlanders were born on paper to appear in actuality the follow[illegible] three hundred strong, [illegible] financed to the tune of $[illegible] summer of 1914. It looks by their Honorary Lieutenant-Colonel [illegible] ago and far away," as we W. H. Cox. [illegible] it into all the [illegible] of Ypres and

We can scarcely imagine the blithe [illegible] torn wreck of the Somme. When carelessness with which the regiment [illegible] the world, as we knew it, came to an end in August, the Gordons [illegible]teered en masse, under their [illegible] (now Major-General A. W. Currie) and they went to serve "So[illegible]re in France."

But the Canadian "Queen of the Pacific" isn't the city to be contented with its last year's batting average. The Bantams have just been sent forward, and everywhere the visitor goes, from the swarming dockside to the lonesome heights where the Dominion Government's Observatory stares at the stars, there is a dash of khaki in the colonial color scheme. Oak Bay, once sacred to the motorist and the tea basket, now forms part of the regulation route march to harden up the troops. Mt. Baker down in the State of Washington, frosted against the Italian sky, looks near enough for aeroplane reconnaissance, and sufficiently solid to prefigure benevolent neutrality. The winding drives of Beacon Hill Park are full of jingling majors and hustling sergeants, and at night the great branches of the Douglas fire quiver to "Last Post" that bugle call that plays the dark in from the Pacific, and tucks a comrade under in far France.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

Sleepy Time Story About a Strange Friendship.

RESULT OF EARLY TRAINING.

Remarkable Effect of Keeping Two Little Beasts of Different Species In Close Companionship—Nature of One of Them Became Greatly Changed.

Tonight I have an animal story to tell, said Uncle Ben to little Ned and Polly Ann. It is about A LAMB AND A PUSSY.

Of course you know about Mary's lamb, whose fleece was white as snow.

Well, I could not be sure how white this lamb's fleece was. You see, it lived in a big public park where there were a great many other animals, and the men who take care of them have a heap to do.

The lamb I am going to tell you about was early left a little orphan lambling, and one of the kind hearted keepers took it out of the field with the other lambs and sheep and brought it up himself.

He had a pet kitten, and soon the pet lamb and the pet kitten became great friends, playing together and cuddling close to one another for warmth when they took a nap. It was very cute to see them.

By and by Kittie became old enough to go off by herself, while Lambie could not get out of the little yard in which he was kept.

He would watch anxiously until his little friend came back and as soon as he saw her would jump about and "ba-a-a" with delight. If pussy was not too tired they would have a game of tag before she stretched out to rest after her wanderings or he would go over to the plate where her food had been placed and join her at the meal. Lambie would eat liver and fish and seemed to enjoy it. One day when catnip was given to Kitty he licked it up with great seeming relish.

Everything that the cat did the lamb tried to do. It took some time for him to learn that he was wasting time in trying to climb a tree.

When pussy took to the business of mouse and rat catching the lamb joined her in watching the mouse holes and, though never able to capture anything, seemed pleased when his friend did.

Having seen the cat trying to catch birds, the lamb amused all who saw him trying to capture a sparrow. The lamb would crouch close to the ground and creep closer and closer to the bird, which always darted away just as he was ready to pounce down upon it.

The keeper who has brought up the two animals together and who tells the story of the remarkable lamb insists that it arches its back when angry, just like its pussycat friend.

What will happen to the lamb when it is too old to be a pet and has to go back into the field with the staid and quiet sheep who live there? No doubt the other sheep will not know what to make of it and its queer pussycat ways.

Driving the Cows to Pasture.

The cows are the little wooden creatures that come in children's barnyard sets. These are allotted to each player in turn, and a small stick given him to drive with.

The cows are driven across the center of the room by little taps with the stick and not by a steady push. If one of the cows fall the driver is discharged and another takes his place.

The object is to see who can reach the pasture in the shortest time without any accident on the Victory for the Allies Will Come This Summer, Says Great Belgian Poet

"PEACE will come this year, but it will come through a victory of the Allies." This is the opinion that Maurice Maeterlinck gave to an interviewer recently in the study of his villa Les Abeilles, on the hills overlooking Nice.

"Oh, yes," he said. "This is the year of peace. It is bound to come after the big battles now being prepared. The Germans will be beaten and will have to give in."

"Then you don't believe in peace by negotiation?" was asked.

"No," he said. "It is impossible. The Germans must be beaten to their knees. The militarism must be crushed. Then there can be real peace, permanent peace. When Germany has been forced by armed strength to acknowledge herself wrong, then only negotiations between the two sides can take place.

"That is the fundamental condition of peace. Germany must first acknowledge herself wrong; then starting from that basis peace can be discussed, reparation exacted, guarantees established. Germany at present is a wild beast and must be tamed as the first step toward arriving at a permanent basis for the future."

"Do you think President Wilson has done anything for peace?" asked the interviewer.

"No," he responded. "On the contrary, he has shown the futility of negotiation at the present time. The Allies' reply to Wilson's note and the German reply to Wilson's speech, put side by side, show how far apart the opponents are, for the German reply breathes in every word pride of arms, brutal pride of victory and power.

MAURICE MAETERLINCK

"It is evident that there can be no peace, no negotiations for peace, until that spirit is broken. The great struggle will come this year. It is being prepared for now by both sides, and as a result of that struggle peace will come and Allied victory.

"Germany has shown that she is still animated by the pride and vainglory of the Hohenzollerns. What does she say of Belgium. The brief reference to Belgium means only German suzerainty. There can be no other reading. Better utter annihilation, better that Belgium and the Belgian people be lost to the world forever than made subjects of German tyranny, as Alsace-Lorraine has been enslaved by Germany for nearly half a century.

"And what does she say of Serbia? What of the countries at war? What of Little Montenegro? Not a word. Only slavery for Belgium and for all neutrals a threat of the terror of piracy. Does one need more than that to understand Germany's wild haste? Now she has threatened with murder and sudden death all neutrals who venture on the seas.

"There can be no peace without liberty for all nations, reparation for all misdeeds and guarantees of a chastened Germany. Belgium and Serbia must be restored. There must be a reparation to Belgium for all she has suffered.

"Serbia must be enlarged in accordance with her legitimate ambitions and at the expense of those who tried to destroy her. Subject peoples must be freed. There must be a new Poland and new nations of all the peoples now subject to Germany who do not want German rule.

"There must be a new Bohemia. One sees a separate kingdom of Hungary and beside it new nations of peoples now subject to German domination.

"It is the end of the Hohenzollerns," he concluded. "One way or another the Hohenzollern dynasty must come to an end and the German peoples, like all others, be released from the tyranny of a race thirsty for blood."

His eyes burned with a blazing light as he concluded: "The beast is in its death struggle now. The hands of justice and freedom are at its throat. A few last convulsive efforts and the end will come!"

His own hands reached out, the fingers working convulsively, as if he himself would throttle the beast and avenge his country.

WAR SUPERSTITIONS.

Story That Kitchener is Alive Cannot Be Killed.

The theory that we live in an exceptionally rational age is daily discounted by the eagerness of large numbers of people to accept popular superstitions. In fact, we are inclined to think it a very credulous era. To be sure, the old belief that the devil goes walking about the earth playing practical jokes, and making compacts with men for their souls, no longer prevails to the extent that it did five hundred years ago; but many good people still cling to the belief that a heavenly host did intervene at the Battle of the Marne. Some years after Joan of Arc was burned at Rouen, a young woman made her appearance in another part of France and claimed to be the maid of Orleans, alleging that the story of her incineration was all a fabrication. Not only were large numbers of people convinced of the truth of her story, but the governor of the particular province where she told her tale gave her a pension out of the public funds. We smile at this as evidence of the credulity of mediæval France, and the inconvenience the people of that day suffered from the lack of newspapers and other means of communication. Yet the acceptance of this fable is not more curious than the legend which has sprung up in many parts of the British Isles that Lord Kitchener is still alive, and the not less fantastic story that Sir Hector Macdonald is still alive, and is in fact General Brusiloff of the Russian forces. The late Lord Kitchener had not been dead a fortnight before the story was afloat that he had not been drowned at all, but was in Germany. Friendly souls said he was a prisoner, others that he was fighting in the German armies. Imagine the German Government concealing from their own people and from the world at large that they had Kitchener!

Yet the logic of facts has never had any influence over credulous minds, and we have it on the authority of such an excellent periodical as To-day that the legend is not abating, but spreading, though now the mythologists tend to locate Kitchener in Russia rather than Germany. The story has gained even wider acceptance in France than in Great Britain. According to To-Day, the majority of Frenchmen believe that Kitchener actually reached Russia, the country for which he was bound when he left London, and is living anonymously there for some occult purpose. The fact that the body of his private secretary was recovered near Kirkwall a few days after the Hampshire was seen to disappear by watchers on shore, does not shake the adherents of this latest and most curious of myths. They argue that, although his staff may have been on the Hampshire, he was not necessarily there himself; that he perhaps proceeded to Russia alone. The theory is advanced that he may have crossed the Atlantic to Canada, and thence by Victoria to Vladivostok. At any rate they are determined, willy nilly, that Kitchener is alive. The myth seems to flourish among those numerous individuals whose minds eagerly turn toward conspiracy, and who are quite certain that what they see in print is false. Perhaps some future student of historical mysteries, like the late Andrew Lang, will, long after the war is over, make this latest superstition the subject of an essay.

"Movies" in the Schools.

The sum of $1,000 was recently voted in Toronto for the purpose of securing moving-picture apparatus to be used in the schools for the demonstration of various subjects. It was pointed out that the "movies" could be used to illustrate mining in British Columbia, farming in the West, and lumbering in the north country. Production in various factories could also be shown. The machines will cost about $125 each, while each picture would cost about $600. The pictures could be used in different schools, the film being passed around from school to school.

Buy Land in Canada.

Two large English and Scottish co-operative trading societies have combined and bought in Saskatchewan, Canada, more than 10,000 acres of land, which is already in cultivation. The products of this estate will supply with wheat the co-operative flour mills of Manchester, Glasgow, Newcastle, Bristol, and London during the year.

WHEN THE DOCTOR CAME.

The Victim Tells What Was Done and How It Made Him Feel.

The doctor came and looked us over, long distance telephoned to our lungs and bronchial tubes, played a xylophone solo on our ribs, looked at Buddy's Christmas gifts, massaged us in several tender places, took our temperature and then announced solemnly that we had the grip. We could have told him that before he started in, but M. D.'s are peculiar. If you tell them you have a boil on the back of your neck they won't take your word for it. They must first take a punch at it to be sure that it is a boil.

That done, the doctor and the missus held a long consultation. "Ah," we thought, "they are now deciding whether we are worth saving. They are now making up their minds whether it is better to let us die or operate to save our life and let us become a public burden."

Then the consultation came to an end and the missus wore one of her happiest smiles.

"He has ordered a mustard plaster," we said to ourselves. "Nothing but the thought of slapping a red hot mustard plaster on to our chest and strapping it there could give her such a radiant expression of perfect satisfaction."

That was the verdict. A mustard plaster until our chest was seared to the likeness of a sheet of postage stamps. Then a cough medicine that tasted like furniture polish and every two hours a capsule.

After the mustard plaster had eaten its way through to our back fenceposts the doctor recommended a soothing application of camphorated oil. That was indeed kind of him. He might have ordered sulphuric acid.

Mrs. Jarvis Says Dr. Cassell's Tablets Cured Her Delicate Child When Nothing Else Could

Mrs. Jarvis, Box 286, Penetang P.O., Ontario, writes: "It is a pleasure to tell you what Dr. Cassell's Tablets have done for my baby. When only five months old he fell ill, and though I had medical advice for him he got worse. I tried several special foods, but none of them would stay on his stomach, and he became so thin that he seemed just skin and bone. He only weighed 10 pounds, and we never thought he could live. But chancing to hear of Dr. Cassell's Tablets I got some for baby, and am thankful I did. He is a bonny boy now, quite cured, and weighs 25 pounds at twelve months old."

LAKEFIELD, April 18. — Miss Georgina Everett returned to Norwood on Saturday to resume her duties as school teacher.

Mrs. W. Gillman returned to the village after spending a few days in Toronto visiting her sister, Mrs. Record, who has been ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Blewett spent the week-end in the village visiting relatives.

Mrs. W. Leonard spent a couple of days in Peterborough visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Edwards.

Miss Myrtle Northey returned to Peterborough to attend the Normal School, after spending the holidays at her home here.

Mrs. C. Tanner spent a couple of days in Toronto this week.

Mr. Chas. Gordon of Bobcaygeon is spending a couple of days in the village visiting relatives.

Mrs. Gordon Northey spent a couple of days in Peterborough visiting friends.

Mrs. C. Grylls was the guest of her brother, Mr. Scott, in Peterborough, a couple of days this week.

Mr. R. H. Alford spent Saturday in Peterborough on business.

Mrs. (Dr.) Gibson spent a few days in Peterborough last week visitnig relatives.

Mrs. Osborne and Miss Angela spent Tuesday in Peterborough.

Sergt. C. Thomas and Pte. Walker of Toronto were in the village this week on business.

Miss Edgar of Peterborough returned to the village after spending her vacation at her home in the city.

Rev. Mr. Johnson of Lindsay passed through here on Saturday en route for Selwyn.

The many friends of Mr. E. Peacock, proprietor of the Lakefield temperance house, will be pleased to learn that he is improving after a serious attack of pleuro-pneumonia.

Harry H. Leahy, who went overseas with the A. M. C. of Toronto University, has been invalided home.

Miss K. Atwood has returned home after a brief visit with Mrs. Grieber, Peterborough.

Vestry Meeting.

The annual vestry meeting of St. John's Church was held in the S. S. hall Monday, April 9th, Rev. A. W. McKenzie presiding.

Votes of thanks were extended to the following: Messrs. A. O. Sawyer and Wm. Graham, retiring wardens; Mr. Geo. Hilliard for his work as assistant warden; Mrs. Marling and Mrs. F. J. Tate for memorials put in the church during the year; Rev. A. W. McKenzie for his painstaking work in the parish during the absence of the rector, Rev. H. A. Ben Oliel, who is serving overseas; Miss K. Atwood, organist, and also to the choir and sidesmen.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

People's Warden—Mr. E. R. Tate.
Rector's Warden—Mr. H. G. Fitzgerald.
Delegates to Diocesan Synod—Messrs. E. R. Tate and J. Strickland.
Auditors—Messrs. Pattrick and E. R. Tate.

It was moved and seconded that Miss Atwood, the organist, receive an increase in salary of $25.

League Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Epworth League was held on Monday evening in the basement of the Methodist Church. Mr. Barrett officiated and Mrs. Higgins led in prayer.

The election of officers then took place and resulted as fololws:

President—Miss Eva Jory.
1st Vice-Pres.—Miss M. Payne.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Mrs. A. Higgins.
3rd Vice-Pres.—Mr. R. Little.

Pianist—Miss E. Webster.
Auditors—Messrs. Sam Grylls and Edward Bailey.

The new executive committee will meet on Thursday.

Miss Eva Jory gave a very interesting report of letters received from soldiers to whom Christmas boxes had been sent by the League. The meeting was then closed by the benediction.

The pancake social held in the S. S. room of St. John's Church under the auspices of the A. Y. P. A., was a well-attended and most successful event. The members realized about $13, which will be used for patriotic purposes. The room was nicely arranged with pussy willows. Donations of homemade cooking were sold, Mrs. Chappell presiding over the table. Three quarters of a barrel of old rubbers were collected at the door, which will be sold and the proceeds given to the Red Cross.

The members of the A. Y. P. A. held a social in the evening at which flashlights were taken by Mr. Trude Leggott. An enjoyable evening was spent in games, etc.

Instead of having the annual banquet of the A. Y. P. A. the members decided to give the pancake social.

The U. S. cruiser Birmingham reported by radio that she had halted the British steamship Southdown by a shot across her bows off Nantuckett Lightship.

PENNY BANKS COST TOO MUCH

Plans to cut down the cost of operating the Penny Bank system in Toronto Public Schools were made by a sub-committee of trustees yesterday. It has been shown that it costs about $20,500 in salary value of teachers' time to collect $205,000 yearly, and do the posting, etc.

The changes recommended by Chief Inspector Cawley and approved by the trustees are:

While the committee is in favor of the Penny Bank, it is of the opinion that the present method of conducing its operations is a too expensive tax on the time of the teachers, that measures should be taken to reduce the cost, and that pupils should not be employed to go on messages.

The following recommendations are submitted:—

1. That all posting and general ledger work be done at a central office. (Professor Mackenzie has expressed the opinion that three clerks would be sufficient to do this work).

2. That all class cash books be sent to such central offices once every four weeks.

3. That a mesenger service be arranged for transfer of books and supplies between school and central office of Penny Bank.

4. That the money be taken from the school to the local bank by caretaker or a member of the staff.

"We'll have to provide a messenger service to carry the books and money," said Trustee Noble.

"Yes, the children might be robbed," said Trustee Houston.

Trustee Noble: "I encountered a suggestive thing the other day. A woman who keeps a candy store opposite a school told me that she made more sales to children on Monday (deposit day) than on all the other days of the week."

Trustee Dr. Hunter: "That's childlike."

Trustee Noble: "It's really stealing the money they are given to deposit."

APSLEY

(Special Correspondence.)

APSLEY, April 18. — The Red Cross Society of the neighborhood held a tea and entertainment in the parish hall on April 10th. As some of the members are rather poetical, the folowing is a copy of the notices, which might be worthy of publication:

OLD TIME CONCERT

Old Time Songs by Old Time People

On the tenth instant, without fail,
Will be held the annual ten-cent sale;
The door of the parish hall is wide,
And for ten cents you may go inside.

There'll be bargain packages piled up high,
And for ten round cents your choice can buy;
For ten cents you can buy such cake
As your mother herself never dared to make.

So remember, everyone, I pray,
At seven o'clock on the tenth day
On this present month, come wet or dry.
Please gather to laugh and talk and buy.

There'll be a program choice and long
Of recitations, dialogues, music and song;
The best of talent will be displayed
By old time settlers quaintly arrayed.

The Red Cross Society will welcome you all,
To buy soldiers' comforts for your aid we call.
A sale of fancy work, program and tea,
For thirty cents: we ask your fee.

"Let Milton rhyme no more,
Wordsworth lie in his tomb;
Let Shakespeare stand behind the door,
And give these poets room."

Program.

The fololwing was the program rendered:

Inst. solo, Vesper Hymn — Miss Grant.

Chorus, The Maple Leaf Forever.

Vocal solo, We're Britons None the Less, Sir—Mr. T. Tanner.

Recitation, The Royal Volunteers —Mrs. Jones.

Violin and autoharp selection — Mr. and Mrs. Staples.

Chorus, When You and I Were Young, Maggie.

Recitation, The Widder Budd — Mrs. W. Tucker.

Vocal duet, What Are the Wild Waves Saying? — Miss Grant and Mrs. Gardner.

Address Rev. S. Carr.

Chorus, Silver Threads Among the Gold.

Recitation, Rock Me to Sleep — Mrs. Staples.

Vocal solo, Asleep in the Deep — Mr. T. Tanner.

Vocal Duet, Home, Sweet Home — Mrs. Staples and Mrs. Gardner.

Address—Rev. E. W. Gardner.

Chorus, When Johnny Comes Marching Home.

Vocal solo—Mr. A. Coones.

Chairman's Remarks — Reeve Lean.

Remarks on "Organization of the Society" and Votes of Thanks, by the president, Mrs. Gardner.

Record of Work done since roganization, by the treasurer, Mrs. J. McIlvena.

Distribution of parcels.

National Anthem.

At the close of the program three cheers were given for the society. The hall was beautifully decorated with flags, patriotic mottoes, red, white and blue streamers and evergreens.

Since the evening of the entertainment another poetical member has come to light and submitted the following verses:

The women they needed some yarn, you see,
To keep their needles a-going;
So they planned for an "old folks' concert and tea,"
Before the plowing and sowing.

The youths, they thought it would be very funny
To behold such an "elderly sight,"
But the women cared not, so's they got the money
To help them out of their plight.

The concert came off on the night of the tenth,
And for sure 'twas a beautiful night;
The youths got their laugh, the "old folks" their money—
(Thirty dollars)—so that's all right.

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

A GREAT VICTORY

At one time the fitting of eyes with glasses that were best suited to give the best aid to defective eyesight was largely a matter of guesswork. It resulted in a great deal of dissatisfaction and worry, but with Dr. Fowler's modern optical equipment, the diagnosis resulting from the test is absolutely correct, and efficient service is guaranteed. Science has triumphed over haphazard methods to a remarkable degree.

Prest, S. Deyell, and H. Fry are deservedly proud of their new edifice, and hope to see a large gathering of the friends and members of the congregation at the dedication ceremonies.

HASTINGS

(Special Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, April 18. — A large number of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Beavis (who were recently married) met at their home Friday night and treated them to a miscellaneous shower. A pleasant evening was spent with the happy young couple, and their friends extended to them hearty congratulations.

The Late Fred. Dickson.

A number of our citizens attended the funeral of the late Mr. Fred. Dickson, of Westwood, on Wednesday last, the cortege being a very length one, out of sympathy for the bereaved parents. The floral tributes were profuse, showing to some extent the high esteem in which the deceased was held. The ceremony was under the auspices of the Foresters.

Mrs. (Rev.) Snell was in Lindsay during the week attending the funeral of her uncle, the late Mr. John Comstock.

Hastings has every reason to be proud of the boys who have gone overseas from this village. Recently Mr. and Mrs. F. Runnels received the intelligence that their son Reg., who left here as a private in the C.M.R., had been recommended for a commission.

Rev. Isaac Snell has purchased a new motor car.

The choir of the Presbyterian Church was entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Humphries on Thursday evening last. The chief feature of the evening was a taffy-pull, which was much enjoyed.

The town assessor, Mr. J. Coughan, has been making his annual tour.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Stillman, who have spent the winter in town, have moved their effects to the Cobourg road, where Mr. Stillman will make cheese for the season. The house vacated by them will be occupied by Mr. and Mrs. J. Londerville.

Mr. Montgomery is moving his family into Mr. W. Atkinson's house, and will be cheese maker for the Ormonde factory.

The members of the I. O. D. E. met in their rooms on Saturday to pack socks and other comforts to be sent to the boys at he front.

Rev. A. Thomson, who has just finished his university course, is visiting his parents, Rev. D. A. and Mrs. Thomson, at the manse.

Mr. Sid. Fisher of Campbellford was in Hastings during the week.

Mr. Breithaupt of Kitchener spent a few days in town.

Miss Mabel Moore is around again after her recent serious operation for appendicitis.

Miss Robb of Norwood has been the guest of Miss Belle Thomson at the manse.

Miss Kingsboro of Deseronto is spending a few days with friends in the village.

WAR-TIME PROHIBITION

Mayor Mitchel, of New York, announces that after a conference with hotel and restaurant managers, all all-night liquor licenses will be cancelled for the duration of the war, beginning May 1. Thereafter all bars must be closed at one o'clock.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

J. B. Houston, principal of Victoria Public School, St. Catharines, and Secretary-Treasurer of the School Teachers' Association of St. Catharines and Niagara, Falls, is dead.

The Duke of Connaught inspected the Canadian camp at Witley, near Godalming, England, on Saturday. He gave special attention to the infantry battalions recruited mainly from Irishmen in Canada, who displayed the colors recently presented to the regiment by the late Duchess.

The schools reopened on Monday after the Easter vacation, with an increased attendance.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Staples have returned from a visit with friends in Bethany.

Mr. German of Deseronto is visiting his brother, Mr. R. German.

Messrs. Stanley Laing, Ross Gardner and P. English were here Wednesday en route for Kingston to don the khaki.

Miss Beryl Montgomery of Warkworth is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Baker.

A Narrow Escape.

Mr. Ernie Warner narrowly escaped when a colt which he was leading reared and, knocking him down, stepped on his face, inflicing serious injuries. Dr. Huyck dressed the wound, and we are pleased to learn the patient is improving.

Miss West of Ottawa is visiting in town under the parental roof.

Mr. Winter of Campbellford occupied the Methodist Church pulpit on Sunday morning.

Miss McCutcheon has returned from a visit in Stirling.

Sergt. Reg. Plant of Ottawa was a recent visitor at his home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Prest, Peterborough, have returned to their home after visiting friends in town.

Mrs. Yufelt of Warkworth spent the past week with her sister, Mrs. S. Stickles.

The Epworth League held an "old rubber" social on Monday evening. A good program was rendered, consisting of solos, duets, readings, etc. Ice cream and candy were on sale, and a good sum was realised to be devoted to the Forward Movement fund.

A number of friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. Hatherley on Monday evening and tendered to their daughter, Violet, the prospective bride, a kitchen shower. Refreshments were served during the course of the evening, games and music indulged in, and a very pleasant evening spent.

PETERBOROUGH MARKETS.

The market this week has been very quiet, a few loads of hay being the chief commodity offered.

Several of the owners of ranches in the back country have been bringing in stocker cattle.

Hogs were again very strong this week, selling for $16. The packers were not anxious to say how long this price would last.

Farmers having a surplus of horses are reminded that next Wednesday is the day when the members of the Ontario Horse Shippers' Association will be in the city. Every kind or condition of a horse will find a buyer.

HORSE MARKET.

TORONTO, April 19. — Information was received on Monday of this week that the British Government horse buyers would commence operations on May 1 in Toronto. It is understood that Brigadier-General Sir Charles Gunning had to postpone buying operations on account of a scarcity of inspectors. This difficulty has now been overcome and Canadian farmers will now be able to get the higher prices for remounts which the British Government pays. All information about the scale of prices can be obtained from the various dealers at whose premises inspections will be held. The movement of horses to market has slackened up recently, and it will be resumed in full force with the beginning of buying by the British army. Coming as it does at a time when the Western horse trade has fallen off, the announcement of British Government buying will be well received by horse dealers and breeders alike. At the Union Stock Yards Horse Exchange inspections will start on the above date.

A Traitor Killed.

News of the death of R. A. M. Abich, a former sergeant in the Royal North-West Mounted Police, and also a former employe of the Department of Immigration in Winnipeg, has just been received at Ottawa. When killed, Abich was an officer with a body of German scouts on the west front and he therefore died while fighting against the king to whom he had sworn allegiance.

Abich came directly to Canada from Berlin in 1903 and joined the R. N. W. M. P. at Regina. Later he became sergeant at Saskatoon and in 1911 he left the force and joined the staff of the immigration office in Winnipeg. He remained until the last week in May, 1914, when he suddenly informed his friends that his grandmother in Berlin was very ill so he had to return at once to the Fatherland. He sailed for Berlin early in June, 1914, just two months before the outbreak of the war. A. M. Abich was killed by a Canadian soldier.

Following his hurried departure from Winnipeg in May, 1914, nothing further was heard of him except that it was known he was leading a body of German scouts on the west front. Then during one of the recent Canadian raids a party of troops from the Dominion, including a member of an Alberta Battalion, a soldier from Edmonton who had some trouble with Abich when the latter was with the R. N. W. M. P. at Edmonton, bombed a German dugout. Before dawn the Canadians attacked an enemy's trench and immediately upon entering the dugout this soldier recognized Abich as the officer commanding the German party and in the fight which followed Abich was killed.

In the Past Tense.

"When I die," said the husband, "I want you to have this sentence placed on my monument: 'There is peace and quiet in heaven.'"

"I think," rejoined the wife, "it would be more appropriate to say: 'There was peace and quiet in heaven.'"

SELLING HIS WARES.

Even the Angular Woman Purchased a Few of Them.

THE peddler paused at the door of the wayside cottage.

"Lady," he said, tipping his hat, "could I sell you a self revolving rolling pin?"

"No!" snapped the angular woman in the blue sunbonnet. "I wouldn't take it if you gave it to me."

"How about an educated rat trap?"

"Don't want it at any price."

"Well, I guess I'd better be goin', ma'am."

"Hold on a minute. What is that you have in the package?"

"Why, that's the celebrated Gem wrinkle remover."

"Hugh! Wonder you didn't ask me to buy that?"

"Oh, no, ma'am. I know a lady with such an exquisite complexion as you have would never need a wrinkle remover."

"Tee-hee! You men are awful. I guess I'll buy that wrinkle remover as a souvenir of a perfect gentleman, and let's see—you might give me that rat trap and the rolling pin too."—Chicago Evening News.

Her Inefficiency.

"That actress can't play Lady Macbeth."

"Why not?"

"Lady Macbeth murdered sleep, but this woman can't even kill time."

Well, Somebody Must Be Boss.

"The trouble with our son," said father, "is that he wants his own way about everything."

"Yes," replied mother, "and I suppose that's what he thinks about us."

Anticipation.

"Why do you quarrel with your husband so these days? Have you ceased to love him?"

"No, but the cook enjoys it. She lingers with us hoping to see a fight."—Exchange.

Her Own Handiwork.

Wife (angrily)—I think you're the meanest man that ever was.

Hub—That's hard on yourself, my dear. According to your mother, you have been the making of me.

Not Needed Below.

"This is a funny ship."

"How so?"

"They have no clock in the cabin."

"Oh, no! But then, you, see, they always keep a watch on the deck."—Stray Stories.

Literal.

"I hear the Newlyweds had a falling out yesterday."

"So soon? What was it about?"

"About the turn in the road yonder. Their rear tire blew up."

A Matter of Looks.

First Boarding House Keeper—I always keep my boarders longer than you do. Second Boarding House Keeper—Oh, I don't know! You keep them so thin that they look longer than they really are.—Exchange.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

A SUNNY TEMPER.

A sunny temper is a talisman more powerful than wealth, more precious than rubies. If you wish to attract friends and to do your best work, keep your mind filled with sunshine, with beauty and truth, with cheerful and uplifting thoughts. Bury everything that makes you unhappy and discordant, everything that cramps your freedom and worries you. Bury it before it buries you. Adopt the sundial's motto, "I record none but hours of sunshine."

And Elsa Was Only Seven.

"Don't you think little Elsa gets more and more like me?"

"Certainly! Soon we shan't be able to distinguish the difference between you. She grows older, and you grow younger."

TALES OF THE "TANKS"

A Canadian sergeant-major, speaking of the "tanks," says: Near the fifth German line one of the "Land Navy" got stuck up momentarily. "I had to laugh," he said, "for there were Germans clambering upon its back and trying to find the doors. Then suddenly it began to move again with the Germans sitting astride. One by one they tumbled off and the 'elephant' just went on! One of the crew of a 'caterpillar' had a narrow escape," said a Londoner. "Prisoners were coming forward in large batches and one of the men from inside hopped out to tell the infantry as they approached. He was wearing what looked like a German helmet, blue dungarees, and a khaki tunic. I saw him stoop down to a wounded man, put his revolver on the ground beside him, and begin to bandadge the wounded fellow's head. A man in my platoon picked up the revolver and another pointed his rifle at him. What's the game?" said the 'caterpillar's' man. He was such a queer mixture that our fellows wouldn't believe his yarn till he brought out his pay book. Then he got his revolver back."

Private Halford, of a London regiment, got wounded in the German fifth line. "I saw a 'caterpillar'," he said, "go clean through a house. Later it had five trees ahead. It just went on till it came to the first tree, a foot in diameter. The tree stood for a few seconds, went slantwise, and just toppled over, and the 'caterpillar' went on. It would have taken three shells, hitting that tree to have flattened it as that 'caterpillar' did. I never saw Germans so scared to death before. A Bavarian sergeant told me that all the Saxons and Bavarians would give in 'when they saw the new wibbly-wobbly.'"

DOBRUDJA IS DREARY EVEN WITHOUT WAR

Half-Desert Province of Roumania Where Danube Slides to Sea —A Picture

Says a writer in the Fortnightly Review: Now we are in the Dobrudja (which means "good pasture"), the name given to the wild, rolling, God-forsaken plain which lies on the right of the river opposite the equally lonely and deserted Baragan steppe. Between these two vast stretches of open country the Danube winds and curves, sometimes shallow, sometimes deep, around sprawling, marshy islands, the two largest of which measure respectively fifty and forty miles in length and about ten miles in breadth. It is difficult to describe utter emptiness, utter loneliness. All the objects and scenes and life with which one has become familiar on the voyage now vanish. The floating mills, the white villages, the bright costumes, the sounds and sights of human activity are no more to be seen or heard.

In Grip of the Orient

The East and the atmosphere of the East holds this land in thrall. The political and military power of Islam may have retreated, but its ideals and doctrines remain, and the very air of the Dobrudja brings supineness, fatalism, a belief in the uselessness of combating anything, especially the silent, irresistible forces of Nature, the will of a passionless, remorseless Deity.

Flowers, Boats and Desert

Along the muddy, sunken river banks, the rushes and stunted willows are a brilliant green, and on the islands, glowing in great vivid patches behind the rushes, low scrub and tamarisk, there are wonderful flowers —melilot, the sweet-scented clover, convolvulus, wild roses, blue veronica, chicory, snapdragon. Up and down stream go tow-boats and lighters and sailing vessels, manned by brightly-clad Turks, Rumanians, or Greeks. Out there is a desert, a desert whose monotony is broken by a few [illegible] roads, or tracks where the [illegible] dust lies a foot deep, to rise in blinding, choking clouds with the passing of every wandering bullock caravan, or sheep and swine herd. Sometimes the grass gives place to maize, but both grass and maize are yellow—yellow grass covering a boundless, undulating, melancholy desert.

Here and there, at rare intervals, are villages, or rather clusters of rude, clay, wattle-roofed huts surrounded by tall, decrepit, wattle fences. Summer may be terrible here, but winter is still more awful when the snow covers the face of the earth, when the fierce Russian wind sweeps by with hurricane force, leaving men and beasts frozen stark in death; when the wolves muster to satisfy their hunger and the ravens croak over the icy fields. Civilization cannot tame the Dobrudja; civilization may bring railways and bridges, but the homes and thoughts and customs of the inhabitants are not more civilized to-day than they were in the days of the Roman conquest.

REVIEW OF 1916 BY GENERAL A. W. CURRIE

Canadians Win Every Time, But Hun Morale Unbroken, Says Head of First Division

"We expect fully that next year will see some hard and fierce fighting," said Major-General A. W. Currie, of the 1st Canadian Division, writing in December, 1916, from Canadian headquarters in France. The letter in part says: "The old division is still going strong, though the original members are getting very, very few; of all the officers and the infantry and the brigade and divisional staffs who came over to France in the beginning, there are only three of us who have never been away from the division for any reason, other than ordinary leave. Of course we still have a number of officers who have come back after being sick and wounded."

General Currie was among the first to offer himself for active service, and left Canada in command of the 50th Regiment, Victoria, with the first Canadian Contingent, and has been in France on active service since. He has been decorated by President Poincare with the Legion of Honor with the title of Cross Commander. He left Canada as colonel and received his promotion on the field.

Drafts Do Well

The letter continues: "The health of the troops is simply splendid. Everyone is cheerful and optimistic. The new drafts are very good physically and are willing and anxious to learn the game quickly and get into it at once. I feel certain the splendid reputation already enjoyed will be maintained. The corps did extremely well on the Somme, and the old division just a little more than its share. We had the unique distinction of going in three times. It was a great compliment. As long as there is a man left, the old division still has a fight in it. Our men do not whimper and do not quit.

"We fully expect that next year will see some hard and fierce fighting, for the old Boche is by no means licked. It always annoys me to read in our papers that the German morale is very low, that the German soldier is so sick of fighting that he surrenders at the first opportunity. Such stuff is all balderdash. You'd think we had nothing to do but go over and they would hold up their hands. All rot, any that we have been opposite have always been ready for a fight though we've licked them every time we have come to gripe. We've licked this year, we've shown him that we could take his strongest works, and anything and everything we've taken from him this year still remains ours. We have inflicted more casualties we have received, and whenever you do that in this war you win, for it is a war of atrition. We have given him a taste this year of what he may expect next year, and as soon as the weather gets right we're going at him again and knock the very devil out of him.

Shuns Peace Talk

"About his peace proposals, I think everyone is agreed that he is like the poker player who, having all the chips in his stack, thinks it a good thing to break off the game. You've met those fellows, haven't you, and you've usually agreed they were players. Well, the old Boche is worse. He knows he has more now than he'll ever have again, and of course he wants peace, but he won't get it, and he knows he won't. It is a long, long time since we left Canada; we are all longing for the time to come when we'll get home again."

SLACKER WHO MADE GOOD

G. B. tells the story—and it is only one out of very many—how one slacker has made good. "This particular young man," he writes, "was a magnificent fellow physically, the very type of a soldier; but for the first eighteen months of the war he refused point-blank to enlist. He turned a deaf ear to all appeals to his manhood and patriotism, to abuse and to scorn. He did not seem ashamed to be known as the champion slacker of the town; and it was only when conscription laid its hand on him, and he was compelled to go, that he joined the army. And yet this man, who was branded to the world a coward, has proved himself a hero. Before he had been a week at the front he had won the D.C.M. by an act of the most reckless bravery. This feat was followed by many others; and presently news came that he had been shot through the heart while trying to rescue a wounded friend in 'No Man's Land.'"

N.B. PREMIER KEEN BUSINESS MAN

Merchant Prince Never Sat in Legislature—Small Practical Experience in Parliamentary Duties

New Brunswick's Premier in 1917 came originally from the little village of St. Martin's. It has been for many years a lumbering centre, and in the management of a large lumbering business Mr. Foster's father was engaged when his son was born. The date of his birth was April 9, 1874, making him next to Premier Martin of Saskatchewan, the youngest of the Provincial Premiers. At the age of fifteen Mr. Foster entered the employ of the Bank of New Brunswick in St. John as a junior.

Married at Twenty-five

On his marriage to Miss Vassie, daughter of Mr. Vassie, of the firm of Vassie & Co., Mr. Foster, then a young man of twenty-five, was taken into the Vassie firm, and on the death of Mr. Vassie soon after, he became vice-president and managing director. Under his care and direction the business enjoyed considerable expension, and became one of the largest establishments of its kind in the Maritime Provinces, with customers in all three Provinces.

Energetic and Dependable

What then were his claims to office and his qualifications for the discharge of its onerous duties? Primarily, his outstanding success as a business man. A man of marked ability—energetic, enthusiastic, broad-minded, cultured, and, above all, dependable. In days when it seems so hard to induce business men of the first rank to enter politics, it was encouraging to find a man of Mr. Foster's type willing to step into the breach. It was well known among his friends that Mr. Foster had been nursing political aspirations for some time. He was a candidate in St. John in the Provincial elections of 1912, and, though defeated, headed the Liberal ticket in the city.

CANADA WORLD POWER

Canadians Must Be World-Citizens—Uphold Justice and Truth

War and its relation to the history of mankind was the subject of an address by the Rev. Dr. Eaton of New York. Speaking in part as follows, he says: The war had revealed three great facts in relation to the history of mankind. The first was the tendency towards democracy—the spiritual unity and equality of men. The second was, that freedom was worth all it cost in blood and treasure. The third great principle is that the soul is the man, and the soul is the nation. These are the great mountain peaks of human consciousness revealed by the war.

"We have become a world power," Dr. Eaton said, "and must order our future domestic institutions in the light of these international relations. Henceforth Canadians must be world-citizens, and exert their utmost force to advance the principles of justice, truth and right."

The speaker believed that Canada was as fine a specimen of democracy as the world contains, and the most successful experiment in the federal idea; and her destiny as a world servant in world politics will be along the line of applying the federal principle which she has worked out successfully under the most difficult circumstances for fifty years.

Again he says: "Canada must conserve her resources. In the forests of British Columbia we have an Empire's wealth. In the natural power of Canada's waterfalls are the most unbelievable resources, and these should belong to and be administered by the people. Canada is respected and trusted by great nations, and hence occupies a position of great responsibility."

Gen. Nivelle's Eulogy

A touching ceremony took place at the French General Headquarters when General Joffre handed over during the morning to General Nivelle his duties as Commander-in-Chief of the armies of the north and northeast. In a little speech he congratulated General Nivelle on his promotion and presented to him the heads of the various services in whom, he said, he would find able and devoted collaborators. General Nivelle paid homage to the glorious conqueror of the Marne.

Colonel Alfred H. Sturdee, Australian A.M.C., who was invested with the C.M.G. by the King is the only brother of Vice-Admiral Sir Doveton Sturdee.

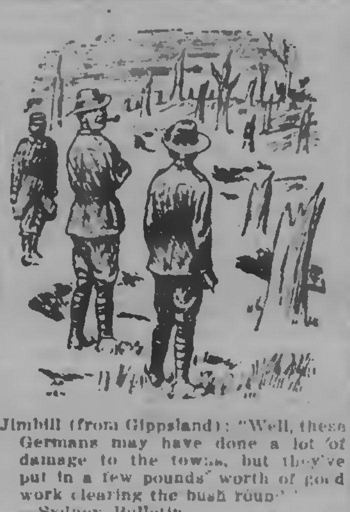
VALUABLE FIR TREE

Douglas Fir Most Important of Canadian Woods

The flagstaff in Kew Gardens is a Douglas fir which was shaped and creosoted in Vancouver. Poles of Douglas fir are highly valued for ship's masts and flagstaffs because of their straightness, durability, strength, and resilience. The timber is also largely used for telegraph and electric railway poles and bridge and trestle timbers. Douglas fir is regarded as perhaps the most important of Canadian woods. Estimates of the available supply range from three hundred thousand million to three hundred and fifty thousand million feet, board measure. The tree is most abundant, and attains its largest size not far above sea level in southern British Columbia and in the region between the coast of Washington and Oregon and the western foothills of the Cascade Mountains. There the trees, crowded close together, rise to a height of three hundred feet.



Jimbill (from Gippsland): "Well, these Germans may have done a lot of damage to the towns, but they've put in a few pounds' worth of good work clearing the bush round."
—Sydney Bulletin.

Speed of Zeppelins

"Not so many years ago a British engineering expert calculated that the Zeppelin could not attain a speed of thirty miles an hour, as he proved by figures that the ship would collapse under the air pressure! At the time this speed had been actually exceeded by a Zeppelin," said R. P. Hearne. The tendency is to attribute too high a speed to the Zeppelin vessels. In still air it is doubtful if a higher speed than sixty-five miles an hour can be reached, and by the most careful calculation Mr. Hearne has come to the conclusion that the average speed of the modern Zeppelin in war trim is about forty miles an hour with [illegible]

MAP OF CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY.
THE SPECIAL LOW RATES

A PIONEER doing his chores near his log cabin at Stonewall, Manitoba, one day early in June, 1881, put down his feed bucket to put a hand to his ear to listen. Then he threw down the bucket and ran toward the log cabin. As he neared the cabin the man shouted:

"Here she is a-comin'!"

His wife and children ran out of the cabin to watch the first train on the Canadian Pacific Railway steam along from Winnipeg to Portage la Prairie. A few days previous, the first map of the lines was issued at Winnipeg. The map announced "Special low rates on emigrants' moveables." The tariff went into effect June 13, 1881. At that time the railway lines ran from Rat Portage to Winnipeg, a distance of 133 miles; from Winnipeg to Portage la Prairie, 55 miles, and from Winnipeg to Emerson, 65 miles. The total mileage of lines in operation was 253 miles.

In 1881 Portage la Prairie was the western terminus of the railway, and Rat Portage, now Kenora, was the eastern terminus. The Pembina branch, [illegible] miles long, which was later taken over by the Canadian Pacific, was started in 1875 and completed in 1878. The first train over this branch left St. Boniface on November 3, 1878. The train officers were F. Hayward, conductor, C. D. Vanama, engineer, and J. Donovan, fireman, and it consisted of an engine, three flat cars and a caboose. It was a new sensation to Winnipeggers, who had gone by York boats in summer, and the dog train in winter who had journeyed overland in the Red River cart; and afterwards in stages or Red River steamboat. A new era of affairs was ushered in by the railroad. It made a trip from Ontario to Winnipeg in [illegible] days possible, over the line to [illegible] Portage. Previously it often took five weeks to make the trip, and even a longer period in winter.

When the Canadian Pacific took over the branch lines in Manitoba, connection with the outside world was made at Emerson 65 miles from Winnipeg, by St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba Railway. The main line of the C. P. R. west to Portage la Prairie was situated a little north of the present line. The time card in 1881 showed names of several towns and villages which are hardly heard now. A daily service was maintained south and west of Winnipeg, and east as far as Cross Lake, from which point to Rat Portage a bi-weekly service was run. The 55-mile run to Portage la Prairie was made in 5 hours and 40 minutes, with a stop at Poplar Heights for refreshments, giving the actual running rate of a fraction more than ten miles an hour. The trip to Portage la Prairie today is made in one hour and thirty-nine minutes, including several stops. The surveyed route, which for years had been selected as the future direction of the railway west of Portage la Prairie, ran northwestward. When the first map of the lines was published it was announced that work was proceeding rapidly on western extension from Portage la Prairie. From a total of 253 miles in 1881 the Canadian Pacific Railway has extended to 18,233 miles of lines. The railway now has 1,500 miles of double tracks, which exceeds that of all other Canadian railways put together.

The first map of lines ever issued by the railway company. The lines in 1881 extended 252 miles. To-day there are 18,000 miles in operation.

men's Compensation Act. Thinking the trouble had been cured, he settled with the board for $200, but the old disability returned. The board refused further compensation and Mr. Elliott applied to J. H. Burnham, M.P., who referred him to the Trades Council. The case came up last night, but it was decided that nothing could be done.

Theatrical Companies.

Delegate Stenton complained that the Hydro Commission charged visiting theatrical companies $1.10 for inspecting their electrical apparatus every time they put on a show. The fee has been raised from 60 cents since April 1. The companies object to the expense and threaten to cut out electric fixtures altogether unless some concession is granted them. This would throw a number of highly paid electricians out of work. Mr. Stenton says the companies feel they should be required to pay a tax at the outset that would cover the entire season. He will write to other trades councils in the province and endeavor to get them interested in the matter.

Mr. Stenton said the electrical fixtures carried by the companies are up to date and perfectly safe, superior in every way to the most of such apparatus owned locally.

QUINN SUES FOR $5000 DAMAGE

William Quinn, of East City has issued a writ against Chief of Police Daniel Thompson and Detective Wm. Meagher, claiming $5,000 damages for arrest and false imprisonment. The suit arises over the arrest of the plaintiff here at the request of Belleville authorities, who alleged that Quinn was implicated in receiving goods under false pretences. Later it was found that a mistake had been made, and Police Magistrate Dumble discharged Quinn, without any reflection on his character.

The plaintiff's attorneys are Messrs. Fralick and Abbott and the writ was issued in the County of Hastings.

The $8 Head Tax Goes in Effect the First of May

The $8 head tax which is imposed against Canadians entering the United States in the new United States Immigration Act is to stay, as Congress put it over the President's veto According to an announcement made in Toronto by R. L. Fairbairn, general passenger agent of the Canadian Northern Railway, the head tax will be collected by the railway companies, who will issue a special head tax guarantee certificate which will be taken up at the border by United States immigration inspectors. The new regulation goes into force May 1st.

Following the decision of the London Council to refuse a grant of $3,000 to St. Joseph's Hospital, Bishop Fallon, in a pastoral letter, says: "Stripped of all pretences, this reckless economy on the part of the city council was simply a weak surrender to anti-Catholic envy, jealousy, and prejudice."

LUMBER ORDERS FOR B.C.

British Admiralty Awards Contracts For Over Sixteen Million Feet

Large contracts for lumber, aggregating 16,500,000 feet, exclusive of an open order for all the clear spruce available, have been placed by the Imperial Government with British Columbia mills. Victoria, Vancouver and Chemainus mills will supply two cargoes of railroad ties ordered by the British Admiralty through a San Francisco house, this order approximating 7,000,000 feet. Another order has been placed direct by the British Government for 3,500,000 feet of lumber, 2,000,000 feet of which will be clear fir, the remainder being heavy timbers, which will be shipped through to St. John, N.B., and handled from that point by British transports. In addition a third order has been placed by the Admiralty for 500,000 box shooks, approximating 6,000,000 feet. The total output of clear spruce for airplane manufacture and shipments are being sent overseas as fast as the mills can supply this class of lumber. The new orders are welcomed by the mills because the placing of these contracts with the British Columbia mills will assure steady operation for some months to come.

Dangerous Icy Sidewalks

How many villages, towns and cities have had suits begun against them in the past for injuries caused by icy sidewalks? queries the Western Municipal News. How many know what power the municipality has to remove snow and ice where the property owner has not done so and where they may charge the costs? Use your power, clean the sidewalks, save damage suits.

The Capacious Cow

To be capacious the dairy cow must be long from shoulder to hip bones, have well-sprung and deep ribs, giving sufficient space for the storage of much food. In addition the body should be covered with hide that is soft and pliable, which in turn is covered with hair that is soft and silky. This texture indicates power of digestion, and, coupled with size of barrel, insures great capacity.

OBITUARY

MRS. JAMES BEST.

Anne Wilson, widow of the late James Best, died at the family residence, 518 Smith Street, early this morning, after a short illness. She was born in London, England, 88 years ago. She is survived by one daughter, Miss Susan Best, who lives at home.

The funeral will be held on Saturday afternoon, at six o'clock to the Little Lake Cemetery.

IMPORTANT MEETING.

A very important meeting of the Canadian Kitchener League will be held on Friday evening, April 20th, in the Oriental Drawing Room, at 8 o'clock. It is most important that every member be present.

TURKS ROUTED BY BRITISH; 1244 ARE TAKEN PRISONERS

Fire From Warships Aided Troops on Land and Position Taken Was Strengthened---Fighting in Palestine Still in Progress.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, April 20. — Gen. Maude has forced the passage of the Shatt el Adhem, attacked the Turks' main positions and completely routed the Turkish forces, says an official statement issued today by the British war department. So far, 1,244 Turks have been taken prisoner.

WARSHIPS AID THE ARMY.

LONDON, April 20. — The general officer commanding the British forces in Egypt reports in an official statement to the war office that on Tuesday the British advanced north of the Wadi Ghuzse in Southern Palestine and captured the Turkish advanced positions along a front of six and one-half miles The attack, the statement says, was assisted by the fire of wrships, and the position gained was consolidated. Fighting was still proceeding at the time the report was sent.

RUSSIANS ARE STILL ACTIVE.

PETROGRAD, April 20. — There has been scouting and rifle firing on all fronts, says today's war office statement.

LONDON, April 20. — "We gained ground during the night in the vicinity of Villers-Guislain," says a war office report. "Elsewhere there was nothing especially interesting."

FRENCH PROGRESS CONTINUES.

PARIS, April 20. — "South of St. Quentin the enemy's artillery kept up a heavy fire, to which our batteries replied vigorously.

"During the night patrol encounters occurred north of Urvillers. In the region of Laffaux we made appreciable progress and took fifty prisoners. We repulsed several counter-attacks by the Germans in this sector. On the Vauclere plateau and south of Courcy we carried several tranches with grenades.

"East of Loivre well-conducted operations enabled us to gain ground and take two hundred and fifty prisoners.

"In the Champagne the night was marked by violent reactions of the enemy. Very strong counter-attacks preceded by bombardments were launched by the Germans in the region of oronvillers. Our curtain of fire and our machine guns completely negatived these efforts, which cost the enemy very heavy losses.
the enemy very heavy losses. A score of prisoners remained in our hands.

"Everywhere else the night passed in quiet.

"On April 16th tn German airplanes and two captive balloons were brought down by our air pilots in an aerial engagement."

PROHIBITION IN UNITED STATES

WASHINGTON, Aprl 20. — A bill to authorize the president during the war to proclaim a prohibition against the sale, manufacture, gift, transportation, importation or exportation of all alcoholic spirits, malt, or vinous liquors, or any other intoxicating drink, was introduced in Congress by Representative Howard of Georgia.

APPEAL AGAINST DECISION OF THE MAGISTRATE IS DISMISSED.

Judge Huycke has dismissed the appeal of D. Minicola against the decision of Police Magistrate Dumble fining him for a breach of the grocers' early closing bylaw.

The chief point of contention was as to whether or not potatoes were properly classified as groceries.

NO PLACE FOR PEERS IN THIS COUNTRY.

LONDON, April 20. — Mr. Martin, in the Commons, has given notice of the following resolution:

"This House regrets that in the time of a great fight for world democracy against autocracy the Government has become responsible for the appointment of resident peers in Canada, thus introducing the thin end of aristocracy in a purely democratic country."

MAY FIX PRICES OF FOODSTUFFS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, April 20. — Secretary of Agriculture Houston today recommended to the Senate that he Council of National Defence be empowered to fix minimum and maximum food prices.

CAPTAIN BURNHAM IS IN FAVOR OF DEATH PENALTY

Opposes Mr. Bickerdike's Bill to Abolish Capital Punishment---Bill to Grant Aid For Highways Brought up Again,

OTTAWA, April 20. — Parliament yesterday resumed its session that was interrupted to give Sir Robert Borden an opportunity to attend the Imperial Conference at London. Acting-Premier Sir George Foster, in his opening address, welcomed the United States as an ally and extended the sympathy of the nation to the Duke of Connaught in his recent bereavement.

Capt. Burnham Favors Hanging.

Mr. Bickerdike called up his bill in favor of abolishing capital punishment, and cited the case of Russia, where such action was taken immediately upon the overthrow of the autocracy. Sir Wilfrid Laurier and others opposed the bill, consideration of which was postponed.

Capt. J. H. Burnham also opposed the abolition of capital punishment, but believed the discussion of Mr. Bickerdike's bill would have a good effect.

Aid for Highways.

Now that the Government has obtained party control of the Senate, the highways improvement bill is to be reintroduced. Hon. Frank Cochrance gave notice of reintroduction of the bill to appropriate $10,000,000 to aid highways construction in the various provinces.

DASH OF TROOPS BRILLIANT DESPITE THE INTENSE HEAT

Exhaustion of British Horses Saved Turks From Further Loss.

LONDON, April 20.—In the Mesopotamian statement that General Maude telegraphs in Wednesday's report, he says:—On the night of the 11th we forced the passage of the Shatt El Adhem stream, which was held by a detachment of the 18th Turkish Army Corps. Next morning we attacked the main position held by this corps, covering Istabulat Station and about 12 miles south-east of Samara on the right bank of the Tigris.

"Operations were carried out with great vigor and dash, and resulted in the complete rout of the enemy."

In a later despatch dated yesterday, General Maude reported: Though no full statement of our captures has yet been made, twenty-seven officers and 1,217 Turkish rank and file have been collected, and more are coming in. Six machine guns and a considerable amount of other booty have been taken, and only the exhaustion of our horses prevented our capturing the enemy's guns. Our total casualties numbered twenty-three.

General Maude reports that the dash and determination of our troops, especially the cavalry, in spite of great heat, were brilliant.

32 Are Reported Today as Killed in Action ---Seven Local Casualties---Fourteen Canadians Die of Wounds.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, April 20. — Of a total of 213 in the noon casualty list today, 32 are given as killed in action, 14 died of wounds, 171 as wounded and five missing. There are no officers in the list. This brings the total rank and file so far as announced up to 2,410 since Easter. The officers' total remains at 395.

Peterborough's toll in the casualty list issued today is just as large as that of yesterday.

PTE. ALFRED BLACK

Mrs. Mary Black, 201 Rubidge St., received word that her son, Private Alfred Black, previously reported as missing, was now officially reported killed in action on April 2.

PTE. W. J. BILLINGTON.

Mrs. J. T. Billington, 470 Elm St., received word that her son, Private W. G. Billington, of the 8th C.M.R., had been wounded on April 11, and was in No. 3 General Hospital at Boulogne with a gunshot wound in the thigh. This is the second time that Pte. Billington has been wounded. He went back to the trenches last October.

PTE. FRED. NEWTON.

Pte. Fred Newton, who enlisted in this city, is reported at the stationary hospital at Boulogne, where he was admitted on April 13 with a severely wounded arm and thigh.

PTE. FRED. WARE.

Mrs. Fred. Haylock, 47 Ware St., received word that Pte. Fred. Ware had been wounded in the late fighting and was in the hospital at Boulogne with a gunshot wound in the jaw

MEMBERS OF 93RD WOUNDED

Three members of the 93rd from this district are also reported wounded:

Pte. William Woodbeck, Lasswade.
Pte. J. Montgomery, Hall's Bridge.
Pte. C. W. Johnston, Peterborough.

PTE. HAROLD BELL.

MUNITIONS WORKERS IN KRUPP' FACTORY ARE NOW REPORTED OUT ON STRIKE

Labor Troubles Spreading in Germany Owing to Shortage of Food---Paper Says 300 Factories and 300,000 Workers Are Idle.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

AMSTERDAM, April 20.—Strikes have broker out in various munition factories in Germany, including Krupps. The Telegraaf says it has learned from German sources.

IT'S A HUNGER STRIKE

COPENHAGEN, April 20. — German papers received here deal with the Berlin hunger strike, which is now reported at at end, giving details which were not included in the earlier news telegrams.

The Berlin Tageblatt estimates that the number of men on strike at 300,000. Vorwaerts says that 210,000 were involved. Work was stopped in 300 munition factories.

As a result of the strike a commission of laborers was formed which after conference with Dr. Wermuth, the president of the Berlin Subsistence Commission, obtained a promise that in future it would be consulted in all food questions. The Laborers' Commission also received a guarantee that scores of the most important food stuffs would be provided for the next few months.

Accordingly, work was resumed today, the laborers meeting last night having declared the food authorities' promises satisfactory.

They Risked Their Lives For You

Tomorrow the Peterborough War Veterans will hold their first Tag Day, and it is hoped that a generous response will result from the appeal which they are making for funds to assist the soldiers when they get home. It is also the intention of the members to see that all returned soldiers' dependents are cared for while their pension claims are being adjusted.

Peterborough has been recognized as a leader in all matters patriotic, and the good example which it is hoped will be set here tomorrow will no doubt be followed in other places.

The appeal is made as near the anniversary of the battles of St. Julien and Langemarck as was possible.

The ladies of the different patriotic organizations are lending every assistance to the returned heroes.

Have your money ready early, as you will be tagged before you get to work.

MAY BUY ENTIRE CROP OF WHEAT

BRITAIN, CANADA AND THE UNITED STATES TO JOIN IN PURCHASE.

OTTAWA, April 20.—There are reasons for believing that negotiations are in progress with the United States and Canadian authorities looking towards the purchase of the entire North American wheat crop of 1917 at a fixed price.

The negotiations entered into recently by Sir George Foster for the purchase of the Canadian crop failed because the grain growers would not accept the price offered. Without their consent and co-operation it would have been impracticable while prices were available in the United States probably ranging much higher. The situation, however, has now changed.

NO PASTRY FOR THE BRITISH

FOOD CONTROLLER ISSUES NEW AND DRASTIC ORDER.

LONDON, April 20. — The Food controller, Lord Devenport, has issued an order, effective Tuesday next, prohibiting thereafter the sale of light pastries, muffins, crumpets or tea cakes. Cakes, buns, scones and biscuits can only be sold if they conform to the drastic restrictions respecting the amount of wheaten flour and sugar used. Tea shops, which are so popular in London and elsewhere in England will suffer seriously by the new order.

The War Office has ordered a return made by May 1 of all horses, mules, cattle, sheep, pigs, and agricultural implements in Great Britain.

VICTORY OR DEATH

Further Reverses Mean End of the German Monarchy.

AMSTERDAM, April 20.—Count von Reventlow, writing in The Tages Zeitung, asserts that victory is necessary if the German Monarchy is to endure. He says:—

"We have long expressed the view that German victory and the German Monarchy are mutually dependent Without a German victory the German Monarchy will soon cease to exist."

BOYS FOR WORK ON THE FARMS

PRINCIPAL KENNER RECEIVES LETTER FROM MINISTER PYNE.

The Minister of Education has sent a letter to Principal Kenner, of the Collegiate Institute, in which he dwells upon the desirability of encouraging as many as possible of the boys in the school to engage in farm work this spring. The Minister further suggests that the matter be also brought to the attention of the parents with a view to securing their co-operation.

Wilson's Message in Hun Trenches

WASHINGTON, April 20.—Thousands of copies of President Wilson's war address of April 2 last before a joint session of Congress have been showered over German soil from Entente airplanes or placed in the hands of Germans who have been taken prisoners in the British and French drives, as well as given to other German and Austrian prisoners.

STARS AND STRIPES WAVES FROM HIGHEST FLAGSTAFF ON PARLIAMENT BUILDING

Imposing Cathedral Services Celebrates Entrance of United States into War---King and Queen Take Part and the Crowds Cheer For New Ally.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, April 20.—British people and Americans in England celebrated America's participation in the world war by service in St. Paul's Cathedral, which was attended by an immense congregation. There was a great display of American flags in London, and all other English towns, and popular demonstrations by the crowds which surrounded the cathedral.

The Stars and Stripes floated from the highest tower of the Parliament Buildings, the first time a foreign flag ever flew there. The King and Queen and Princess Mary came from Windsor for the service, and drove from the station to the cathedral in open carriages. They were received at the cathedral entrance by the Lord Mayor and the Sheriff, the Archbishop of Canterbury, the clergy of the cathedral, and the United States Ambassador.

WELLAND, April 20.—Joe Marabito, who murdered his wife on Tuesday, has been caught and locked up.

Rifle Ranges Are Let For Grazing

Col. Walker and his staff have moved into the offices lately occupied by Lieut.-Col. Ackerman and the staff of the 247th Battalion, C. E. F.

The Colonel received a letter from the Militia Department this morning regarding his request that the rifle ranges be placed at the disposal of the Greater Production Committee. The Department state that he ranges have always been let for grazing purposes, and, as that is just as much in the line of greater production, tenders would again be asked for the use of the grounds for cattle-grazing.

It is also pointed out that the distance of the land from the city made its use by working men almost out of the question.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, APRIL 20, 1917

UNION PRINTERS IN THE WAR.

THERE ARE FOUR MEMBERS of the local Typographical Union in active military service in one department or another, and while these are so engaged their membership fees are paid by their associates. The International Typographical Union, so far as Canada is concerned, has over six hundred representatives in uniform. Twenty-seven of these recruits have made the supreme sacrifice, and their relatives have been taken care of, the Union having paid out $7,675 in mortuary benefits to the mothers, widows or other relatives of those who have got "30" on the battlefield.

THE GARDEN SYNDICATE.

IT IS PROPOSED to form a syndicate of one hundred persons in order to cultivate a tract of eighteen acres of land on the outskirts of the city, the land to be planted to potatoes. It has been suggested that each member of the syndicate put in $5 to defray the cost of preparing the soil, planting the seed, cultivating and harvesting the crop.

The proposition is an ambitious one and possibly can be made to work out satisfactorily, but it is not without its objectoisn. There would most certainly be more or less friction in such an association of interests. It would be almost impossible to get one hundred men who would work together in unison. It would be impossible to make a division of labor that everybody would regard as just. There would be easy-goers and slackers in any bunch of one hundred men that could be selected in the city; there wuold be, too, incompetents and experts.

When the crop was harvested, if the results were at all up to the optimistic expectations of the promoters of the scheme, and the potatoes were to be sold at cost, considerably below market price, who are to be the favored customers, who are to get the benefit of the investment? Here, again, friction would be inevitable.

Perhaps the success of all municipal gardening propositions depends to a large extent on individual effort. The tract of land referred to could be staked off into small plots and each worked by a single individual. The spirit of friendly rivalry that would be developed by such a plan would be one great guarantee of the success of the venture. The amateur gardener, as a rule, is as vain of his efforts in the agricultural line as the non professional is of his athletic feats.

If there is a tract of eighteen acres of good soil available for planting, all that is to be paid in the way of rent being the taxes, why cannot some man be found willing to take up the work as a private enterprise? The great object in view is to increase production so as to arrest the price of foodstuffs in its mad career skyward. After the potatoes were planted their care could be assumed by one man with a horse and the modern implements for cultivation.

The estimates of first cost made by the promoters of the promoters of the proposition are too low. The $500 spoken of would not be sufficient to defray the outlay for the seed. Eighteen acres of potatoes in one plot cannot be cultivated by hand to any advantage, and the cost of a man and horse for the purpose would alone eat up the sum which it is proposed to raise to finance the scheme.

Then, too, the man who sows a crop of any kind has to take a gambler's chance. The weather is not always suitable, and there is always that haunting risk of failure, total or partial. All these points must be taken into consideration. The early rains may be too copious and the latter showers, so essential to a steady growth, may be lacking. The reverse, too, may be the case, and in either event the result will be the same. Returns on the investment of money and energy will prove inadequate.

To point out the objections to a proposition does not necessarily imply an attempt to knock it. All honest effort to prevent people from going into a venture where the chances are against them should not be so regarded.

FOR HOME DEFENCE.

THE GOVERNMENT is issuing appeal after appeal for men for the Canadian Defence Force. The latest to hand sets out that it is pretty poor patriotism to wait until you are forced into active service. Men should enlist of their own free will instead of waiting for the Militia Act to be put into force.

Canada needs 50,000 men for home defence, the appeal continues. Up to the present the defence of the country has been undertaken by the troops in training for overseas service. All the units of the C. E. F., however, who are still in Canada are under orders to sail at early dates, and in the course of a week or two all will have left the country.

This is a time of war, and the country cannot afford to be left without an adequate force to take care of emergencies. In order to prepare for any contingency the Prime Minister has issued a call for 50,000 men for home defence. There are thousands of men in Canada who through family or other reasons find it impossible to go overseas, though they feel that they would like to do something to help in the great struggle. These men will understand that by joining the Canadian Defence Force they are releasing other men for overseas service.

"Let each man of us see that we spare nothing, shirk nothing, shrink from nothing, if only we may lend our full impetus which shall carry to victory the cause of our honor and of our freedom," said Lord Kitchener in one of his memorable speeches.

Service in the Canadian Defence Force is particularly attractive to young men who are physically fit and who wish to do what they can in the present struggle. Terms of enlistment, pay, subsistence, clothing and equipment are the same as for overseas service. Separation allowances are given in the case of married men. Drills will be conducted two nights and one afternoon a week until the units go to camp. For these drills the men will be paid fifty cents each, and the regular army pay will begin at camp. Steady employment until the end of the war is assured, for the Canadian Defence Force is to be kept under arms until that time, and six months afterwards, if the Government sees the need for this extension.

Militia regiments are actively recruiting men for the Defence Force battalions. Particulars can be got from the advertisements which the Government is having inserted in the newspapers which outline the plan.

TALK OF AN ELECTION.

SIR WILFRID LAURIER, who, since the war began, has been steadily and unalterably opposed to an election until all danger to the Empire is past, would be well advised to curb the tongues of some of the irresponsible members of his party who are shouting for a general election. Nobody, with the possible exception of a few professional partisans, wants to see this country thrown into the bitterness and strife of a general election at he present time. This, we believe, is as true of the Librals as it is of the Conservatives. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, his chief lieutenants, and the best elements of the Liberal press are all on record as opposed to an election. This being so, all talk about refusing an extension and forcing the Government to the country should cease. It only serves to distract attention from the greatest work Canadian statesmen and the Canadian people have had to do since Confederation.

FARMERS AS BUSINESS MEN.

"HOW BIG A FARM can a man handle?" asks a correspondent, who then proceeds to answer his own question as follows:

A man can handle as big a farm as his administrative ability will allow. Some men ought to be on ten acres; others can farm ten thousand. It is merely a question of business ability and common sense. What we have got to learn in this country is that the farmer is the man who is engaged in the basic industry here—the man who must make the money, or the bulk of the money, to pay off Canada's liabilities; and, realizing that, we should encourage thinking men to settle on our farms. The average farmer in Ontario does not do any thinking for himself. All honor to the man who feeds his pigs and milks his cows; but we want men as well who figure, men who think, men who can manage, such men as are needed in any business that is to succeed. You have got to take the farmer into your confidence. He has asked for a farmer's bank, for farmers, and you have got to give him a farmer's bank or take him into the banking business and make use of his brain and ability. The farmers of this country have proved that they are scund business men."

Same in Canada.

(Springfield Republican.)

A farmer, or his son, or his son's sons, or his hired man, or his hired man's son, taken from the farm and put in a military camp this year will be in most cases made to help Germany fight this country's friends abroad to the final injury of our own people.

Help Our Partner, Nature.

(Peter McArthur.)

We need the spirit of victory at home as well as at the front. The will-to-win can give force to a hoe as well as to a bayonet, and every strike will be needed. Our great partner, Nature, is waiting for us to begin. She is flooding every nook and cranny with life, and if we do our part we can use it for the service of humanity.

WONDERFUL FEATS OF MODERN SURGERY

Moulding New Faces For Soldiers, Removing Bone and Muscle From Parts of the Body For Grafting

Somewhere in England there has come into being a hospital—or, to be quite accurate, a large and increasing sector of a hospital—which exists solely for the restoration of faces shattered and disfigured by the war. The surgeon in charge of these wards is one whose speciality is the plastic surgery of the face. In co-operation with him there works a dental surgeon whose task is to re-create the bony framework of jaws that are either fractured or partly missing. The technique is somewhat as follows. Each case is first of all photographed and then X-rayed, so that the precise nature of the deformity may be correctly estimated. In this hospital a pastel drawing is also executed, for it has the extraordinarily good fortune to possess on its medical staff a physician who is also a well known artist.

How Grafting is Done

In the operative treatment of these cases one main fact has to be borne in mind. Within certain limits bone is interchangeable with bone, muscle with muscle, skin with skin. The bone forms a framework, the muscle a pad, and the skin a protective covering, and the art of plastic surgery consists in taking pieces of bone, muscle, and skin from parts where they can be spared and grafting on parts where their existence is imperatively necessary.

In such cases a piece of rib cartilage will be transplanted to form the bridge of a new nose, a piece of rib to form a new lower jaw, and a large flap of skin from the arm to cover in and protect the newly created parts. The technique of transplanting a skin flap consists in detaching a piece of skin of the appropriate size and shape, generally from the inner surface of the arm, but leaving it attached by a narrow strip of skin, so as to preserve its blood supply.

Three Weeks in One Position

The flap, twisted on its axis, is then placed over the gap on the face to be covered in, which has already been "freshened up" so that the graft may take, and the arm is strapped to the side of the head, where it has to be kept for three weeks. This is no light trial for the patient. When union has occurred, the narrow strip of skin still attaching it to the arm is severed. The results of these operations and the skill with which what seems, to the layman at least, a perfectly hopeless condition can be repaired must be seen to be appreciated. There are inevitable limits placed on the hand of man. But one can make a perfectly presentable new face.

WHY DISRUPT AUSTRIA

To Save East From Domination of Pan-Germanism

The following is an Italian view of the proper results of the war, as affecting middle Europe: Only the Alps and the Adriatic can protect Italy. By exacting these natural boundaries she is not only pursuing national aims, she is closing to Prussianism the door of Trieste and Fiume, which made the Adriatic in the past and would make it in the future one of the main channels of invasion of the Mediterranean, equally harmful to Italy as to England, France, and Russia. Moreover, by thus forcing the dismemberment of Austria-Hungary, Italy causes the abolition of slavery for 40,000,000 of her non-German subjects, who, through the omnipotence of Germany and the evil policy of the 10,000,000 Germans of Austria, were compelled to be blind tools of Prussianism.

In other words, with the policy long cherished by London and Paris, all the 50,000,000 of Austria-Hungary's subjects were put at the disposal of Germany; while with the solution insisted upon by Italy, only 10,000,000 Austrian subjects of purely German blood will be in a position to do so. It is not absolutely sure that the Germans of Austria will become satellites of Germany. But, even if they did, this would not mean an increase of power for future Germany. If all the program of the allies is realized, Germany will lose about 10,000,000 of her non-German subjects. Therefore, even if she gained the 10,000,000 Germans of Austria, Germany would consist, after the war, of at most 70,000,000 people—exactly as she was before the present war.

The dismemberment of Austria-Hungary means something further. It means the formation of a number of small but powerful states, founded on the principle of nationality, utterly anti-German at heart, and profoundly devoted to the allies, because it will be from the allies that they receive liberty and independence. The benevolent protection of the allies and a possible league among them will insure a permanent and indestructible barrier against any further peril of Germanic expansion toward the East.

REFUSED WEAR TROUSERS

Girl Munition Workers Were Discharged and Sought Redress

Four girls who refused to wear male attire at their work sought before the Glasgow Munitions Tribunal a week's wages from a Clyde shipyard firm in lieu of notice on being dismissed. Certain girls employed by the firm wear male attire, and it was decided that all should wear trousers and tunic or leave the firm's employment. The girls alleged that there was no danger from machinery through wearing skirts. The sheriff refused compensation, observing that due notice was given.

Lucky to be in England

"I should probably have been shot by now," said a conscientious objector to the Metropolitan Asylums Board Appeal Tribunal when asked what he would do if he were in Germany.

WESTERN HORSE INDUSTRY

E. W. McLean, of Winnipeg, gave a practical talk on the [illegible] and future outlook of the horse market in the West. After sketching the history of horses in Manitoba as conditions were 15 years ago, Mr. McLean said that the three types of horse that he found most saleable were the draft, agricultural and delivery horse. The first should have good feet and legs, weight 1,650 to 2,000 pounds and stand 16.3 to 17 hands high. Agricultural horses were good sellers in the spring; they should range from 15.2 to 16.2 hands and weigh from 1,400 to 1,600 pounds. There was also a demand for farm chunks weighing 1,200 to 1,490 pounds. Delivery horses had to have good feet and legs to stand city pavements, and also plenty of style and action. Light delivery horses should weigh 1,100 to 1,300 pounds. Heavy delivery or express horses from 1,300 to 1,400 pounds.

Provincial Treasurer of Alberta, announced a rural credits bill of a radical nature to be administered by a body called the Alberta Farm Loan Board.

ADVICE TO FARMERS

The Man Who Ploughs Straight Makes Best Progress

Hon. Valentine Winkler, Minister of Agriculture, Manitoba, in an address to farmers referred to the difficulties with which farmers had to contend with in the early days and said there were certain districts where farmers at one time found it impossible to grow wheat without it being subject to danger from frost. This proved a blessing in disguise as it forced them to build stables and go in for the production of live stock, he said. "This had the result of so improving the districts that they were now growing the best possible crops with the danger from frost almost eliminated." He asserted farmers who plowed straight invariably obtained the best results, not that the straight furrow made the difference, but the man who was careful to plow straight was more likely to be careful in other directions than he who plowed crooked. It would not do, he said, to grow wheat all the time, but it was imperative they should have rotation of crops and go in for mixed farming. He declared it is necessary to summerfallow land and to plow deep in the soil in the fall rather than light in the fall and deep in the spring. He spoke of the necessity of re-introducing as much nitrogen in the land as possible. This could best be done if after sumerfallow, clover or alfalfa is sowed, he said.

WOODEN PACIFIC FLEET

Vancouver and Seattle See Strange New Craft

In view of the considerable number of wooden ships which have been and are being constructed at the Pacific coast, the question has arisen regarding the sailing vessel as a permanent factor in the business of ocean shipping. Before the war the construction of sailing vessels had ceased almost entirely, even in France. Norway and the United States, which were the principal countries retaining any great volume of sailing tonnage. One of the results of the war was a renewed activity in the building of auxiliary craft. The Pacific Coast-Australian lumber trade in particular has interested itself in constructing wooden sailing vessels installed with auxiliary motors. It is predicted now by shipping interests that these new wooden craft equipped with crude oil engines will soon displace the old four-masted barkentines and schooners, and may offer effective competition to the modern cargo steamer, used almost exclusively before the war.

GROCERS DOWN THE PRINTERS

Last night the Grocers' bowling team took two games from the Printers in a league fixture and thereby strengthened their chances somewhat for the league championship.

The game was quite exciting from start to finish as the teams were bowling fairly even all the way.

Hard spares were made by Moore, Wilson and Cairns of the Printers, and by Heard, Ross, Gillespie and Fitzpatrick of the Grocers.

Tonight the De Laval team meet the West Ends.

The score was as follows:

PRINTERS

Moore	159	168	136	463
Henderson	149	161	168	478

To Clean Light Plumes

Put one feather at a time into a paper bag with one cup corn meal, ½ cup flour, 1 large tablespoon borax. Shake gently until the feather is clean, then take it out of doors and shake well. Fine lace can often be cleaned the same way.

Dried Peaches

Peaches, pared and cut in halves may be cooked in syrup then dried in the sun. When dry, pack in a jar with sugar about them To use, soak over night and stew in the same water.

Strawberry Sauce

Cream two tablespoons of butter, add gradually one cup of powdered sugar and a little lemon juice. Beat in crushed berries and serve cold, or melt the butter over hot water and serve hot.

FOR RETURNED SOLDIERS

How Winnipeg Citizens Care For Heroes and Dependants

A Winnipeg writer says: While every person in the city has in some way heard of the Returned Soldiers' Association, few have but a hazy idea of how this splendid organization came into existence, and the magnificent work it is carrying on. As a matter of fact, the "R.S.A." came into existence from sheer necessity in May, 1915. At that time a few loyal-hearted citizens saw the dire need for some organization which would care for the men returning from the front, and look after their dependents while they were away.

Not the least of its many duties is that of meeting returned men at the railway station and given them such a welcome as to make them appreciate that they have at last reached their home. At any hour of the night in all weathers, members of the Returned Soldiers' Association are on hand to welcome back those men who have done so much for the Empire.

The Association has through the kindness of citizens and friends throughout the province been enabled to do a great work on behalf of the men. Tons of provisions kindly donated have been distributed, coal, wood and money given wherever it is needed. In addition a professional nurse is employed by the Association who devotes the whole of her time in calling on the returned men and looking after their requirements when sick.

Often on the arrival of the men from the front, they are without funds and remain that way until such time as they receive their checks from Ottawa. It is during this period that the Returned Soldiers' Association steps in and supplies the needed funds to meet their requirements.

Another branch of the work of the Association is that of looking after the war widows and fatherless children This is in the hands of a most competent and capable committee of ladies who devote a great deal of their time to visitations, and in supplying the necessaries of life as they are required.

FIGHTING FOR LIBERTY

Experiences of United States Citizens With Canadians Overseas

A number of wounded Americans who served with Canadian Highland battalions at the front told interesting experiences after returning to hospitals in Canada. Pte. R. A. Wilson of Philadelphia enlisted with the 42nd Highlanders of Montreal in 1915. He got hit by shrapnel in the right hand and left leg at Ypres, but after a couple of months in hospitals he went back to Ypres. There he was caught by a high explosive shell and partly buried, being left on the field for a day and a half before he could be taken back.

"I'm a good Yankee," said Wilson, "but if they only fix me up I am going back to take another crack at the Germans."

Pte. W. L. Cutter, Fitchburg, joined the 52nd Battalion. His regiment was badly mauled at Ypres, and then had still harder fighting at the Somme. The regiment was badly cut up and was reinforced several times, once by companies of Canadian Japanese. Pte. Cutter at the Somme was hit three times in the arm and once in the chest when a machine gun got his range. He come back with a paralyzed arm to have it amputated.

"All we Americans who have joined in the fight have to say is to ask that you good Canadian reserves send on plenty of reinforcements. God knows, the boys need them. I wish I could go back, but what can a man do with one arm?" he concluded.

REMEMBERS CANADA'S NEED

Fine Example of Former Canadians in Duluth Not Isolated

Thirty ex-Canadians located in Duluth, Minn., held a dinner at the Kitchi Gammi Club in that city with the idea of doing something to aid the great cause. Before these gentlemen had left the table the sum of $2,126 had been subscribed and it was decided that of this amount $2,000 should be remitted to various centres "just across the line" where it would do the most good. The cities of Winnipeg, Port Arthur, Fort William and Fort Frances have each received a substantial amount of this $2,000 to be applied to the wants of families of soldiers at the front The Canadians in the United States have not forgotten the land of their birth.

Comfort For Employes

For the convenience of the employes, of whom there are nearly 2,000 in the Windsor Station buildings, the Canadian Pacific Railway has set up a cafeteria luncheon at 15 cents in a large apartment which will accommodate 251 persons at a sitting. There are hundreds of girls, especially who have not time to go home, or who, if they do go home, are greatly pressed for time With this service at their disposal they will save car fare; they will get a thoroughly satisfying luncheon; and they can have the comfort of the lounge room in connection on wet or cold days a lounge room which contains a piano, magazines and papers and in which the employes can rest for the balance of their lunch hour.

To Prevent Fires

Careful inspection and prompt repair of defective flues, and asbestos or metal protection for all woodwork near stoves and pipes would materially reduce the number of fires in Canadian homes.

CARE OF THE HAIR

Beautiful Glossy Hair Result of Early Care

The two most important roles to observe in improving the hair and keeping it in good condition, are, apart from cleanliness, daily ventilation, and daily massage of the scalp. The first aids cleanliness, the second promotes circulation and encourages the hair to grow. When you give your your hair its daily brushing, stand near an open window and let the air blow through the strands. If your hair is short, toss it up by passing the fingers through it. If it is long, shake it thoroughly in the air. When the weather is fine, especially if there is a sun, and you are lucky enough to possess a back garden, give your hair a sun bath. Let your hair hang unconfined, and toss it about in the sun for a few minutes Sun and air are the biggest beautifiers of the hair giving it life and lustre.

For Cooking Vegetables

When cooking vegetables remember that all vegetables which grow above ground should be put into boiling water, and all which grow underground in cold water with the exception of potatoes.

Washing Oilcloth

Never use a brush on oilcloth, as it will rub off the paint. Sweep it clean, then wash with a soft cloth in lukewarm or cold water Use no soap or hot water or you will spoil the cloth.

To make one lemon do the work of two, warm it well in the oven before squeezing You will get twice as much juice from it if you do this

The World's Best Home Entertainer

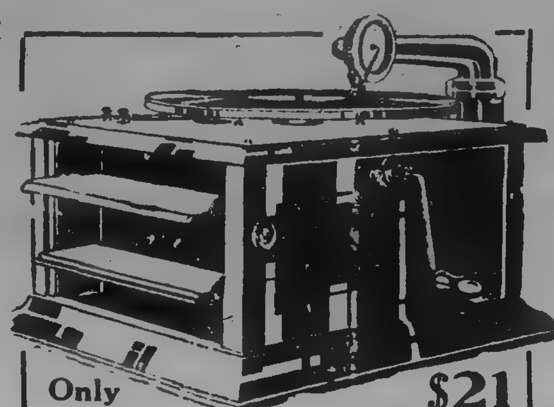
The Grafonola—the last word in tonal perfection in phonographs—is an instrument that every home should aspire to possess. Not only as an entertainer of the highest order, but as a piece of furniture it is an ornament that would grace the finest drawing-room.

Built to Last a Lifetime

Mechanically perfect. Sturdy construction and highest grade finish in all Grafonolas. None of the after-troubles that accompany most talking machines if you own a Grafonola.

This Grafonola in Choice of Walnut, Oak or Mahogany

The beautiful parlor Grafonola, illustrated on left, is a fine example of the cabinet maker's art, being very elaborately hand carved. The motor has three spring drive, is powerful and noiseless. All exposed parts are heavily nickel plated. Has Columbia improved tone arm and reproducer, large tone chamber with tone control leaves, and large drop-tray record cabinet—capacity sixty records. A magnificent instrument. If you will buy twenty records (costing $17.00, and giving you forty selections) Grafonola will be sent home to you at once, and you may pay for it after you get it, $2.50 per week until Grafonola is paid for.



Only $21

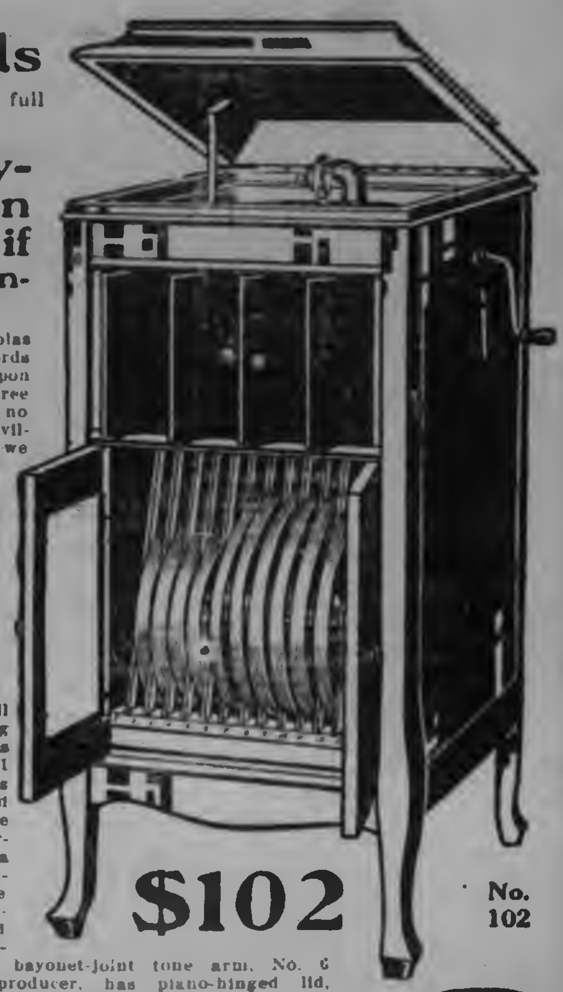
The No. 21 Grafonola, here illustrated, is a model that embodies the most important and exclusive Columbia features—strong, noiseless motor, sound regulating tone chamber, graduated start and stop device, etc. Plays any size disc record. Cabinet is made of selected quarter-cut oak. Sizes 13 x 13¾ inches. If you will purchase five records (costing $4.25) we will deliver the Grafonola to you at once, and you can pay for it in weekly sums of $1.00 afterwards.

No Down Payment Needed on the Grafonola if you purchase a quantity of Records

Choice of a dozen styles of Grafonolas is given you. The number of records you are required to buy depends upon the price of Grafonola selected—three examples are given here. There are no extra charges made to price for privileges. Come and learn how easy we make it all.

This Grafonola in Choice of Walnut, Oak or Mahogany

A cabinet grand design that has all the merit of tone quality of talking machines two and three times its price. Over 41 inches high, 19 x 21 inches in breadth and depth, contains powerful motor with all exposed parts heavily nickel plated, full tone control operated by a simple button, large sound chamber, graduated dial speed regulator, new bayonet-joint tone arm, No. 6 Columbia reproducer, has piano-hinged lid, self-supporting. Cabinet has capacity for upwards of 100 records.



No down payment required if you buy fifteen records (costing you $12.75 and giving you thirty selections). We send the complete outfit home to you, and you pay for the Grafonola afterwards $2.00 weekly until paid for.

SERVICES AT GOSPEL HALL

CONDUCTED BY MR. HARPER GROW IN ATTENDANCE AND INTEREST.

The special meetings in Gospel Hall continue to grow in interest and attendance. The singing last evening was especially cheery and attractive, including a duet by the Misses Hartshorn. Mr. Harper took occasion to thank the local papers for publishing the reports of the meetings. Tomorrow's meing the last service of the week a large crowd is expected, at which time Mr. Harper will speak on "An Eastern Love Story."

The message of last evening was taken from Acts 13: 38-41. The evangelist showed the need of the gospel message in the occurrence of the wor sin. He enlarged on sin's universality, power and penalty, and then showed the value of the message in the Person of Whom it speaks, even the Lord Jesus Christ.

The birth, life and death of our Lord was reviewed, and sinners exhorted to trust Him in order that they might enjoy the "power of the message," which is forgiveness from sins and justification from all things.

The difference between the two blessings was illustrated by the well-known case of Captain Dreyfus, of some years ago. The response to the message was then dealt with by the evangelist, who said [illegible] was a challenge of faith, and all who believe are justified, that faith apart from works or prayers would save the guiltiest sinner. He also said it was a warnig to unbelief.

The service was concluded with a telling incident that happened at Niagara Falls some years ago. Those who were out of Christ were exhorted to believe in him to the salvation of their souls.

The people of Peterborough are enjoying these services and speak of blessings received.

ADDRESS AND UMBRELLA FOR MRS. C. S. THROOP

REMEMBERED BY FELLOW-MEMBERS OF CLASS ON EVE OF DEPARTURE.

Twenty-five of the members of the Married Ladies' Bible Class of Trinity Church, of which Mrs. H. H. Allum is teacher, met last night at the home of Mrs. James Lillico, Homewood avenue, to bid farewell to Mrs. C. S. Throop, a member of the class, who is leaving Peterborough to reside in Hamilton. The following address was read by Mrs. Lillico and Mrs. Throop was presented with a sterling silver handled suit case umbrella by Mrs. George Jamieson, president of the class:

Our Dear Mrs. Throop:

I am sure you will understand how very sorry we are to part with you, you who have been so faithful in doing all you could to promote the interest of the class.

We shall indeed miss you and the sweet Christian fellowship and social intercourse we have enjoyed together.

But, dear Mrs. Throop, our friendships are not for earth alone; they only begin here, to be perfected when we gather in the presence of our blessed Lord Jesus, "where there is fulness of joy and pleasures for evermore," and until then "underneath are the everlasting arms."

Be assured we shall follow you with our prayers and best wishes.

As the token of love and esteem in which you are held by our class, we ask you to accept this umbrella.

Signed on behalf of our class,

Mrs. H. H. Allum,

Teacher.

The lull which invariably follows the reading of an address and a presentation was tactfully broken by the class joining in singing "For She Is a Jolly Good Fellow." This gave Mrs. Throop a chance to recover from her surprise, and she made a feeling reply.

A pleasant social hour was spent and light refreshments served. The gathering came to a close with the singing of "God be with you till we meet again."

OBITUARY

S. J. GRIFFIN.

Mr. S. J. Griffin died at Norwood this morning after a few days' illness, aged 81 years. The late Mr. Griffin came from Groton, S. D., last week with the remains of his wife, who was buried in the family plot last Saturday. Immediately after the funeral Mr. Griffin was taken ill and passed away in the home, of Mr. Henry Buck.

Deceased was born in New York State, but lived in Norwood for a number of years, leaving there to take up residence in South Dakota. He is survived by one daughter, who, with her husband, Mr. Harhand, was with him at the time of his death. The other surviving relatives are two brothers, Charles, of this city, Clayton, of Detroit, and two sisters, Mrs. R. Wylie of Sudbury and Miss Emma, of Minneapolis.

The funeral will be held Monday at 1:30 p.m.

LOCAL OPTION FOR HOME RULE

LLOYD GEORGE IS SAID TO HAVE FINAL PLAN FOR SETTLEMENT.

LONDON, April 20. — The Manchester Guardian says it is virtually certain that Premier Lloyd George will announce the government proposal for the solution of the Irish question on Thursday. The scheme will be based on county option, with some arrangement for keeping the counties that vote against home rule in orderly relation to the legislation of the Dublin Parliament.

The proposal will put the Home Rule Act into force at once, and, while it is expected that both Irish parties will oppose the scheme, it is believed that neither will persist in its resistance. The Guardian says it seems probable that Sir Edward Carson has yielded to the Premier's solution.

CAPT. RIDDIFORD TAKES UP CASE

FORMER PASTOR OF PARK STREET CHURCH IS HEARD FROM.

Capt. (Rev.) W. C. Riddiford, former pastor of Park Street Baptist Church, who went overseas as chaplain of the 142nd Battalion, takes strong exception to the views of Rev. Dr. C. R. Flanders in the recently much-discussed letter of the latter, published in the British Weekly. Capt. Riddiford, now with the 4th Reserve Battalion, 5th Brigade, Bramshott Camp, Hants., England, in a letter encloses a program of a "Novice Boxing Competition," of which he was master of ceremonies.

After describing at length the results of the boxing competitions and telling of the disappointment of all the officers, non-commissioned officers, and men at the breaking up of the 142nd Battalion in England Captain Riddiford refers to Dr. Flander's attack as follows:—

Statement is Not True.

"I see by the British Weekly that Dr. Flanders thinks the Canadian officers a lot of drunkards and incapable leading men. Well, I have been among them now for going on six months, and I want to say it is not true. They drink, some of them, but so do many of the yellow-streaked civilians and parsons who preach this is a righteous war and will not make a move to get on the job and take a man's place in this struggle for the democratic principles of a free people.

It's easy to sing 'Rescue the perishing and care for the dying' and then sit in the cynic's chair and let the other fellow do the dying for you.

"The Canadian officers are gentlemen, and the deeds of our Canadian boys in France, Flanders, and Belgium could only be inspired by capable leaders.

"Well now, good-bye, sir. We have got the Germans going and we'll hang 'Bill Kaiser on a sour apple tree, and plant the old Union Jack in the walls of his castle in Berlin. Then we'll 'Pack our troubles in our old kit bag' and sing 'The Maple Leaf For Ever.'

"Tell the boys to come over before the women's battalions put them to shame.

"Sincerely yours,

"CAPT. W. C. RIDDIFORD."

DR. ANDERSON TO SPEAK TONIGHT

G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., presided at the meeting of the assembly room of the Collegiate last night and which was addressed by Dr. George Anderson on behalf of the Naval Institute of Canada. There was a fair attendnace and the speaker gave an interesting talk on "Gibraltar, the Most Unique Spot in the British Empire."

Dr. Anderson will lecture in the sam eplace tonight on "British Rule in Egypt." This is the last of the series, and Dr. Anderson should be greeted by a large audience. Aside from the worth of his lectures, the object to which he has donated his services is a worthy one. Judge Huycke will preside.

Meeting Monday Night.

Dr. Anderson has arranged with Regents Mesdames R. R. Hall and D. Walker to lecture at the Public Library Monday evening under the auspices of the I. O. D. E. His subject will be "Malta, the Half-way House of the British Empire."

CARE OF FLANNELS

White and colored summer flannels depend upon the care they receive in the laundry for their beauty after they have been worn once. Have ready a warm suds and wash them in it; do not use a board, but rub gently with the hands. Never wring flannels, but squeeze them dry and rinse them at once in water the same temperature as that they have just been washed in. Do not let them lie about wet, but hang to dry as soon as clean. A little indigo in the rinsing water makes white flannel look whiter. When flannels are packed away for some time they often turn yellow and no amount of washing or rubbing will help them. In such cases we can only resort to stringent measures and bleach in earnest. Buy a sulphur candle, such as is used for disinfecting. Hang the flannel in a barrel, so the smoke can come up through the goods; light the candle and set it in the bottom. Put the top on the barrel and wait patiently until the sulphur fumes are gone, when the flannels will be almost as nice as new.

Hard on the Veterans

A third special meeting of the Stratford Council will be necessary to pass a by-law appointing Private Herb. Denroche, a returned soldier, as tax collector, at $700 per year. At Monday's regular session the by-law was read once and further action was blocked by Ald. Roberts. Last night the second reading was given, but Ald. Jones held up its final passing, declining to meet the plea of his colleagues that the choice be made unanimous. Another meeting has been called for Friday night to give the by-law its third reading. Both Ald. Roberts and Ald. Jones declared emphatically that they had no other name to offer.

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

LEST YOU FORGET

We would again remind you that Dr. Fowler has the most complete, modernly equipped optical establishment between Toronto and Montreal. Every latest improved instrument for correct eye testing has been installed regardless of cost, and his patrons are sure of obtaining absolute satisfaction. The lens-grinding machines are automatic, and the work is done to a mathematical nicety, without attention and very rapidly. Repairs entrusted to the power repair department can be done while you wait if necessary, but without delay if left for attention.

COUNCIL MEETING.

The Otonabee Council met on the 16th of April.

On motion, Cecil Stark will be paid 25 cents per rod for about forty rods of wire fence on the Asphodel boundary line, Mr. O'Leary to measure and inspect.

Nicholas Doris was appointed to operate the grader, employ and oversee the road gang.

The following accounts were passed:

J. Adamson, gravel, $3.

Jos. Steele, cleaning out the duck pond ditch for 1916-17, $7.

Grand Trunk, for freight on two road scrapers, 75 cents.

Roy Kempt, one cord of tamarac wood, $4.

Alf Kemp, one-half cord of slabs, $1.25.

Council adjourned to May 31st, to meet as court of revision.

Fictions About the Duke.

The following letter from James White, of Ottawa, explains itself, and recently appeared in The New York Times:

"In an editorial note in your issue of January 23, you related a story to the effect that, in July last, the Duke of Connaught reviewed Stoney Indians at Banff, Alta.; that the Indians were late; that the Duke rebuked them for keeping him waiting, informing them that he 'was not accustomed to be kept waiting by anybody,' and that the Stoney Chief replied, 'Well, then, you have had a new experience.'

"It is a pity to puncture this story, but the only word of truth in the narration is the statement that the Duke was kept waiting. Furthermore, any one who was in contact with the Duke during his stay in Canada, knows that the story that this courteous gentleman rebuked an 'untutored savage' is an impossible one.

"Finally, if the Duke had been annoyed, it would have been as justifiable as that of a host who has had his dinner spoiled by inexcusable dilatoriness of a guest.

"You state, respecting this fictitious speech, that it was of precisely the kind that all expect the most tactful and cautious representatives of royalty are, in these days, hearing with ever-increasing frequency.' Without reflecting upon your system of government, may I, as a British subject, born and bred in Canada, say that, when we look back, particularly upon the events of the last two and a half years, we are satisfied that, under our system, the people rule, and that the Crown never stood higher in the affections and esteem of the people of the British Empire."

Lecture Tonight at St. Paul's Church

The third in the series of monthly lectures on the subject of Prophecy will be given this evening in St Paul's Church. The speaker will be the Rev. F. W. Hollinrake, of Barton Street Methodist Church, Hamilton. His subject will be, "Why I Became a Pre-Millennialist."

All Christians believe in a time of future blessedness for our earth when "men shall beat their swords into plough-shares and learn war no more," and when the will of God shall be done everywhere in the world. This time is generally spoken of as the Mellennium, meaning a thousand, because it is supposed to last one thousand years.

A Pre-Millennialist is one who holds that Christ comes before the thousand years—a Post-Millennialist believes that He comes after. The one holds that it is the presence of Christ that makes a Millenium possible; the other holds that the world will reach this condition of blessedness through present agencies, through the preaching of the gospel and the influence of the Holy Spirit on men's hearts.

Rev. Mr. Hollinrake will speak of both of these doctrines at length and will tell us why he was compelled to give up the post for the pre-millennial position. The public are invited to attend.

If you are suffering from constipation or sick headache, try Dr. Norvall's stomach and tonic tablets.

Be sure you get the genuine, as they are guaranteed and should they fail to give you relief, return the bottle to your dealer and he will rerefund your money.

SPRING NATTINESS.

Piquant Turban Made Up of Grosgrain Navy Silk.

Straight, flat necks, like the twelfth century pictures, are one of the newest finishes for frocks. The perky cock's quill reposing atop a nut shaped turban so neatly tailored with flat plaits running fore and aft is what holds our attention, however.

A CRISP MODEL.

MISS GUNTHER

Of the White Sewing Machine Company, is in the city for one week.

She will be at the Cressman Store for an entire week. During that period she will conduct demonstrations showing the adaptability of the White machine, and demonstrating its many superior advantages. Special prices and easy payments on machines will be also a feature of the big sewing machine week at the Cressman Store. The public are asked to remember that the sale and demonstration will last for one week only.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

WRIGHT—SMITH

At the quietest of ceremonies on Wednesday the marriage was solemnized of Millie, daughter of Mr. and Gordon S. Wright, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Wright, Niagara-on-the-Lake. The bride wore her travelling dress of navy blue taffeta, with maize blouse and black hat, with touches of colored embroidery. Rev. Mr. Mitchell performed the ceremony, and both bride and groom were unattended. Mr. and Mrs. Wright will reside at Orono.

MAYNARD—MURRAY

The marriage took place quietly Wednesday morning, at St. Francis' Church, Toronto, of Hilda Marion, daughter of Mr. James P. Murray, of Euclid Avenue, to Mr. James Howard Vincent Maynard, son of Mr. J Maynard, of Port Hope. The nuptial Mass was celebrated by the Rev. Fr. Fraser in the presence of the immediate relatives and friends. The bride wore white with veil and orange blossoms,, and her only attendant was Miss Bessie McSloy, of St. Catharines. Mr. Arthur Mulholland was best man. After a wedding breakfast at the home of the bride's father, Mr. and Mrs. Maynard left for a short honeymoon.

DOUGLAS—MACKENZIE.

A very interesting wedding took place at St. George's Church, Toronto, yesterday afternoon when the Ven. Archdeacon Mackenzie, grandfather of the bride, assisted by the rector, united in marriage Miss Frances Niven (Katchinka) Mackenzie, eldest daughter of Prof. M. A. Mackenzie, to Mr. George Mellis Douglas, of Northcote Farm, Lakefield.

Mr. and Mrs Douglas, after a short honeymoon, will reside at Lakefield.

GIRTH REDUCED; PRICE GOES UP

COST OF SAME PAIR OF TROUSERS ADVANCES $1 IN A YEAR.

An incident which throws some light on the high cost of some articles and explains at least one phase of the high cost of living was brought to light yesterday by a well-known member of the printing craft.

Just about a year ago he purchased a pair of trousers in a local shop, and when they were delivered he found that they were too small. He returned them and secured another pair. The receipted bill for the goods was placed in the pocket of the trousers at the time of the sale, and was, of course, returned with them when they were changed.

In the meantime the high cost of living had conspired to reduce the rotundity of the printer, and trousers of a lesser extent as to waist line were essential to his comfort.

Yesterday he visited the same store again and purchased another pair of trousers, paying one dollar more for them than he did for the pair he purchased last year. Imagine his surprise when he examined the purchase at home and found in one of the pockets the old bill with his name and address and the price of the trousers which he had returned a year ago. He had been given the same pair of trousers which he returned a year ago and in the meantime the price had risen just one dollar.

REV. R. J. ELLIOTT SEEKS DIVORSE

WAS MARRIED IN HAVELOCK TWENTY YEARS AGO.

Rev. Robt. James Elliott, who was married in Havelock June 3, 1896, and who is now pastor of the First Congregational Church of Revere, Mass., is suing his wife for divorce. He alleges cruel treatment. His wife, who will contest the suit, had filed a cross libel charging cruel treatment and unfaithfulness, but at her counsel's request this was dismissed.

Roscoe Elliott, an elder son, testified against his father, and Mrs. Elliott took the stand to refute her husband's allegations. The Elliotts have two children. Roscoe, who is 18, is a Dartmouth College student and has enlisted in the Naval Reserve. Raymond, 16, is a high school pupil. Mr. Elliott testified that the trouble in his home started about 12 years ago, when Mrs. Elliott accused him of paying attention to other ladies.

When the night it is dark
And to winds I do hark,
Then I think of the sad willer tree,
Will it bend over Bill
As a grave he doth fill
And weep for the sad tragedee?

When departed I am,
Like a jar of old jam,
Will Sarah bend over my bier?
And when it's too late
(Having taken a skate)
Will she shed me a loving hot tear?

Will she sigh with regret
(I think so, you bet)
That she didn't say yes when I popped;
That she gave me the shake,
And my heart it did break,
As unto cold death I was flopped?

Aids Farmer Bell.

When I had finished and read the poem to Bill he walked to the apple tree and jerked down the rope and then turned to me and shook hands without a word. I understood. Those verses were going to Sarah Jane within two hours. They did go, and at sundown of that fateful day Sarah and Bill were walking hand in hand. I periled my life to bring it about, but I asked no reward.

There was one more trial in store. At Farmer Bell's I found tears falling, and, though the day had grown hotter, still I would not leave the house until I could leave the following behind me:

'Twas away off in Kentucky where our Sammy he did dwell
In the house of his good uncle, whose name is John A. Bell.
The day it was in summer, and Sam was making hay,
And the lambkins were a-frisking, and the calves they were at play.

No hurricane was blowing, no thunder rent the air,
No earthquake was a-quaking the people for to scare.
A holy calm spread over things, the children were in school,
And in the pasture, flicking flies, there stood the gentle mewl.

A sudden shriek, an awful yell—'twas terrible to see
Our Sammy lying on the ground 'neath a persimmon tree.
His moans they touched the human heart, and human tears they fell
As Sammy breathed his last and died upon the spot he fell.

And when they did investigate to know whereof he died
They found a maddened bumblebee all crushed into his side.
The insect it had stung him upon his beating heart,
And Sammy couldn't do no less than from this life depart.

He's gone into a climate where the awful bumblebee
Is never seen upon the ground nor yet on any tree,
Where the customs of Kentucky they never can prevail
In the choking of a possum by pulling at his tail.

Oh, youths who go a-haying in the gladsome summer day;
Oh, maidens sitting in the shade to watch the lambkins play,
Take a feller's solemn warning—when you see the bumblebee
A-hiking for to greet you, then climb the tallest tree!

THE WITCH OF ENDOR.

Old Subject Presented in New Light by Ontario Poet.

Rev. Robert Norwood, of London, Ontario, the brilliant Canadian preacher-poet, in his romantic drama, "The Witch of Endor," gives a new and beautiful interpretation of the old Hebrew story, which Andrew Lang, who revelled in such things, called one of the most fascinating tales for children in the literature of the world. This charming English bookman tells how on wet Sunday afternoons he as a child used to love to turn to the picture in the old family Bible which showed the white-bearded shadowy figure of Samuel rising up out of the ground, and the old witch shrinking back in astonishment and awe, and Saul falling forward to the earth.

Mr. Norwood's Witch of Endor is a beautiful creation, in no way suggested by the conventional picture of Andrew Lang's childhood, and in no way related to the wild and weird sisters, with choppy fingers and skinny lips, of "Macbeth," or to the withered beldams, old and droll, of "Tam o' Shanter." In grace of form, and beauty of spirit, and charm of personality, she recalls Shelley's witch of a witch, who lived in a cave on Atlas Mountains, whose soft smile shone afar, whose low voice was heard like love, and drew all things to her.

According to this latest interpretation of the familiar Bible story, Saul fell in love with the Witch of Endor when he met her in early life, and who can wonder at it? If the Salem witches had possessed the irresistible charms of the beautiful heroine of Mr. Norwood's exquisite drama, it would have been difficult even for the unemotional and unsusceptible Puritans of New England to find an executioner. This interesting drama, with its touches of romance, and tragic heart-breaks, and supreme sacrifices of love, leaves a haunting memory in the soul.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

Quaint Theatre Notice.

The quaintest notice ever issued by the management of a theatre for the benefit of the audience is the one which is to be seen in the German town of Brunswick. It reads: "For the benefit of the public, it is ordered that the front row of the pit shall lie down, the second shall kneel, the third shall sit, and the fourth shall stand. In this way everyone will be able to see." Let it hastily be added that the notice was posted up in the Brunswick Theatre in 1734, and that it is now one of the curiosities of the museum.

Witch Hazel Plant.

The plant witch hazel acquired its name in times when magic, black art, sorcery, necromancy and witchcraft were popular. A forked branch of witch hazel carried horizontally in the hands was believed to turn downward as it passed over a hidden vein of water, thereby saving time and labor necessary in prospecting.

A FESTIVE IDEA.

This Fetching Way of Arranging Your Dining Table.

It is a new idea now among observing housewives to have, instead of the round or square luncheon cloth, one long runner for the square or oblong table, with enough large and small doilies matching it to fill in along the sides. Of course both ends of the table are covered by the runner, an excellent idea when part of the meal is served from the table instead of from the "side."

While this arrangement is especially appropriate for the oblong table, it can be used for the square, oval or round table with some modification. In the square table the symmetry is often better preserved by two runners crossing in the middle. In the oval or round table the ugly line where the runner falls over the rounded edge is done away with by cutting the runner, rounding the edge to fit the table and setting on the end to fit with a fine seam or a bit of beading. This arrangement means that the runner could be used only for the one size of table, but it is worth the trouble.

Square hemstitched doilies with a simple corner motif are used with the plain hemstitched runner. It is a good plan to make plate doilies and napkins of the same size and decoration, so that if one gives out the other may come to the rescue. A large doily for the plate will do away with an extra tumbler or teacup doily.

ABOUT CAKE BAKING.

How to Prepare and Bake All Kinds of Good Sweetmeats.

Where do you set your loaf cakes and what place in your own oven do you give to muffins and small cakes? From your answer your success would be gauged by a scientific baker.

Thin layer cakes, cookies, biscuits, macaroons and other small cakes should always be baked in shallow pans set at the top of the oven. This gives the heat a chance to circulate around the cookies rather than concentrate under them.

Loaf cakes bake more evenly in sheet tin or aluminum pans than in iron pans. The shelf in the center of the oven is right for loaf cakes, and no cake should ever be set on the bottom of the oven.

It is a good idea to start sponge cake and loaf cake in a very slow oven and then increase the heat as the cake starts to rise. About ten minutes before the cake should be done the gas can be turned off entirely as there is sufficient heat left in the oven to finish the baking. Whenever it seems desirable to reduce the heat it is better to turn down both burners halfway rather than to turn one out completely.

Keeping Attractive.

An important step in keeping attractive is to see that your neckwear and accessories are fresh. Always put your hat and veil on with care. Choose the most becoming colors for your gowns and suits. The well groomed woman has the advantage over her sister who is untidy. The knowledge gives her self confidence, and with self confidence rightly gained one can accomplish anything.

◆

Made Exhaustive Report Of the Nickel Industry And Put an End to Gossip

◆

THE report of the Royal Nickel Commission appointed by the Ontario Government in September, 1915, has been completed. On all points the report fulfils the expectations of Hon. G. H. Ferguson, Minister of Lands, Forests, and Mines, that it would be the last word on the metallurgy of nickel refining in Ontario. The report points out that two questions have been uppermost in numerous discussions that have taken place concerning the nickel industry during the last twenty-five years. The first, can nickel be economically refined in Ontario; and, second, are nickel deposits of Ontario of such a character that this Province can compete successfully as a nickel producer with any other country?

To both these questions the Commission answers yes. "The nickel ore deposits of Ontario are much more extensive and offer better facilities for the production of nickel at a low cost than do those of any other country," reads the report. Any of the processes now in use for refining nickel could be successfully worked in Ontario, and conditions and facilities are as good here as in any other part of Canada. The most satisfactory method of refining in Ontario will be electrolytic. The refining of nickel in Ontario will not only benefit the industry locally but promote the chemical and metallurgical industries and lead to their growth. The methods employed by the two large operating companies in Ontario are modern and efficient. Both have passed the experimental stage without receiving any Government assistance and have earned the success which they have achieved.

On the important question of mining taxation the report is most explicit. After an investigation into the methods of taxation in practice in other countries where mining operations are carried on extensively the commission finds that "the present system of mining taxation in Ontario is just and equitable and in the public interest, and is the best system for this Province. Any question of change is rather one of rate than of principle." The tax in Ontario is based upon the net profits of the mine, and this the Commission recommended should not be higher than 5 per cent. Although the report makes certain recommendations the bill to carry these recommendations into effect at the time of writing has not been introduced to the House. It is understood, however, that the Government will probably accept the recommendations of the Commission which, as has been pointed out, approves of the present basis of taxation on net profits, but thinks that the rate should be higher and on a progressive scale, the rate of tax increasing as the profits grow. If the recommendations of the Commission are entirely adopted by the Government it will mean that Ontario will secure a revenue from this source on the basis of last year's operations of about $2,000,000.

This is what was anticipated by the Minister when the Commission was appointed, but rather than deal with the question in a piecemeal fashion time has been taken to consider the question from every angle and reach a decision that will be permanent and satisfying.

The report is a lengthy document of some five hundred pages with an appendix. It is perhaps the most exhaustive study of the nickel industry that has yet been made, and will prove an important contribution to the literature on the subject. As a result of the enterprise of Mr. Ferguson two refining plants in Ontario have already been assured, one by the International Nickel Company at Pot Colborne, another by the British America Nickel Company at Sudbury. To facilitate the operation of these plants an extensive development of electrical energy will be required, and as a result of having these industries in our midst, apart from patriotic advantages, important industries of a minor character will spring up from time to time requiring a large investment of capital and the employment of many hundreds of hands.

The public is not interested in the technical aspect of the report, but it is only fair to the Commission to say that they have brought to the discharge of their duties a devotion to the general welfare of the Province that is as worthy in its achievement as the importance of the whole subject warranted.

WOMAN GIVEN TWO DAYS

To Make Up Her Mind for Surgical Operation. She Refused; Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"One year ago I was very sick and I suffered with pains in my side and back until I nearly went crazy. I went to different doctors and they all said I had female trouble and would not get any relief until I would be operated on. I had suffered for four years before this time, but I kept getting worse the more medicine I took. Every month since I was a young girl I had suffered with cramps in my sides at periods and was never regular. I saw your advertisement in the newspaper and the picture of a woman who had been saved from an operation and this picture was impressed on my mind. The doctor had given me only two more days to make up my mind so I sent my husband to the drug store at once for a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and believe me, I only took four doses before I felt a change and when I had finished the third bottle I was cured and never felt better. I grant you the privilege to publish my letter and am only too glad to let other women know of my cure."—Mrs. THOS. McGONIGAL, 3432 Hartville Street, Phila., Pa

ABOUT THE ROMANOFFS.

Russian Dynasty Paid Penalty of Germanization.

A Prusso-Lithuanian, one Ivan Divinovitch, "got" Christianity in the thirteenth century, also a post in the service of the Grand Dukes of Moscow. His son, Andrew Kobyla, counts as the first Romanoff. For three hundred years the family prospered. A daughter of Roman, fifth in descent from Andrew, married that wild superman, Ivan the Terrible, about the middle of the sixteenth century. Roman's successors, aristocrats, boyars, called themselves Romanoffs.

The old Czars of Rurik's line ended in 1598. A pleasant country was Muscovy in the next few years. Usurper after usurper, Swedes and Poles dividing the land, robbery, misery. In 1612 the Poles were driven out; the magnates couldn't agree on a candidate for Czar. The common folk and the gentry were "solid" for young Michael Theodorovich Romanoff. The family, while far from being the most distinguished of patrician Muscovite houses, had a reputation for honesty and clean conduct. It was popular. By a national council of deputies, representing every class of population, the sixteen-year-old boy was chosen Czar, and in the Red Square of Moscow the people ratified the choice. The first Imperial Romanoff came to the throne, as Nicholas II. was driven from it, by the choice and voice of the Russian people.

Revolutions, assassinations, intrigues, debaucheries, strange and secret crimes, mighty favorites, mad Czars, bad Czars, dull Czars, good Czars, liberal Czars, reactionary Czars, liberal and reactionary Czars, a strange, adventurous Asiatic history or melodrama is much of the court life and history of Russia. Peter the Great, the veneered barbarian, the primitive on the throne, did not shake Asia entirely off in his annexation of his country to Europe. Something of Semiramis clings to the great Empresses, the Catherines and Elizabeth. Yet St. Petersburg of the eighteenth century was not only French and civilized, it was clean and honest, compared with that monstrous regime of lasciviousness, superstition, and graft, that league of treachery and corruption, that camarilla half of Paphos and half of Plutus in which Gregory the Rake, so lately slain, figured.

Alexander II. will always be honorably remembered. Under all Czars and in spite of a thousand blunders and dishonesties and repulses, Russia has expanded incredibly. Now she has found herself. Alexander III. might almost be forgiven for being a reactionary. Nicholas II. seems to have been little better than a fool. It is a house which a succession of German marriages has made German rather than Russian in blood. It has now paid the penalty of that Germanization.

Does Oil Calm the Sea?

Waves in mid-ocean are caused entirely by the action of the wind. The adhesion between the rapidly moving particles of air which compose the wind and the surface particles of the water causes the water's surface to be dragged along with the air. Small ripples are immediately formed, states Popular Science Monthly. These ripples soon overtake others near them. They unite, and due to the friction between the water particles, each succeeding ripple piles up on the top of previous ones.

Just as soon as oil is spread upon the water, however, the size of the waves is reduced like magic. The reason for this is interesting. Oil, unlike water, has very little internal friction between its particles. The ripples of oil formed by the wind, therefore, cannot pile upon each other to any considerable height. Hence water waves cannot grow in an area of oil placed about a steamer. They begin to fall down instead. By the time these waves reach the boat they will have lost their formative ripples and the result is a perfectly calm surface over the portion of the [illegible] which the boat is making [illegible]

STYLES FOR CHILDREN.

What Small People Will Wear This Springtime.

The inclination just now is toward the simplest lines, and bloomers are included, as a matter of course, in frocks not only for the littlest girl, but for her elder sister, who may be almost in her teens.

Chambray, Scotch ginghams, linens, batistes and lawns are the favorite fabrics. Sometimes there is a yoke, to which the material is gathered and held in position by rows of [illegible] in colored threads. It has taken some time for this form of decoration to become popular in this country. For many years it has been a favorite means or ornamentation in England and, to a less extent, in France.

The type of smock that [illegible] either shoulder and is slipped over the head is shown for both little boys and girls. In the garment for the former the smock is cut much shorter than when it is for the girl, and the bloomers are not as full as those worn by the latter.

While white remains the only thing considered in connection with the clothes of infants, color has crept into the little dresses, coats and hats of children who have entered their second or third year. Even the standard pale blue and pale pink now have rivals in such shades as maize, old blue and rose. Now and then one meets a light green color or a pale lavender, but on the whole these have not a very large representation in juvenile clothes.

The dress intended for beach wear continues to be made of serge in white, in navy and quite recently in shades of red. The trimming is simple and employs soutache braiding, machine stitching and embroidery motifs. Sometimes there is no trimming other than the belt and the collars and cuffs of some washable stuff.

The matter of long waist or short waist is one that the mother may decide for her child, according to the former's preference. The very little girls wear yoke dresses, but those who have attained as many as five years or more wear long waisted frocks with a belt. On the whole, perhaps these are preferred, excepting for the party frock, which has a short waist, very duffy skirt and a sash finish.

Of course there must be a party frock in every Lilputian wardrobe. They are made of the daintiest fabrics, exquisitely sheer and trimmed with fine laces and embroideries. The effort is to keep away from too much ornamentation. Ribbons are permissible in dainty colors, and usually they are in very narrow widths and manipulated in rosette or chou effect.

NEW ACCESSORIES.

Freshen Up Your Old Blouse With This Jabot.

Dainty white organdie edged with deep val gives this sailor collar and jabot front. Please notice the straw mushroom with its striped shantung brim and ribbon pointed crown dotted with little cameos.

LACE AND FRILLS.

The Paisley Vogue.

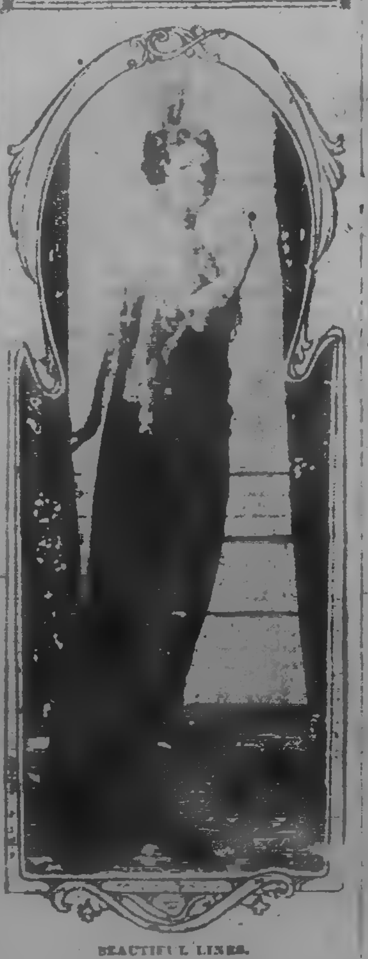
Negligees have taken up the Paisley vogue, and one can now find Paisley printed chiffon borders or silk medallions in the popular Indian designs. Challis in printed Paisley patterns is being largely used for negligees and seat robes. Soutache braid in frocks and suits is being applied in Paisley patterns, if not in the accepted Paisley colorings. Some suits have stencil designs outlined with soutache braid, recalling the familiar patterns of the orient.

For Mrs. Newlywed.

Is there a friend who is just starting housekeeping? An addition to the kitchen outfit which would amuse and still find a helpful place is called "a kitchen doll." The foundation is a wooden mixing spoon on the bowl of which eyes, nose and mouth are marked. A dish mop just back of the spoon makes "the mop of hair," a floor cloth the skirt, a wash cloth the apron and a fish cloth the shawl. The price of the "doll" is 65 cents.

FORMAL GOWN.

Gorgeous Creation For the Season's Evening Wear.



BEAUTIFUL LINES.

Fashioned of black chiffon velvet, cut to fall in naturally graceful folds, and a long, square train, this handsome frock also takes a shoulder drape of silver lace, which is held by a huge rhinestone garniture. The butterfly effect of the lace is especially effective.

SAVE but HOW?

You are daily admonished by Bankers, Cabinet Ministers, Judges, and by all the Press of the Country, to save and be thrifty. In fact, the stamps on our letters are cancelled by the admonition to "Save, Save, Save, etc."

Outside of the Bankers' Association, who have recommended the Banks, very few other suggestions have been made.

Why has no person suggested or recommended the greatest thrift producer and the greatest anti-poverty Institution known to the Public?

For instance, let us suppose two thousand men at say age 25 propose to test this principle for say twenty years, and one-half of them invest a small sum annually in a bank and the other thousand deposit an equal amount annually with this anti-poverty institution. Now, if I can show you that those who deposited with the anti-poverty institution not only received more than those who deposited in the bank, but that the anti-poverty institution paid to the beneficiaries of the unfortunate depositors who were unable to continue their payments, the large additional sum of $159,000.00 which the banks kept for their stockholders, WOULD THAT INTEREST YOU?

The banks are all right, but if I can show you that this anti-poverty institution not only gave better security and actually gave better returns, but in addition they gave a Bond that if anything unforeseen, such as Death, happen you, they would protect you and your estate to any extent desired, WOULD IT INTEREST YOU?

The above facts can be verified to you by calling at, 'phoning or writing the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada, 402 Water Street, and such action on your part places you under no obligation whatever.

THE TERRORS OF DISH-WASHING

No matter what weariness of repetition his day's work may bring a man, it can not stir him to the depths of revolt that dish-washing does a woman.

Perhaps this is because girls are set at the unsavory task so early in life. You remember what a tiny thing you were when, with mother's apron tied around your neck, breathing hard and holding carefully lest small hands prove inadequate in the task, you wiped the cups for the first time.

You remember how, when you reached your teens, you made futile attempts to escape the inevitable. Sudden attacks of illness or exhaustion followed meals. The dish-washing always patiently awaited your recovery. Unexpected and imperative errands developed. The dish-washing awaited your return. After a few years of this you bowed to the inevitable, vowing, however, that you would never marry a man who would expect you to wash dishes.

And now your own little daughter has begun to wipe the coffee-cups. Sometimes, please, after one of those unexpected illnesses or errands, for the sake of that other little girl who was you, won't you let her come back to a cleared table and a shining kitchen kitchen?

She doesn't deserve it, the lazy little rascal—but butterflies' flights and a little girl's childhood are short lived things at best. Discipline is good for her soul, but how her love for you will thrive on a sense of your understanding! So much of life is dish-washing. So few of us ever have a chance to run away. Let her successfully play hockey once in a while, and all those other shadowy little girls who are the members of us will call you blessed.

THE HOLLOW IN AN EGG.

The hollow place at the end of a boiled egg need not necessarily remind us at breakfast that an egg is capable of being hatched. But the hollow has a connection with possible hatching, nevertheless. At the egg's formation air was put inside it for the use of the possible chick. When the egg is boiled this air fights for its space and pushes the egg back inside the shell, forming the hollow space.

CAN VEGETABLES AT HOME

"Help to win the war by increasing production." That is the urgent call which has gone forth throughout Canada. Increase production. "But," says someone, "I have only a small backyard. I cannot grow enough potatoes or other winter vegetables to make it worth while planting out the ground. Beans and peas are not so difficult to grow and take up less room. But my beans and peas would be ready for eating just about the time they are cheapest to buy."

Why not save them until the winter, when they are expensive? It is easy to do. Can them. Be like the farmer who informed his city cousin, who was looking over a fine field of tomatoes, that, "we eat what we can and what we can't we can."

Peas and beans will keep perfectly in a solution of salt brine. Heat them in the brine (not too salty), and seal them just as fruit is sealed. Then when the winter months and winter prices arrive there will be a supply of palatable, healthful vegetables on hand. When they are needed unseal them the night before, soak overnight in cold water, and if you have not as tasty and fresh a dish of beans or peas ready for supper, why, something has gone wrong with your canning operations.

Canning Corn in Same Way

Corn may also be canned in the same way. The canning of corn has become an industry of almost gigantic proportions in Canada and the United States. It is estimated that some 30,000,000 cases containing 24 tins of corn, are turned out of the canning factories annually.

But "commercially canned" corn is not always as pure as might be expected. The arts and wiles of the food adulterator are many. That creamy, smooth liquid, which is so attractive, may not indicate a superior grade of corn. It may be produced by a judicious addition of common starch. Poor corn may be made almost as tasty as the very best by the addition of starch.

Where is the harm apart from the deception? The starch disturbs the nice balance produced by nature in the corn. Too much starch is not advisable. It disturbs the digestion. Nature balances the starch in potatoes, corn, and other vegetables, in such a way as to make them easily digested. The addition of starch upsets this balance, and the digestion suffers as a result.

MEALS THAT ARE IMMORAL

"Bring me some ham and eggs, a glass of milk, a piece of custard pie with cheese." This order goes forth not only once, but hundreds of times daily, in our restaurants by the business man. In the tea rooms another order goes forth frequently "I'll have some waffles and honey, a cup of chocolate, and a French pastry."

These meals are absolutely immoral, and a further glance at them will show why. Here we have the business man ordering eggs, meat, milk, custard, and cheese the five most important foods of the same class—protein. In other words he is taking the same kind of food in five different forms, and his meal, therefore, is really only one kind of food taken adlibitum. His wife in the uptown tearoom eats waffles, syrup, chocolate and pastry. Again four different forms of the same kind of food, so that her meal is all starch, sugar and fat.

Now, no meals so one-sided can be healthful. A hasty glance would perhaps lead us to believe that the man's lunch was more wholesome than the woman's, but both are dietetically bad. We have said so often that the ideal meal is composed of four different elements—the proteid or muscle forming; the sugar-starch or fat forming; the fat or heat forming, and the mineral elements, which add flavor, refreshment and tonic qualities. The "balanced" meal must have some of each of the four qualities represented in the foods which compose it. In this way all the needs of the body are supplied by every meal, and no one need is over-supplied.

If we had taken the eggs from the first lunch and added them to the waffles of the second and put in a vegetable or a fruit salad, we would have had a nearly perfect meal. From the eggs there are protein, the waffles give starch and fat, and the vegetables or fruit would give the necessary watery and flavorful qualities to make the meal satisfying, energy-producing and refreshing.

It is exceedingly simple to plan home meals, or to choose meals from a bill of fare after the balanced plan. Select one food from each of the four groups of such combinations that will give the four different food qualities. Here are some wrong combinations:

Egg, meat, cheese, milk (too much protein); rice, spaghetti, bread (too much starch); fried potatoes, doughnuts, croquettes (too much starch and fat); waffles, chocolate cake, pastry (too much sugar and fat); vegetable salad baked apple vegetable soup (too much water and mineral).

Here are the same foods in correct combination: Vegetable soup, eggs, pastry; meat, vegetable, doughnuts; cheese, rice, cake, milk, spaghetti, baked apple.

The housewife who is planning meals, for a family should go back of the actual cooking to the first principles of diet. What kind of food should a man doing muscular work eat? What should a man doing mental work eat? What should a growing child have? What the person past 50? We eat to live, but not all of us need the same kind of foods at different ages and none of us will live healthily on an immoral diet.

DORCHESTER SAUCE.

A request is made for a recipe for Dorchester sauce which we are unable to supply. Dorchester sauce which I am unfortunately not able to supply. Will someone kindly help?—Housewife.

ALMOND CHIPS.

Beat three eggs, one at a time, very stiff; add one cup of sugar; beat again; add one cup of flour, and flavor with one teaspoon of almond extract. Drop by teaspoon in a dripping pan, leaving a little space between them. Bake in a moderate oven, then roll over handle of knife or a cleaned broom handle, in fact anything of that shape, and they remain that shape very much like chips. Sprinkle with chopped almonds while warm.

MILK AND THUNDER STORMS

It is wrong to say or think that thunder turns milk sour. Thunder, being merely a noise, could not have that effect. As we all know, any kind of warm and damp temperature will cause milk to sour; therefore, as just before and during a thunderstorm the air is generally warm and moist, it is only natural that milk should be sour after the storm is over.

DESSERT.

Take square sponge cakes, cut in halves, place between them whipped cream and chopped dates and cover the top with the cream and dates, and sprinkle with powdered sugar.

Worth Remembering

Good broths can be made from leftover bits of meat.

Use radishes once in a while as a relish as the spring comes on, and the family will appreciate it.

The water that is generally poured off the dried beans after they are boiled will make a good addition to the stock pot.

Scrambled eggs and onions is made by first frying the onions, then turning the eggs into the pan, and stirring as usual.

Sour milk should never be wasted. It can be used in biscuits and gingerbread or for "Dutch cheese" or for griddle cakes.

Have on your pantry shelf several cans of condensed milk, and if the milkman is snowed under you are not without milk.

Large oranges are more economical than small ones, because half of a large orange is enough to serve one person at breakfast.

A SHORT CHAT ABOUT CHICKENS

A chicken dinner used to be an event with city folks; it marked the coming of company or a holiday. Now city house housekeepers find that fowl is not more expensive than beef for its flavor may be extended through pot-pie, dumplings, and gravy. A chicken properly prepared can be made to "go a long ways" and lucky country women smile to themselves to see how the demand for biddy grows as women waken to the possibilities of economy to be found in chicken soup and such fixin's.

What housekeepers need most and can have with most advantage is poultry. They furnish food in the shape of eggs and meat and leisure and health in the bargain. A very small space will accommodate a number of staid laying hens, and growing chicks put on flesh more rapidly if not allowed too great range. There, that is the answer to your statement that your yard is not big enough. Any yard is plenty big for poultry.

Potato parings, cabbage trimmings, celery tops and all vegetable waste cooked with a little water and grease, that you would perhaps throw away otherwise, all make the best poultry food. Mix the table scraps with what millers call chop-feed and your hens will lay daily.

A year-old pullet should lay two hundred and eighty eggs a season, and if you go to the farmer's market you can buy them under a dollar a piece. Baby chicks soon grow into "frys" and are advertised at 10 cents each all the month.

It is the care and the kind of food given that makes chick into chickens rapidly, and not the breed, though a Plymouth rock chick develops weight more quickly than a smaller breed.

Try and see if fowls do not pay you. Invest in twelve hens and as many baby chicks as you can afford. What about a rooster? Forget him. Ugly crowing things, eating their heads off and waking up the neighbourhood on Sunday morning. They, like some people, think they are important, but they are not necessities.

BREAKFAST
Eggs with Cheese.

Beat three yolks, add two whole eggs, half cup of grated cheese, and a quarter of a cup of milk. Pour over two slices of bread, turn into a baking dish and bake in a quick oven.

LUNCHEON
Cranberry Fritters.

Mix a cup and a half of milk, one egg, one cup of flour, a tablespoon of sugar, a teaspoon of baking powder and a cup of cranberry sauce. Drop by spoonfuls on a hot, well-greased griddle. Brown on both sides.

DINNER
Crecy Soup.

Boil a cup of water, two cups of milk, a cup of cooked carrots, a tablespoon of tomato catsup, half a teaspoon of celery salt and a little salt. Boil for five minutes and then a tablespoon of dissolved flour.

Potato Fritters.

Boil enough potatoes to make two cups. Mash, and add a piece of butter, a little milk, and drop by spoonfuls in boiling fat.

Ray Salad.

Cream one cream cheese and a tablespoon of butter, add a tablespoon of chopped nuts and a little salt. Form into flat cakes and serve on lettuce with a teaspoon of currant jelly on each cake, and French dressing.

Pineapple Gelatine.

Boil one cup of water and one cup of chopped pineapple for three minutes. Dissolve half a package of powdered gelatine in half a cup of cold water and stir in the boiling pineapple. Chill and serve with whipped cream.

MOLASSES SAUCE.

Put one-half pint of molasses to boil in a skillet with a piece of butter the size of an egg; when it has boiled a few minutes pour in a teacupful of cream and grate in half a nutmeg. This is the most economical way of making sauce.

TO STRENGTHEN VINEGAR.

Freeze the vinegar and remove the ice which forms on the surface. It is the water of the vinegar alone that freezes, leaving the acid in solution in the remaining water.

Beans that are to be baked should first be parboiled.

HUNGARIAN CITIES ARE IN REVOLT

CITY CAN EXPECT NO HELP FROM HYDRO COMMISSION TO BUILD NEW BRIDGE

No Funds Available For That Purpose--Auto for the Street Commissioner.

The Board of Works, after many moons, finally held a meeting last night, and when Ald. Weir, the chairman, uncovered the file, it looked as though it would take a week to get away with the different communications. However the members realized the task that was before them and got down to business quickly.

The Dominion Dustless Sweeper Co. were granted permission to erect a steel garage to house the sweeper in at a lot on Aylmer Street, just south of Hunter Street. If they decide to build it on the Fitzgerald property near their present workshop, a resolution of the Council will be necessary. It is understood that the work is to be done under the supervision of the city engineer.

McGregor and McIntyre, of Toronto, offered their services in connection with the steel work of the overhead bridge to Ashburnham. The letter was placed on the received route.

Mr. T. Butcher was given permission to remove four trees at the corner of Smith and Stewart streets at his own expense and risk, provided that the city engineer supervises the removal.

W. L. Jeffries, 172 Wescott Street, complained of the bad condition of the road in front of his residence, making it difficult to get an automobile approach to his garage. The city engineer and the chairman were given power to act.

The building of sewers on Prince, Princess, between George and Park streets, and on George from Prince to Princess streets was approved of and the proposal will be duly advertised.

City Engineer Parsons notified the board of the killing of D. McMillen's horse as a result of a leaky ground wire on Weller Street. The letter was ordered sent on to the Utilities Commission.

The board agreed to pay the maintenance of City Engineer Parson's auto, as he will use it for the city's business as in other years.

Harry Gets Auto Truck

Ald. Duncan brought up the subject of getting an auto truck for the use of Street Commissioner Evans. He was confident that it would be a money saving proposition for the city, and besides be more efficient than hiring a carter all the time, when tools had to be moved.

Mayor Duffus referred to the wonderful record made by the auto truck of the water department. The Street Commissioner should have one.

> WHAT THE BOARD OF WORKS DECIDED TO DO
>
> To purchase an auto truck for the use of Street Commissioner Evans at a cost not to exceed $550.
>
> To refer to the Street Railway Committee a communication from the Hydro-Commission to the effect that no financial assistance can be granted the city in the construction of a new bridge at Hunter street.

Chairman Weir thought the idea was a good one, but queried whether the commissioner would be able to detect defects in the street in an auto as wll as he does now.

Commissioner Evans was quite confident that it would save the city a lot of money in workmen's time, as he could transfer them from one job to another without waiting for a carter to arrive.

City Engineer Parsons states that incidental carting had cost the city $250.00 last year.

Mayor Duffus was asked the probable cost of such a truck, and replied that $520.00 was the cost.

It was finally moved by Ald. Smith and Taylor that the city engineer and the chairman purchase an auto truck at a cost not exceeding $550, and the motion carried.

Sewer Foreman.

M. Neary applied for the position of foreman of the sewer constructing gang.

Ald. Saunders and McIntyre moved that the matter of engaging a foreman be left with the chairman and the engineer.

Ald. Smith and Duncan did not think that this should be the only application to be considered, and moved that an advertisement be inserted in the papers asking for applications.

Upon a vote being taken, the original motion carried.

Cement Tenders.

The Peterborough Hardware Company were awarded the tender for the supply of cement required by the city this year at $2 per barrel, which includes storage. The city is to pay for sacks not returned.

Taylor & Sons quoted $2 and sacks extra, with no provision for storage.

The Robt. Hicks Co. Limited quoted $2.38 with 10c off for each sack returned, which did not include storage.

Could Not Contribute.

The Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario, whom the city requested to pay a portion of the cost of the proposed overhead bridge to Ashburnham, replied that they could not accede to the request as they had no fund for that purpose. The railway committee were sent the communication for further action.

The Canadian Pacific Railway will be asked to hurry the completion of the foot bridge.

The chairman and the city engineer were given power to dispose of the old street grader to the best advantage, as it has outlived its usefulness.

Reported Against It.

City Engineer Parsons reported unfavorably to the city taking over Olive street as it was only about 25 feet wide and was too narrow in which to turn a rig round and had no outlet to the north.

Ald. Duncan did not agree with this view. The residents on this street were anxious to put in sewers and other permanent improvements and they should be encouraged even if the street was not just wide enough.

Ald. Saunders also thought that the city should assume the street, as it was built before the present regulations were in force.

City Engineer Parsons will make another report on the matter, taking into consideration the advisability of opening the street through to Rink street. The city solicitor will also give the legal aspect of the difficulty.

Oiling Streets.

The request of R. G. Kingan that certain trees at the corner of Aylmer and Dalhousie streets be removed was left with the city engineer to report on.

James Hamilton assed that the street department give a little attention to the repairing and oiling of Sheridan and Brock streets. The work was ordered attended to.

The Provincial Board of Health asked the early attention of the city to the matter of the sewage disposal plant.

The street commissioner was ordered to see that the roads on the route over which the Governor-General and party are to be taken are in good condition and well oiled.

CAPT. HAROLD F. HILL IS NOW OFFICIALLY REPORTED AS KILLED AT VIMY RIDGE

PTE. GEORGE HERBERT MOORE
son of Lieut. Wallace Moore, of 481 Albert Street. He was wounded in the Battle of Vimy Ridge.

His Father, Capt. W. H. Hill Notified of His Death--Praise From Commanding Officer--Local Casualty List Increases Daily.

Capt. W. H. Hill received official notification this morning that his son, Capt. Harold F. Hill, reported as missing a few days after the battle of Vimy Ridge, was killed in action. There was always the hope that the young man was in hospital or that he had been taken prisoner by the Germans, but this hope has been shattered by the telegram from headquarters. Harold Hill, one of the most promising young men in the city, has given his life for the empire. The citizens generally will join in extending sympathy to the bereaved family, whose only solace now is the comforting thought that the young man died the most illustrious of all deaths.

From His Commanding Officer.

When the late Capt. Hill was promoted to the rank which he held at the time of his death, his father received the following letter from the young man's commanding officer.:

My dear Mr. Hill:

I was very pleased to receive your letter dated Dec. 15th, regarding your son, who is with me.

I can quite understand the worry you undergo as regards his welfare, and I sincerely trust that he may be spared to return to you after this struggle has been brought to a satisfactory conclusion (from our point of view).

I think a great deal of Harold and, although he does not know of it, I try to give him every consideration possible. By this I do not mean that I spare him from hard work or from his share of what is going, at the expense of others, but I have him continually in the "back of my head" and never let a possible opportunity pass to assist him.

I have just been able to put him through for the acting rank of captain, and am sending him away on leave tomorrow wearing three stars.

My attraction to him is due firstly that I consider him absolutely straight (a great thing these days). He is a splendid type of athlete, a splendid sport, and lives a clean life.

In the two years he has been with me I have never had occasion to find fault with or criticise him.

I honestly congratulate you on having such a son.

I will advise you immediately should occasion necessitate, but I sincerely trust this may never be necessary.

Sincerely yours,
C. M. EDWARDS,
O. C. 38th Battalion.

LIEUT. SEXTON

Lieut. N. B. Sexton is reported among the wounded in today's casualty list. He went overseas with the 93rd, and was a valued member of the hockey team of 1916.

LIEUT. WATT

PRIVATE JOHN JENKINSON
Son of Mr. John Jenkinson, 635 Union Street, who was reported wounded on April 7th. He was a member of the 93rd Batt.

Capt. R. M. Watt received word today that his brother, Lieut. J. Watt, of the 18th Battalion, but formerly of the 93rd, had been wounded and was in the hospital at Bristol with a gunshot wound in the leg.

CORPORAL O'KEEFE

Mr. James O'Keefe, 79 Lansdowne Street, received word that his son, Corporal James Hubert O'Keefe had been wounded, and was in the No. 3 General Hospital at Boulong with a severe bayonet wound.

PRIVATE HENDRY.

Mr. Thomas Hendry, of the Peterboro Canoe Co., was notified this morning that his brother, Pte. Robert Hendry, of the 92nd Highlanders, had been wounded in the arm and face, and was in the General Hospital at Etaples. The casualty occurred on the 11th inst., Private Hendry was formerly shipper for J. J. Turner and Sons.

PRIVATE BULLIED

Mr. Silas Bullied, 251 Princess St., received word yesterday that his son, Private Victor Bullied, of the Mounted Rifles, had been wounded, and was admitted to the No. 2 Stationary Hospital at Bolougne on April 11 with severe wound in the arm. This is the second time that Private Bullied was wounded, the first time being last May, when he was so severely injured that he was not able to go back until last November.

PTE. JORDAN.

Pte. James Jordan of Peterborough is among the local casualties today.

PTE. KNOTT.

Pte. Alex. Knott, of the 93rd Bn., is among those wounded in the list sent out by the Record office today. His people live at Curve Lake.

LIEUT. WORTH.

Lieut. Walter G. Worth is reported as admitted to the hospital at Manchester, England, with a very severe wound in the jaw.

CORP. RINGER.

Corp. Arthur A. Ringer, of the 93rd Bn., is reported severely wounded in the head.

GERMAN GUNS ARE NOW USED AGAINST FORMER OWNERS

Victory of Canadians at Vimy Ridge Relieves Coal Situation in France and Helps Defeat Submarine Campaign of the Huns.

(By Stewart Lyon)

Canadian Army Headquarters, April 21.—Success seems to have crowned the efforts of the Canadians on this front, not only in military operations, but in the secondary object of freeing one of the most important industrial districts in France from the control of the invader. So long as the Germans had Vimy Ridge the only mines producing on a large scale left in French hands were those of Brusy, a town to the west of Lens, but on our side of the ridge. This coal had to be taken to Paris and points south. The result was a serious loss to industry all over rance because of the scarcity and high price of coal.

In a few weeks the victory of Vimy Ridge will result in a marked lessening of the freightage of coal from Wales to France, and to that extent make ineffective the enemy's submarine campaign. The mines were controlled in some cases by German capital, and operated in part by German workmen. Now German guns used by Canadian gunners against their former owners are doing no small part in restoring this rich mining region to French control.

Everybody Wore a Tag To-day

This was "Returned Heroes' Day" in Peterborough, and the War Veterans have every reason to feel elated over the enthusiasm with which their tag day was received by the citizens of both city and country.

Everyone was wearing the little triangle which denoted that the wearer was a contributor to the worthy cause. No matter where you happened, a War Veteran or a lady would be sure to see that you were wearing a badge. Long before noon the supply of cloth tags had been exhausted, and a new edition of paper ones were got to fill the vacancy.

TRUSTEES SEE ACTUAL PICTURE OF FIRE ESCAPE

IN OPERATION YESTERDAY AFTERNOON AT ROYAL THEATRE.

The members of the Board of Education witnessed a moving picture of a patent fire escape at the Royal Theatre yesterday afternoon. The installation of the fire escapes at the King Edward School are contemplated by the board, and the salesman carries this film with him for demonstration purposes. The escape is made like a huge steel cylinder six feet across, and the interior is fitted with slides running like a corkscrew down which the inmates of an institution can descend with perfect safety. The builders claim that school children can be handled at the rate of 200 a minute, and the pictures yesterday seemed to bear this out.

EVERY MAN IN HOME ARMY A MARK TAPLEY

Troops Join in Singing "What's the Use of Worrying" as They Rest in Their Shelters ---Adverse Weather Conditions Only Spur Men on to Greater Exertion.

(Special from Stewart Lyon.)

Canadian Army Headquarters, April 21. — This is an army of Mark Tapley's. Its cheerfulness is invincible. Though up to their eyes in mud during the past ten days, the Canadian and Imperial troops with whom they are associated in operations at Vimy Ridge labored incessantly in making way for their guns across the desert which the guns themselves had created. Adverse weather but spured men to greater exertions. After working till dark they came home to their wet trenches, in captured dugouts or shelters by the side of some pile of ruins, and before turning in made the night vocal with songs and favorite choruses such as "What's the use of worrying?"

As their work progressed the men had the satisfaction of seeing the guns, that had done so much to drive out the enemy, go east once more.

The enemy's artillery out on the plain had been actively shelling our working parties, and, although his heavies have been moved back to avoid capture as well as to operate to greater advantage gaianst our positions, his mobile artillery was a thorn in the flesh of the men on the eastern slope. As our own guns have now come up, the situation of the infantry has improved materiall, and the men have begun to push out our front line to explore the enemy's positions extending in irregular lines from Lens south through Mericourt, Acheville and Arleux.

The present German defence seems to be intended as an aid to delaying an action rather than to form the nucleus for a permanent front for the troops driven from Vimy. Douai is only ten miles to the east of our most advanced post, and the line taken by the enemy for the present covers that city, which is one of the most important railway and road centres in northern France.

The Prussian Guard has been sent to this part of the front to take the place of the Bavarians, whose withdrawal must be galling to Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria, leader of the army group in this area. Since the Prussians came there have been several attempts to raid our posts at night, but all have been sorry failures. On each of the last three occasions the enemy left some of his dead in front of our lines and failed in any of these raids to inflict a single Canadian casualty.

German losses by shell fire have been very heavy since open warfare began. The enemy sorely misses his deep shelters on the Vimy Ridge prepared by the patient toil of so many months. Our men know from experience that they can depend miplicitly upon their guns when it comes to a showdown, and that is why, as the guns go east, they sing in their trenches and shelters while the interminable rain makes everyone look as if clothed in a cake of mud.

WAR VETERANS WILL ATTEND.

The War Veterans will attend the morning service at Knox Church tomorrow morning. The pastor, Rev. J. A. MacKenzie, will preach.

The members of the 57th Band will meet at the Armories at 10:15 in uniform to escort the Veterans to the service. Members of the old 93rd Band who are in the city on leave are invited to take part.

BRITISH BEAT BACK ENEMY AND CAPTURED A VILLAGE

French Take 140 Prisoners and Make Pro-Progress in Grenade Fighting---Relief Ship Reported Sunk by Mine or Submarine.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, April 21. — "We captured the village of Gonnelcu last night after sharp fighting, taking a number of prisoners. An enemy party attempted to enter our trenches in the neighborhood of Fauquissart, but was repulsed. Artillery fire continued on both sides at a number of places during the night."

FRENCH TAKE 100 PRISONERS.

PARIS, April 21. — (Official Statement.) — "North of the Aisne artillery fighting was active in the regions of Nanteuil le Fosse and Hurtsable. We took 100 more prisoners yesterday on this part of the front. To the west of Craonne and north of Rheims the night was marked by violent artillery actions. We made progress in grenade fighting, particularly to the south of Juvincourt and east of Courcy. In the Champagne we inflicted losses on enemy troops which made an attack on Monthaut, west of Maisons de Champagne.

"French detachments penetrated the German lines and brought back forty prisoners.

"The night was relatively calm over the rest of the front."

SOLDIERS FIRE ON RIOTERS.

LONDON, April 21. — An Exchange Telegraph despatch from Holland says ten thousand strikers, mostly munition workers, tried to burn the town hall at Madgeburg on Friday. Soldiers fired on the rioters, killing and wounding many, and the town is now in a state of siege.

BY MINE OR SUBMARINE?

AMSTERDAM, April 21. — The relief ship Kongsie has been sunk by a mine or a submarine. One member of the crew is missing, the remainder having been rescued.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, APRIL 21, 1917

SUPPOSE!

SUPPOSE the Good Samaritan had found by the side of the Jericho road a helpless infant instead of a wounded alien who had reached the age of manhood, what would he have done?

Would he have paused to enquire into the parentage of the infant and governed his action by the question as to the legal status of the parents?

Would he have left the deserted babe to its fate because caring for it at the inn would have entailed extra trouble and expense? Not likely. That illustrious example of human charity that has come down to us through twenty centuries, still bearing the brand of Divine approval, should still be the standard of conduct for modern workers on behalf of the unfortunate.

AT THE CHILDREN'S SHELTER.

AGENT SPENCE of the Children's Aid Society placed a child six months old in the institution, and by order of a member of the Board the infant was turned out. Mr. Spence was well within his rights in taking this action. The law gives him authority to decide when a child is neglected and to place it in the institution, but within a week the case must be brought before a magistrate, with whom rests the final decision as to whether the child is neglected in the meaning of the Act governing such cases. A contention has accordingly arisen. Members of the children's Aid Society object to the placing of infants in the Shelter, claiming that it is impossible to care for them.

It is hard to see how the Society has any choice in this matter. The statute under which they operate is explicit. There is no doubt as to the definition of neglected children and no age is specified. It makes no difference whether the unfortunates are six days or six years old. It makes no difference, either, whether such children have been born in wedlock or are illegitimate. In the statute the latter class are specially referred to with the object of removing all doubt on this point.

Infants have been cared for at the Shelter before this. The present situation is not a novel one by any means except in the number of cases that have arisen. The special committee that was appointed to deal with it has not yet been pleased to announce the result of their deliberations. They were so set on secrecy that they even refused to permit Mr. Spence to attend the conference, and have not consulted with him in any way.

The duty of the Society is as clear as the law makes it. Neglected children of any age, legitimate or otherwise, must be cared for, and it is difficult to account for the present hesitation. No matter to what class such children belong, all possible efforts should be made to compel the parents to do their duty. When such efforts fail them, the Society has no alternative but to come to the rescue of the unfortunates.

A FRIEND AT COURT.

CANADA'S RETURNED SOLDIERS have one valiant champion, one influential and hard-working friend at court in the person of their comrade-in-arms, Capt. J. H. Burnham, who never misses an opportunity to advance their interests and who is always devising some measures on their behalf.

Capt. Burnham has just given notice of a bill, that he proposes to introduce in the House, which provides that pensions and other provisions for soldiers and their families shall automatically fluctuate in conformity with the rise and fall of prices.

The man with an income that is limited as well as fixed is never safe. A sudden rise in the cost of living may reduce him to penury. The workingmen's wages never keep pace with the increase in his household expenses. The farmer who retired ten years ago with sufficient income to live in comfort finds that income inadequate now to support him in his old age.

The disabled soldier living on a small pension may find himself in the same position as the others here referred to, and the same conditions may beset the helpless widow and orphans of the men who gave their lives for their country. But hey will not be allowed to suffer if the measure which Capt. Burnham proposes for their protection is given effect. Regarded from the usual business standpoint his bill may not measure up to practical standards, but it has certainly been devised in a spirit of humanitarianism and justice.

SPEND YOUR MONEY AT HOME.

THE LATE Sir John Macdonald was a veritable Abe Lincoln in the use of illustrative anecdote. Whenever he wished to drive a point home he told a story. Away back in the seventies, when the agitation for a new fiscal policy for Canada was under discussion in every part of the country and formed the leading topil of conversation among all classes of citizens, Sir John Macdonald was prolific in the matter of telling stories.

One of these was to the effect that in a little village the sum total of the wealth was a lone five-dollar bill. The currency was in constant circulation and answered the purpose admirably. The wage earner got it Saturday night and turned it over to the grocer, who handed it to his landlord, and the latter kept it moving in the regular channel of commerce. But one dark day the bill found its way into the hands of a resident in whom the proper spirit of civic pride was lacking. He heard of some article that could be purchased at an outside point for $4.75, and sent the money for it, bankrupting his own town, which was forced to attempt to do business with the twenty-five cents saved from the wreckage. To keep money at home was the moral of the story.

The same anecdote can be cited today in favor of patronizing the local merchants rather than the mail order houses. Every dollar sent to Toronto for goods reduces the wealth of the city by just that amount. The man who sends it will never see it again. If he had left it with a local dealer, the chances are that in the course of a week or two he would receive the identical bill in his envelope on pay day.

One of the aims of the Greater Peterborough Association is to keep as much money as possible in the city instead of having it leak away to other places. This is why it has been decided to have local celebrations so far as possible on every holiday, to induce the citizens to remain at home on such occasions and to tempt visitors to the city. It is a matter in which all are intertested and in which all should co-operate. The citizen who spends his money at home is aiding in the work of building up a Greater Peterborough. The man who deals with an outside firm is conspiring against his own welfare as well as that of the city.

"LADIES" AND "WOMEN."

THE ORILLIA PACKET may be a stickler for forms of expression, but some of its protests against "etymological solecisms" are certainly well taken. Just now it is waging a war on the use of the term "lady" instead of the time-honored designation "woman."

The Packet is right once more. The latter expression is the one that has the sanction of long-established usage. The Lord made "woman." "Ladies" are the production of modern society, the handiwork of the milliner, the dressmaker and the dealer in jewels.

"GOOD GRACIOUS!"

THE ABOVE EXPRESSION may not be exactly in place in parliamentary discussion of grave and important public questions, but there is no doubt that it conveys a vast amount of meaning when uttered with the proper inflection and from the depth of perturbed feeling. Ejaculated by the Federal member for West Peterborough into a debate in the House, the two words represent an entire volume in themselves.

Mr. R. Bickerdike, M.P., of Montreal, rose from his place in the House to plead for the abolition of capital punishment, which he regars as something that has been handed down from the archives of the dark ages. Capt. Burnham asked him if he objected to shooting people, and the member from Montreal said he did. He gave an affirmative answer, too, when Capt. Burnham asked him if he objected to the war. Then West Peterborough was heard from again in an exclamation that is likely to live in the annals of Parliament. "Good Gracious," declared Capt. Burnham, and declined to pursue the matter further.

This is probably another case in which the real sentiments of a public man are likely to be misconstrued. One can easily understand how Mr. Bickerdike, opposed as he is to the death penalty on principle, can object to its infliction in any form, whether by hanging, shooting, or by means of the electric chair. But a man is not necessarily a monster because he objects to war in the abstract. There are really higher duties imposed upon the nations of the earth than that of shedding each other's blood. The member from Montreal may object to the present war because it was started by the enemies of the nation without justification. A man may be opposed to murder on principle and yet not go the length of maintaining that the guilty shall go altogether unpunished.

Mr. Bickerdike probably does not object to war waged in self defence. If he does, then, indeed, is his case hopeless, his position inexplicable, and the exclamation of Capt. Burnham fully justified.

THAYENDANEGA A GREAT INDIAN

Brant Greatest of Indian Race, From Whom Brantford Takes Its Name Was Once Chief of Mohawks

Chas E Compton writes: Though the Red Man is passing and his descendents are gradually being assimilated with the Canadian people, yet he has filled such a distinct place in Canadian history that his name can never be forgotten. Upon our cities, towns and villages, our forest and stream, our customs, our habits and our features, his stamp has been set and while time is removing some, there are others that will be ineffaceable so long as Canada is Canada. At the present time, in our bright and splendid Canadian schools, white children are learning to pronounce many of the same words that the squaw taught her papoose in her smoky wigwam, for we would hate to think that she never taught it at all. The inarticulate jargon of the Indian, having much to do with the names of many Canadian places, might be considered in the light of one of the chief characteristics of this country.

Greatest of Indian Race

Joseph Brant was one of the greatest of the Indian race and in the city of Brant-ford there is a monument erected to his memory. It was erected in 1886 by the Brant Memorial Association. Jos. Brant was the American chief of the Mohawk tribe and was known by the name Thayendanega. In 1742 he was born on the banks of the Ohio river. As a boy he attracted the attention of Sir William Johnston, who sent him to be educated by Dr. Eleazar Wheelock at Lebanon, Conn., in Moore's Indian Charity School, from which Dartmouth College has its origin. In the French and Indian wars, about 1763, he took the side of the English and also fought with the Iroquois against Frontenac. Afterwards he settled in Canajoharie or the Upper Mohawk Valley, which is now Montgomery County, New York. Said to be a devout churchman, he devoted himself to missionary work, also translating the Anglican Prayer Book and St. Mark's Gospel to the Indian tongue. When Guy Johnston succeeded his uncle Sir William Johnston, as superintendent of Indian Affairs, Brant became his secretary.

Built First Anglican Church

He remained loyal at the outbreak of the War of Independence, organized and led the Mohawks and other Indians allied to the British, against the settlements on the New York frontier. Consequently, the Mohawks had to leave the country and with Brant they came to Canada and founded a village on the banks of the Grand river. But previous to coming to Canada he aided the United States Commissioners in securing treaties of peace with the Miamis and other western tribes. After settling in Canada he again took up missionary work and in 1780 he visited England where he raised funds to assist the building of the first Anglican Church in Upper Canada.

FAMILY OF SIXTY-SIX

Chinese Consider Small Households Bad Form

A London paper writes: A large family which is able to live together without dividing up the property always receives much credit in China and is highly respected. It is one of the highest distinctions in China to have Wu Fu T'ung T'ang, or five generations, under one roof, although such a distinction is attained by very few. According to a census the family of Meng Yu Shih, a widow, of the village of Mantao, in the territory of Weihai-wei, had the distinction of being the largest in the land. Her family consisted of sixty-six members, and, with one servant, there are sixty-seven mouths to be fed daily.

Men Yu Shih is sixty-six years old, and has nine sons and numerous grandchildren and greatgrandchildren, all living under her roof. She has not attained the ambition of being the head of Wu Fu T'ung T'ang, but the size of her family has already given her the honor and pleasure of being the largest in China, even if she has not five generations under one roof. There are many households with more than forty members, and almost all old and distinguished families of China have at least twenty members. Families of small size, three or four, are considered rather bad form, even if they are rich and occupying high position. Size of family is as valuable in China as size of strong box.

LIFE OF A MAIL BAG

Post Office Bag Has Five Years of Life

The life of a mail bag in Canada is about five years, some lasting six or seven, according to the service to which they are given. Such bags pass into the hands of expert inspectors, who utilise such parts as still have some good material left, in making what is known as "pieced bags." Many are thus reclaimed and returned to the service, constituting, with the sale of condemned material, the salvage of the repair shops. The repairing end is scattered all over Canada and gives work to many small and large shops. The bags or parts of bags are sold (that is when they cannot be used) to the highest bidder.

Skull Hole Closed With Rubber

For closing a hole in the skull Dr. C. Scandota of Naples uses rubber sponge. He reports to La Riforma Medica that he tried it on a rabbit and a dog, which he killed after nine and six months and found that except for slight loose adhesion to the dura, the rubber sponge was unchanged. It had caused no trouble and the animals had behaved normally.

Fish That Shine at Night

The Bay of Naples abounds in medusae, or jellyfish, often growing as large as two feet in diameter and weighing fifty and sixty pounds. Some of them shine at night with a greenish light and are known as "noctiluca" (night lanterns) by the natives.

SPECULATORS IN FARM.

Sir James Aikins on "The Land F the People"

Manitoba and all its citizens should recognize the fact that the useful occupation of the land is the chief of all its economic questions, said Sir James Aikins. New Zealand does. About one-third of the land there is held on permanent leasehold from the State. Moreover, the State has purchased from grantees some million and a quarter of acres, and leased it in the same way to settlers, so 13,000 souls have been thus settled on the land, and the Government has not been the loser in the transaction. These permanent leaseholds, for, say, 999 years, are really freeholds, but they can be made subject to suitable regulations of residence and cultivation, so the Government can see that the land is occupied and kept productive, and not held by speculators, unused, to the detriment of the people. The same damage results from speculators securing possession of our other natural resources—for example, our water-powers, coal fields, minerals, fishing rights and the like.

Surely these natural resources were intended for the benefit of the people of Manitoba and not for people residing elsewhere, or speculation. If single individuals have not the capital to develop them under Government control, the Government representing the people has the capital and will have the support of the people in owning and using for our advantage. I am notu rging that the western Provinces give up their Dominion subsidies granted in lieu of natural resources, but may not the Governments acquire those found useful on a basis similar to that on which private enterprise does or speculators do, and so keep and administer them for the people. The people on our farms need cheap fuel, cheap power for farm purposes and cheap fish. These would contribute not only to comfort but profit on the farm.

PARLIAMENT HAS PRISON

Not Always Uninhabited Either—The Bradlaugh Case

Few people are aware that the British Houses of Parliament have their own prison. Yet situated high up in the Clock Tower is the M.P.'s prison, consisting of four bedrooms and two sitting rooms. The honorable member who has been dishonored by imprisonment for a breach of Parliamentary etiquette does not have a very hard life in St. Stephen's prison. The prisoner's meals are sent up to him from the House of Commons' kitchens, and he can choose whatever dishes he likes from the ordinary menu. Unlike an ordinary prisoner, he receives the bill for his meals from the catering authorities!

Perhaps the best remembered occupant of Parliament's prison was Mr. Bradlaugh, who was sentenced by the Speaker to imprisonment in the Clock Tower for refusing to withdraw when requested so to do. Offenders against Parliament other than members have before now been sentenced to imprisonment in the Clock Tower. These "outsiders" have included several public speakers and the editor of a prominent newspaper.

CANADA AS PAPER MAKER

Chance to be Perpetually a Leader in Industry

Indications point to Canada as one of the most important pulp and paper producers of the world for many years. There is no reason, except apathy respecting fire protection in the pulp producing regions, why Canada should not produce perpetually a large part of the world's paper. The large spruce forests in the east and north including the sub-Arctic forest which has value chiefly for pulp, show Canada's capacity to grow suitable wood in enormous quantities, sufficient with any kind of protection and management, to supply the demand of all time. Pulp forests are however, particularly susceptible to fire, and need careful protection.

It is gratifying to see that some of the most progressive pulp companies are successfully protecting their land from fire. On account of the comparatively rapid growth of pulp timber to a commercial size it appears that pulp companies will be the first who can prove that scientific forest management is good business for private concern.

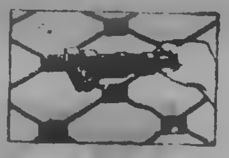
RUSSIAN DUMA

Dignity and Decorum Mark Character of Members

A correspondent, writing of the Duma in session, says: "I was very greatly interested and moved by the character of the Duma, so far as dignity, decorum and the character of the men are concerned. Of course, I am speaking now of the Duma as seen and studied by me from the outside—as a visitor, that is. I listened to an address on the supply of food that was nothing less than splendid in its spirit and matter. It was listened to with marked attention—with a respectful attitude by not only the galleries, but the members themselves, that was good to see. Even on ordinary days, when the Duma is conducting merely routine business of a dull sort to the average person—or business that would probably be so construed here—the galleries are crowded to capacity by students, teachers and other obviously prominent persons, and with a goodly sprinkling of peasants.

"The peasants wear an air of proud ownership. They sit back in their chairs, listening to every word that is being spoken, and there is something in their manner and look that seems to say, 'This is my Duma,' much as though the thought made them more contented than anything with which they had ever before come in contact. And the women! Fine looking young women attend the sessions of the Duma, remove their hats and coats, and literally drink in the inspiring scenes enacted in the institution devoted to the interests of the people.

Sagging Couch Spring



A couch spring of the type shown in the sketch sagged considerably, making it ineffective. The sag was taken up by bending the sections of wire with a monkey wrench, so that the entire spring was stiffened almost as satisfactorily as when new. Care must be taken that the wires are bent uniformly so that the strain is evenly distributed.—Popular Mechanics.

MURDER QUITE COMMON

Some Sad Facts in the East End of Old London

Geo. R. Sims writes as follows: "One afternoon I was talking to a woman who lived in a room that looked on to a backyard in which a few nights previously a man killed his [illegible] 'Murder! Help. Murder!' when she was attacked; but not one of the inmates had gone to her assistance.

"'Why on earth,' I said to the woman, 'didn't you do something when you heard that poor creature shouting for help?'

"'Lor' love yer, sir!' was the reply, 'if we was to get out o' bed every time we 'eard 'Murder' shouted in this 'ouse, we'd be 'oppin' in and out all night.'"

$50,000 a Year For Poet

When Strachan and Co. took over the publication of Tennyson's poems in the 'sixties they agreed to pay Tennyson $25,000 a year in respect to the books already issued, and to pay the poet all profits on new work, less a modest 10 per cent. commission. This item generally meant $30,000 for each new volume. For many years before his death Tennyson drew a steady $50,000 per annum from his publishers.

World's Most Northerly Railway

For flavoring soups a kitchen bouquet can easily be made. Take a few sprigs of parsley and wrap them around peppercorns, whole cloves, a bay leaf and other herbs that are at hand. Tie up tightly. This can be removed from the soup without trouble.

The peel of lemons should be saved and dried and placed among the sugar to be used for cakes. This gives a slight flavor to the sugar.

Whipped cream goes much farther if the white of an egg is added before whipping. Add a pinch of salt to the whites to make them froth easily, and take care that the beater is thoroughly dry.

Faded carpets should be taken up, well beaten and brushed, then laid down again in their places. Now take a pint of vinegar and add boiling water till you can only just bear your hand in it. Rub every part of the carpet with a perfectly clean floor cloth, frequently wrung out in the vinegar. This will restore the colors and the carpet will look like new.

Sport Sets Separate

Separate sport sets are shown in tussah in two-toned effects. Touches of hand embroidery add an attractive finishing note in the corners. One very clever set is illustrated in gold and blue tussah, consisting of collar and girdle. A hat in white straw and tussah is worn, this harmonizing beautifully with the set.

To Mend a Rug

To patch a hole in a cotton rug, lay a piece of woolen under it as a patch, and with a large embroidery needle darn cotton in harmonizing colors over the woolen. Often it is possible thus to cover a hole so that it will not show. Small holes can be darned with soft cotton without the woolen backing. Threads drawn from old brussels carpet can be used for mending rugs. Wool, of course, should be used for mending a woolen rug. A worn or faded rug can have its usefulness extended by stitching a piece of burlap smoothly on top and fringing the ends.

Deep Apple Pie

Make a good, rich crust, as a rich, flaky crust is essential to any good pie. Line the pie tin with the bottom crust rolled thin. Pare and slice thin enough tart apples to fill the tin, heaping up a little in the centre. Mix one-half teaspoonful of cinnamon, and level dessert spoonful of flour and three-fourths cupfuls of sugar together and stir in among the apples. Add one tablespoonful of water and one tablespoonful of butter put on in dabs, and bake with top crust. Bake until a light brown.

Whitening Linen

Handkerchiefs and white clothes that have become yellow from use of too much soap, or any other cause, may be whitened in the following manner: After washing let them soak overnight in a tub of clear water, to which is added a teaspoonful of cream of tartar. When ironed they will be white as snow.

ILL SPOILED CHILDREN

Trials to be Encountered With Undesciplined Children

A doctor in discussing the training of children told of cases he had attended where spoiled children had refused to take food or medicine until he arrived to enforce obedience. In one case a little girl, well on the way to recovery, had been urged to keep warm and not toss off the clothes. Not only did she toss off the clothes, but on hearing some kind of music going on in the street, she got out of bed and watched the performance, her bare feet standing on cold linoleum. A fresh cold was contracted, after bronchitis, that ended fatally—the only darling spoiled child of foolish parents.

A well brought up child who will allow mother or nurse to handle, feed it, or give it the innumerable little attentions that every child has to submit to for its well-being until it is old enough to look after itself, will accept the same necessary attentions from a sick nurse or doctor. The fact that they have been trained to obey another person's will without question will be of the greatest service in illness. In the same way, the child who has had little or no control put upon his actions in health, and who has eaten very much what he fancied, and left untouched the things that would have been better for him, cannot be expected to suddenly conform to a new order of things because he has fallen sick.

As a matter of fact, spoiled people of any age are doubly troublesome to manage in illness. There may be some mothers who have not considered the spoiling process in this light, and who may still have time to bend the young twig in the way it should go. A time of illness may come when the ending will make all the difference to their own anxiety and to the recovery of the child.

For Stiff Mackintoshes

Mackintosh coats which have become hard and rigid may be easily cleaned with lime and water and made to look as good as new. A handful of the best gray lime dissolved in half a bucket of water applied with a small sponge, makes it better. Repeat after three hours.

A Glass Cement

To mend broken glass or china, melt common alum in an old iron spoon over the fire, then apply to the pieces of china or glass. When dry these articles can be washed in hot water and the cement will hold rigidly.

MAY ROBSON

HERE NEXT SATURDAY IN A NEW PLAY.

The same May Robson, who has delighted thousands of theatregoers in years gone by will be seen at "The Grand" next Saturday, April 28th, matinee and evening, in her new comedy "The Making Over of Mrs. Matt." The play is from the pen of that popular author, James Forbes, who knows how to write comedy that hits the public appetite. In this, his latest play, he has reached the zenith of his career. As a character actress May Robson is superb. Her exquisite style and poise, her smooth, nerve soothing voice and the rapidity with which she changes from the ludicrous to tht emotional, always captivates and holds her audiences. "The Making Over of Mrs. Matt" is a comedy of sunshine and laughs, but there are intermingled human interest touches which pull at the heartstrings and call for frequent use of the handkerchief. It is doubtful if ever there was another role created for a character actress so strikingly suitable as "Mrs. Matt' is to Miss Robson.

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

LEST YOU FORGET

We would again remind you that Dr. Fowler has the most complete, modernly equipped optical establishment between Toronto and Montreal. Every latest improved instrument for correct eye testing has been installed regardless of cost, and his patrons are sure of obtaining absolute satisfaction. The lens-grinding machines are automatic, and the work is done to a mathematical nicety, without attention and very rapidly. HURRIED MEALS

Avoid a Hasty Midday Meal For the Children

The question of coming home for midday dinner has to be carefully considered by the parents of boys and girls who attend a day school. If this entails a rush, hasty eating, and hurrying to and from school, it should be avoided, if possible. A hot midday meal is, of course, desirable if it can be eaten quietly and without haste. But indigestion will almost certainly result from dinner bolted at express speed so as not to be late for afternoon school.

Dainty egg and bread and butter sandwiches, eaten slowly at school, especially if a glass of milk or a cup of hot cocoa can be obtained, do much more good than a heavy dinner bolted in haste. If the children can have a substantial meal when they get home at about four or five o'clock, the light lunch will keep them going nicely, and will have no ill effects.

Fish Fritters

One cup of cold boiled fish, flaked up fine, add to it half a cup of mashed potatoes, half a cup of grated breadcrumbs, half a cup of cream, the beaten yolks of two eggs, one-half teaspoon of salt and one-eighth teaspoonful of pepper. Mix all well together, then make into cakes or balls; beat up the whites of two eggs a little, dip the cakes into the whites, then into breadcrumbs and fry a light brown. Garnish with parsley and serve hot. An excellent and appetising way to utilize "left-overs."

Sandwich Fillers

Meat thinly sliced or finely chopped and seasoned, or mixed with salad dressing. Celery chopped fine and mixed with salad dressing. Olives chopped fine and mixed with salad dressing, one-half cup to one-quarter cup olives. Celery, pimentoes and nuts, chopped fine and mixed with salad dressing. Cream cheese and nuts, or olives, or pimentoes and cream. American cheese grated, seasoned with tomato. Lettuce with mayonnaise.

PRODUCTION MOVEMENT

The canvass of owners of properties has not been as prompt as expected. The men undertaking the work have found that duties from day to day and from night to night have interfered. But there are available many properties and lots.

These are being listed by the secretary, and in a day or two the lists will be published, by the good assistance of the papers. The lots will be in two lists.

Those lots for the use of which consent has been obtained from the owners. Another list, all equally good, but for the use of which consent has not been had. Not that the owners will not allow them to be used, but that the committee has not had time to interview.

For those, consent given, application for use will have to be filed with the secretary at the Patriotic Fund office. Applications may be made by phone, to be followed with written name. This is to avoid dispute as to the priority of application. If the lot has not already been taken the applicant can have it and go to work.

For those lots not consented to, no reference may be made to the secretary. Select from the list what you would like and hunt up the owner and arrange. It is a personal matter between you and him, or her, if the owner be a lady. But get consent to use, and meet any small conditions specified.

It is hoped the lists will be ready for the first of the week. This notice is printed that a lookout may be kept for the list in the papers.

VICTORY OVER WOUNDS OR, THE SOLDIERS RESURRECTION

Canada should be as proud of her wounded soldiers' victory over their wounds as she is of the glorious fights in which she fell. Their struggle up from the depths of disablement is often as hard, and even as heroic, as their desperate defence at Ypres or their dashing capture of the Vimy ridge.

We hear little, altogether too little, of these hard-won victories won by disabled men, because they are fought out in the seclusion of a hospital, not in the theatre of war with the whole world looking on. But such victories equally deserve public recognition. They show the same spirit, the same pluck, and still more indomitable perseverance.

A preacher on Easter morning was thanked for the inspiring sermon he had just preached on the resurrection. He said: "I had my text sitting in front of me—a man in khaki with an empty sleeve. He has had two resurrections already. He was buried by a shell explosion, and was dug out only just in time to save his life. This was the first. He spent months in hospital, fighting his way back to health. That was the second.

"Doctoring and nursing, of course did much for him; so did the exercises and occupations that they provide nowadays—perhaps the best part of the treatment. But the man himself was working out his own resurrection, by resolutely putting his own will power into the task. Now he is almost ready to go out into the world, a better and abler man he says, than he was before, in spite of his lost arm.

"While the rest of us are thinking of a resurrection beyond the grave, he has won a resurrection this side of it, to a new life of activity and independence among his fellow-countrymen."

Authentic cases resembling that are not rare in the records of military hospitals commission. Here are a few that have just been communicated to us:—

A mechanic who enlisted in the Princess Patricia's Regiment was wounded, returned to Canada, spent three months in a convalescent hospital, and now earns double his former pay, having taken full advantage of the mechanical drawing and arithmetic classes carried on there. Writing to the hospital instructor, he says:—

"When I enlisted, I was earning about $7 a day at my trade. At present, and since my discharge from military service, I am technically a better man all around; I am able now to hold a job as foreman in a machine shop, with more than twice the salary I was getting before. This benefit to me is greatly due to your practical information, and my only regret is that I was unable, after my discharge, to continue instruction with you as you advised."

Another letter received is from an ex-private in the 13th Battalion. Before enlistment, he was getting $1[illegible] a week as driver on a city milk round. "I always had a liking for drawing," he says, "and felt that if ever I had the chance I would take up a course in mechanical drawing." This opportunity came to him at one the Commissions convalescent hospitals. After six weeks' application to the work there, he was able to secure an appointment with a salary beginning at $75 a month, with good prospects of advancement.

A locomotive fireman enlisted, was severely wounded, and had to have his left arm amputated. Under the Commission's scheme of re-education which is afforded to all men incapacited for their former work by service, he received special training in telegraphy and railway routine. As a result, he secured an appointment as station agent and despatcher, at $110 a month.

Still another patient, formerly a mechanic, passed the Civil Service qualifying examination after instruction in hospital, and has got a Custom House position at $900 a year rising to $1,500.

A man who had been a guide and trapper, and had never handled tools returned from the front with one eye destroyed by a wound and the sight of the other eye impaired. In spite of all these old and new disabilities, by putting his mind to it he became a first-class carpenter after three month in the hospital workshop.

Equally remarkable is the case of a Polish laborer. He came to Canada six years ago, and worked in a coal mine till he enlisted. At the front he was both gassed and buried. Though he knew absolutely nothing about carpentry to begin with, after two months of instruction in hospital he was able to hold his own with any ordinary carpenter.

Not every man, of course, can "double his pay." But one of the most cheering facts proved by experience during the war has been this—that almost all the disabled men, including the very seriously wounded, can be equipped once more with power to earn a good-living.

And often, as Lord Shaughnessey said the other day, the occupations and training provided by the Military Hospitals system "reveal astonishing talents which even the man himself did not know he possessed."

ACTIVITIES AT Y.M.C.A.

Dr. George Anderson of the Royal Canadian Naval Institute will address a special meeting at the Y. M. C. A. on Sunday afternoon at 4:15 o'clock on Social Service Among the Sailors. Every man is cordially invited to this service.

◆ ◆ ◆

The ladies of the Mothers' Club are preparing an entertainment to be given in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium on the evening of May 11th, the purpose being to secure funds with which to purchase yarn for socks for the soldiers. The auto knitting machine, given to the "Y." by our late honorary president, Mr. J. W. Bennett, has been in constant use during the past two months. Any organization or individual may have the free use of this machine by applying to the Association.

◆ ◆ ◆

The Y. M. C. A. would like to correct he statement made in the local press the past week to the effect that no flags had been displayed in the city in recognition of the recent victories participated in by our Canadian soldiers. Within two hours after the news of the victory reached Peterborough about twelve days ago the Y. M. C. A. flag was unfurled and kept at the top of the mast for three days. It is now up to commemorate Ypres.

◆ ◆ ◆

All junior boys of the Y. M. C. A. who have backyard gardens are requested to meet at the Y. M. C. A. on Monday night at 7:30 for the purpose of organizing a boys' garden club. The boys will elect their own officers, and prizes will be given to the boys who bring in the largest number of members for the club. It is the intention of the officers of the Association to give cash prizes for the best-kept backyard garden, so it will pay the boys to get busy and join the club.

◆ ◆ ◆

The farm production work in which the Y. M. C. A. is giving the best part of its organization at present is meeting with great success. This week, Boys' Secretary Galley, in the interest of the Ontario Government, visited Norwood, Campbellford, Stirling and Omemee, in which places he addressed the high school boys and girls on the needs of increased production and gave facts to show that several countries in the old world are now on the verge of starvation and must look to Canada and the United States for their food supplies. The Y. M. C. A., while affiliated with five production movements, feels that the main need is to line up the city men and boys to aid the farmers this season. While the Y. M. C. A. effort is not limited to its membership, still it hopes to make an every-member canvass to ascertain how many of its own members are to participate in garden or farm work this year. An invitation is being given to every person who expects to work land this year to register at the Y. M. C. A., that a record of our emergency agricultural workers may be submitted to our government.

Stop! Look! Listen!

"Stop! Look! Listen!" which is billed to appear at "The Grand" on Thursday, April 26, is of the big type show, the sort that is composed of life, vivacity, snappy songs, pretty girls in face and form, and jolly dances. The tunes, by that syncopated wonder, Irving Berlin, are irresistible. Altogether there are 25 musical numbers, all conceded to be uncommonly clever. Perhaps the most popular of all is the Ragtime Melodrama, in which our old friends, the villain, the cruel father, et al, are burlesqued in exceedingly comic fashion with the thrilling libretto all sung in ragtime and none of the stageful of characters losing a step as they dance their way from one exciting climax to the next. In fact, "Stop! Look! Listen!" provides opportunity for the exposition of all sorts of merry doings and for various enlivening deeds by a bunch of girls who are a dazzling, kaleidoscopic joy to the eye.

RED ROSE TEA is good tea

"Nature" chose Assam

Scientists tell us that Assam in northern India was the original home of the tea plant. Thousands of years ago "Nature" chose the climate and soil of this favored region as most suitable for growing tea.

It is, therefore, natural that the hillside gardens of Assam (see picture) grow the teas which to-day are famous for their flavor, fragrance and rich strength.

It is of these Assam teas, skilfully blended with choice Ceylons, that Red Rose Tea consists. It is this rich Assam strength that users of Red Rose Tea must thank for its splendid economy—for the greater number of cups it yields to the pound, fully one-third more than ordinary teas.

To make certain that these Assam qualities are fully preserved for you we put Red Rose Tea into dust, odor and air proof sealed packages. Red Rose Tea reaches you pure, fresh and full strength—we guarantee it.

Miss Jessie Matthews returned this morning to resume her studies in the Bishop Strachan School, Toronto.

Miss Rosamond Huycke has returned to the Bishop Strachan School in Toronto.

Mrs. T. F. Matthews is in Toronto today.

Miss Margaret Turner, a pupil of the Bishop Strachan School, Toronto, has returned to that institution after spending the holidays with her parents here.

Mrs. A. Simmons is visiting Lindsay friends.

The many friends of Mr. John Murphy, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Murphy, South Ops, will regret to learn of his severe illness from laryngitis. Mr. Murphy has been suffering from the malady for about two weeks. This morning his condition was reported favorable, and better hopes are entertained for his recovery. His sister from Peterborough, who is a nurse-in-training, arrived home and will assist in waiting upon him.

CAPT. HAROLD

DIED OF WOUNDS.

Word has been received that Pte. Russell Devall has died of wounds. He left Toronto last July with the 134th Highlanders. He was born in this city and lived here before going to Toronto. He leaves a wife and three children in Toronto. One brother, Wesley, of Ashburnham, also survives. Mrs. Geo. Chambers of Simcoe street, is his aunt.

LIEUT. SHEFFIELD.

Lt. Geoffrey Sheffield of Cobourg, formerly of Peterborough, has been killed in action. He was in the Bank of Montreal in that city before enlisting. Two other brothers are at the front, one of them being in the medical service during the fighting at Gallipoli. He was a son of the late Charles Sheffield of this city.

WORK AMONG THE SICK

District Nurse Makes Report for March.

The report of the district nurse for March shows that under the head of general work twelve patients were visited. There were six new patients taken on, and altogether there were 98 visits made.

The tubercular work attended to was as follows:

Patients visited, 22.

Total visits, 104.

Articles loaned to patients comprised air cushions, old linen, 175 refills, and eight ounces of carbolic.

The cases attended to comprised obstetric, la grippe, post operative, rheumatism, etc.

MAKE PROPOSAL TO CLEAN PAVED CITY STREETS

THE DOMINION DUSTLESS SWEEPER CO. WOULD UNDERTAKE WORK.

Messrs. W. Buller, W. H. Hamilton, W. M. Laing and W. Blaney, representing the Dominion Dustless Sweeper Company, waited upon the Board of Works last night and submitted a proposition to the aldermen to clean the paved streets of the city for $40 per day. It was pointed out for the benefit of the board that the sweeper this year is absolutely perfect and will work much faster than last year.

The city's appropriation for this work by day labor is only $3000, and taking into consideration that the use of the sweeper would do away with the necessity of watering the pavements, the city decided to offer the company $4000 to keep the pavements clean from May 1st until November 1st.

The deputation returned to the committee room and heard the decision of the committee, and they decided that the offer of the city was a very small one when the work guaranteed a longer life to the pavement. They decided to let the Council give the subject further consideration before finally deciding.

Most of the aldermen and the Mayor were very anxious for the company to do the work, but the cost would be over $6000 at the rate set by them.

OFF FOR CHICAGO.

City Officials Will Interview Quaker Oats Company.

A deputation of the City Council left for Chicago this afternoon, to interview the officials of the Quaker Oats Co. in reference to the agreement between the city and the company.

The party is composed of Mayor Duffus, Ald. McIntyre, chairman of the manufacturers' committee, and Ald. Weir, chairman of the Board of Works, and City Solicitor G. N. Gordon.

TO THE LADIES OF PETERBORO

Housecleaning time is with us once more, and all careful housewives are considering how best to dispose of their accumulation of clean, worn out garments, scraps of cloth, old and new, scraps of clean paper, paper bags, etc., from the grocer's, and old metal. You are urged to donate them to the Local Council of Women for the benefit of the supervised play grounds.

What would amount to but a trifle at the door can be disposed of by the Association for something worth while.

The collecting will be made as far as possible through the children of the public schools. A penny saved is a penny gained, even in the matter of gasoline.

If you have not children attending or the bulk is too great to be carried, send your name and address to the principal of the nearest school or call 'phones 1583, 1264 or 1345, and the Association will see that they are called for. Today great things are being accomplished through careful attention to small things. Do not think anything too little as long as it is clean. The collection will be made next week if possible. Watch for further announcements.

Today's Market Fairly Large Prices Easier

EGGS TAKE A DROP OF THREE CENTS.

The market this morning was fairly large, and prices were very much easier. Eggs sold at 30 cents a doz., and butter sold at 42 to 43 cents per lb. The fowl that was offered was not very choice. Hens sold at $1.00 to $1.50 each. There were a few turkeys on sale at 25 cents per lb. On the outside market maple syrup was plentiful and could be got for $2.00 per gal.

Hogs are quoted at $16.00 per cwt, for next week.

Benefit For the Band That Benefts Us

A performance of "Pinafore," or "The Lass That Loved a Sailor," will be given in the Grand Opera House May 15 and 16 for the benefit of the 57th Regt. Band. The piece has been rehearsed for some time by the Conservatory Orchestra and a splendid chorus under the direction of Prof. Gliddon. There is a strong and complete cast, composed of some of the best vocalists in the city, and an adequate ballet. Mr. Stanley Adams, the histrionic coach and stage director of Toronto, will stage the performance, and there will be scenery from the Royal Alexandra Theatre, Toronto. Everything points to a fine production of an always popular piece.

For further particulars see window cards.

HOW S.A. WORK IS EXTENDING

OPENING OF NO. 2 CORPS TO BE HELD APRIL 28-30.

The opening of No. 2 Corps of the Peterborough Salvation Army will take place April 28-30. The Army work has so extended that this is necessary, and headquarters have decided that Capt. Hargraves, daughter of Lt.-Col. Hargraves, of Toronto headquarters, and Lieut. Lent will be the commanding officers.

There is a fine Sunday school work going on now with an attendance of fifty Scouts and Guards, and a number of senior soldiers are ready to transfer from the Simcoe street Temple roll who live in that district, so that the new corps, with its new and well-furnished citadel, will start out under most favorable auspices.

Quarters for the officers will have to be found and furnished, but Adjt. and Mrs. McElhiney and Mr. R. C. Braund, who is superintendent of all the young people's work of the Army in the city, have great faith that the friends of the Salvation Army will assist in getting the necessary supplies for the new officers.

The officers will arrive early next week, and great preparations are being made for a splendid reception to them. Further announcement will be made of the opening next week.

Adjt. Burton of Montreal will conduct the opening services.

Open-air services will be held at the corner of Rubidge and Sherbrooke streets for the benefit of some sick folk who reside in that district.

OBITUARY

EDWIN R. ROGERS

Mr. Edwin R. Rogers, inspector of public charities for the Province of Ontario, died last night at his late residence, 102 Wells Hill avenue Toronto. The late Mr. Rogers was born 57 years ago in Peterboro, son of the late Lieut.-Col. Robert D. Rogers of this city. He was for some years engaged in the hardware business in Toronto, afterwards he moved to Winnipeg, and thence to Calgary, where he was appointed Clerk to the Supreme Court, a position which he held for ten years. Latterly he conducted a business in Toronto until he was appointed inspector of Public Charities eleven years ago.

The late Mr. Rogers was twice married. His first wife was Miss Lottie M. Clark, of Winnipeg. In 1895 he married Miss Emily Pellatt, sister of Sir Henry Pellatt, who survives him. He leaves besides two daughters, Bessie and Rita.

He was a brother of R. B. Rogers, of this city, who was in Toronto at the time of his death.

"Stop, Look, Listen" Coming to the Grand

BRILLIANT COSTUMES AND HANDSOME CHORUS GIRLS.

"Stop! Look! Listen!" is a good title for the melange of scenery, girls, gowns and ragtime which will be presented at "The Grand" on Thursday, April 26. There is something worth attention every minute the curtain is up. It is a snappy, jumpy show, ceaseless in action and endless variety. The scenery is of the new school of stage decoration and most of the settings are artistically effective, particularly the Honolulu scenes and one entitled "At the Farm." The costumes are no less artistic in design and harmonious in coloring.

"Stop! Look! Listen!" is a succession of incidents, more or less comic, following in rapid succession to the accompaniment of songs, dances and vaudeville specialties. These are woven around a temperamental prima donna who throws up her job for a trip around the world with a gay old boy eager to get rid of his money; also with a chorus girl who has a press agent and wants to be a prima donna. So she, too, has to run around the world.

This attraction comes to "The Grand" with New York's stamp of approval, it having had a phenomenal run of over a year at the Globe Theatre in that city, and lovers of good entertainment should not fail to witness it, as it is sure to be one of the big musical treats of the season. The sale of seats will begin next Tuesday, prices ranging from 50c to $1.50. Mail orders are now being filled in the order received.

LITERARY RAMBLES

So many enquiries have been made at various times as to the manner in which the books for the Peterborough Public Library are selected, that a little information on the subject may be found interesting. It will prove a fitting and sufficient answer, at any rate, to those who cavil, small though their number is, at the quality of literature purchased for our library. The books, in the first instance, are, in practically every case, picked from amongst those that have been favorably criticized in the best-known literary periodicals. A fair proportion every month are selected from the different branches of literature, and these are gone over as carefully as possible by the members of the Library Committee, who go to a considerable amount of trouble to ensure a good selection. This, in short, is the method in vogue at the Public Library, and if, in the face of this statement, carpers are to be found to say that they are not satisfied, then all that can be said is that in no library of any standing for efficiency will they be able to find books better suited to their tastes. Every librarian is confronted, day after day, with extraordinary requests. Some desire literature dealing with the most sordid and unlovely traits in human nature; others, again, delight in the morbid element, and still others in controversial questions, concerning which, if the demand were acceded to, ammunition would be provided for the most acrid and dangerous arguments. In our own library great care has been taken to fight shy of all such books as far as it was possible to do so. To provide clean literature has been the main consideration of the Board, and the difficulty has always been to select books in which such cleanness was allied with strength. Some people, sentimentally inclined, want books with lots of Love in them, not the variety that goes by the name of Christian charity, but the other sort that deals with artless souls wandering by laughing brooks, hand clasped in hand, etc. Insofar as this taste could be satisfied, it has been satisfied, in a modified form. No complaint has ever been made in regard to any branch but fiction, and this is really the one in which the greatest care has been exercised. The chief complaint, and this is only from a few, has been that there is a lack of the "human element." Well, if by the "human element" is meant such books as the French term "risque" or venturesome, the public may rest assured that they will never knowingly be placed on the shelves. The few that have unwittingly been purchased at odd times have been quickly disposed of when attention has been drawn to their true nature. Another great difficulty that besets every Library Board is in the choosing of books dealing with religion. These are bought sparingly, although the branch to which they belong might be considered the most important of any. The only books bought in this section are such as are commonly regarded as by master hands, and no preference is given to one church over another.

Children's books present another difficulty. For years there has been a strong call from young people for the Alger books, but no attention has been paid to this, as it has been felt that there were other books, just as interesting and breathing a more virile spirit, that would be preferable for the growing youth of Peterborough.

Many valuable books have been acquired by the Public Library since it was opened in February, 1911. During that period some 3,000 have been struck off the lists. If all these had been erased owing to natural causes there would be no reason for worry, but, unfortunately, in more cases than one would care to enumerate, books have been either wilfully stolen, or damaged beyond repair. Of course, these vandalisms occur in every library, but it is small satisfaction to us that they do, and conveys very little joy to our souls to feel that we are, after all, no whit worse off than other people. The evil is one that is not easy to eradicate owing to the miserable cunning that is practised by those who indulge in it. It is hard to feel charitable when one opens a volume and finds some of the most interesting and valuable illustrations cut from the letterpress or whole pages torn bodily from a book, or original comments scribbled on the margins of pages. It is the meanest kind of criminality, and one for which no mercy would be shown if the culprits were discovered. At the present time the Library is minus two books that have been taken from the Reference Room. One is a copy of Comstock's Nature Study and the other the Colour Key to North American Birds, by Chapman. Any information that will lead to the discovery or return of these volumes will be appreciated by the library authorities.

Veteran Soldier Honored

THIRTY-FIVE years work with the Canadian Pacific Railway Company and sixty-two years service in the military forces of the British Empire have brought recognition and honour to Fred. L. Lydon, for the well-known veteran has been advanced by the big transportation system, and he has been made a Lieutenant-Colonel by the military authorities.

FRED. L. LYDON.

Born at Bermuda, West Indies, in 1838, the son of a father who came of a Galway, Ireland, family, Lieutenant-Colonel Lydon has had an interesting career. It is no wonder that his special outlet for activities lies in the military field; his father was a soldier, and on the paternal side also his grandfather fought as a private under the Duke of Wellington when Napoleon was defeated at Waterloo in 1815; on the maternal side his grandfather was soldier military secretary to the "Iron Duke," and also took his part in the overthrow of Napoleon. Both grandfathers fought through the Peninsula War.

"We Irish are shy to talk about our experiences," said Lieutenant-Colonel Lydon in an interview, "but I may say that it was in my blood to be a soldier. In 1854, when I was only fifteen years of age, I began service in England with the Dorset Militia. At the time of the Indian Mutiny I volunteered for service in the King's Royal Rifles, remaining in this regiment from 1857 until 1866. I had not an opportunity of doing duty at the Indian Mutiny. When the King's Own Rifles were coming to Canada in 1861 I came with them, arriving on the 12th July. Afterwards I spent two years in Quebec, two in Montreal, and a little while in London, Ontario."

Having spoken of the wonderful development of the Dominion during the last half century Lieutenant-Colonel Lydon went on to say that in 1866, when the Fenians raided Canada he was amongst those who went to meet them. "I remember the time well," he said, "for the hardest march of my life was that which brought us into touch with the invaders. We marched thirty-four miles in a day. At Ridgeway and Fort Erie we captured quite a number of the Fenians, who were badly organized and did not offer a vigorous resistance."

In December, 1866, he left the regular army and became adjutant-instructor of the 28th Perth Battalion, serving two years with this unit. In those days the employees of military age on the railway to which he was attached, were volunteers under military control. He was an energetic organizer amongst them. Later he came to Montreal and re-organized the "5th Royals," and was their adjutant-instructor for many years. The "5th Royals" was the parent of the present 5th Royal Higlanders. In 1889 Lieutenant-Colonel Lydon broke new territory and organized two companies of Scotch Highland Cadets. This undertaking was most successful, for the companies gradually increased until there are now eight of them formed into one unit known as the Highland Cadet battalion. "These are my children," proceeded the veteran. "We gave eighty to the South African War, and to the present conflict we gave between four hundred and five hundred. I am still commander of the cadets."

"I did not seek any promotion," said Lieutenant-Colonel Lydon. "I was content to work as I had been working, but I had a letter from Major-General E. W. Wilson dated March 26 of this year, telling me that I have been made a Lieutenant-Colonel on the retired list." He then produced a letter from Major-General W. E. Hodgins, of the Adjutant-General's Office, Ottawa, which stated that the promotion was, "A recognition of your long, faithful and valuable services to the militia, and which are much appreciated by us older men, who know what you have done."

Besides having such a distinguished military career Lieutenant-Colonel Lydon has a good railway record. He has been in the General Ticket Department of the Canadian Pacific Railway for thirty-five years and has watched the company develop and spread its branches all over the world. The veteran railroad man under review was at the opening of the first general office at Place d'Armes and during his connection with the C. P. R. has become widely known and deservedly popular with the public.

[illegible] was a surprise to Lieutenant-Colonel Lydon when, on the morning of March 31st, he was summoned to the office of Lord Shaughnessy, President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and was appointed to assist on the re-organizing staff of the First Aid Branch of the company, with office in the department of Mr. George Bury, Vice-President. This means considerable advancement. It is a happy coincidence that two splendid recognitions came at the same time to crown a long life's worthy labour.

CANADIAN OFFICER TOOK SEVENTY HUN PRISONERS

Stewart Lyon Tells of Daring Deeds at Vimy Ridge.

(By Stewart Lyon)

Army Headquarters in France, April 21. A startling episode at Vimy Ridge was that wherein the captain of a battalion engaged in the assault on the hill went forward, with a scout, to secure Germans who were trapped in dugouts before they could make their escape. He left the scout for the officer to whom they had surrendered near the entrance of the large dugout, with instructions to shoot anyone emerging if he did not himself return. When the officer reached the bottom of the dugout he found seventy Germans in it, who surrendered at his demand. In the face of so many prisoners it was impossible that their captor should turn his back on them and ascend the dug out stairs, as doubtless he would have been promptly shot in the back. With his revolver in hand he stationed himself at the front of the stairs and ordered the prisoners up.

Several of them on reaching the top, were shot in by the scout, who had no evidence that the enemy had surrendered. The ascending Germans blocked the stairs and shouted for the officer to whom they had surrendered to come up and stop the shooting. This he did at the imminent risk of his life from the enemy behind him and his own scout in front. He enjoyed the triumph of taking almost seventy men back who had surrendered to a single foe.

Killed Eight Germans

A lieutenant, after the ridge of Vimy had been carried by the Canadians, went out scouting 2,500 yards in front of our victorious men. By personal observation he discovered the enemy establishing a line that would have been dangerous to our further advance. Returning to our lines he took out a patrol with him and drove the enemy off. The record shows that he killed eight of the enemy.

One Holds Up Thirty-Five

Were it not that these and many similar incidents are vouched for by witnesses they might be regarded as a manuscript continuation of the adventures of the "Three Musketeers," some of whose deeds Dumas staged in this very district.

Among those whose bravery was so conspicuous as to warrant bringing it to the attention of the authorities is a machine gunner who, after the members of his gun crew were killed, operated the gun alone. A party of thirty-five of the enemy tried to rush his gun, which occupied an advance post. Had they done so they might have turned back the attack. The lone gunner swept away the last of the group at a distance of fifteen yards.

With Broken Arm

From his position a signaller sorely wounded, continued to perform his duties till the close of the action, and when the telephone lines were destroyed carried messages over the shell-torn ground, though among his injuries was an unset broken arm.

A major, when the other officers of his battalion had been killed or wounded, handled it alone, and sent back a report to battalion headquarters. The fighting on both sides was vicious.

These are but a few of the incidents of which a volume might be filled and more come to light daily. On Wednesday of this week a search party found the bodies of two gallant officers who, on the first day of the battle, had penetrated far into what were then the enemy lines on a scouting expedition and lost their lives.

Baby's Own Tablets Used Ten Years

Mrs. W. J. Wilson, Carp, Ont., writes: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for these last ten years and can highly recommend them for babyhood and childhood ailments. My baby boy was very delicate; in fact we never thought he would live but thanks to the Tablets he is now a fine healthy boy." Baby's Own Tablets should be kept in every home where there are small children. They regulate the bowels and stomach and never fail to cure the minor ills of the little ones. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Our Nation's Destiny.

"Canada's Place in World Politics After the War" was the subject of an address by Rev. Dr. Eaton of Madison Avenue Baptist Church, New York, and President of the Canadian Association in that city, at the Empire Club of Toronto recently. The war had revealed three great facts in relation to the history of mankind. The first was the tendency towards democracy — the spiritual unity and equality of men, which he was glad to see had been recognized in Ontario by the extension of equal rights to women. The second was, that freedom was worth all it cost in blood and treasure. The great majority of the people of British breed would rather die than live slaves. The third great principle is that the soul is the man, and the soul is the nation. These are the great mountain peaks of human consciousness revealed by the war. Canada is on the wild and stormy sea of universal relationships. The Dominion has become a world power, and must order its future domestic institutions in the light of these international relations. Henceforth Canadians must be world-citizens, and exert their utmost force to advance the principles of justice, truth, and right. Canada will exert tremendous influence on world politics by means of her connection with the British Empire. You cannot have a nation except through the travail and pain of sacrifice. The pacifist is at fault in believing that power in life can be had without sacrifice. That is where he is at fault.

The speaker believed that Canada was as fine a specimen of democracy as the world contains, and the most successful experiment in the federal idea; and her destiny as a world servant in world politics will be along the line of applying the federal principle which she has worked out successfully under the most difficult circumstances for fifty years. Canada must profit by the mistakes of the neighboring republic. It would be an unmitigated calamity to fill this country after the war with alien immigrants. The speaker hoped Canada would have no one but Canadians in it; hence no one but men attuned with the soul of all Canada should be allowed to become part of this nation. Otherwise, when the people think they are a nation they will discover they are a house divided against itself, which cannot stand.

Woman Explorer Dead.

The death has just taken place in Toronto of Mrs. Agnes McDonald, widow of the late Colonel W. McDonald, formerly Gold Commissioner in the Transvaal. The deceased lady was in South Africa in the early days of gold discovery, and had many exciting experiences as an explorer at a time when white women were few and far between. On one occasion she had a very narrow escape from the [illegible] tribe when they were at war with the Boers, and the name she adopted as a writer, "Cas-Hamba," was given her by the natives, the words meaning, swift queen.

For many years Mrs. McDonald lived in the mining regions of Australia, both in Victoria, New South Wales, and West Australia. She was a prolific writer on mining and sociological subjects, and was one of the earliest champions of the women's suffrage cause in the continent "down under."

A Large Province.

British Columbia's area is 395,000 square miles, or 10 per cent. of Canada's total area, and is larger than the British Isles, Denmark, Switzerland, and Italy combined. It is equal to 24 Switzerlands, with 200,000 square miles of mountains (Switzerland, 16,000), and has 7,000 miles of coast line.

SMALL MILLINERY.

How to Make a Little Girl's Spring Hat.

What is prettier than the mushroom shape for a little girl's hat? Not only can it be easily made by the unskilled mother, but it will be assured a second and even a third season, for the mushroom never goes out of style in juvenile millinery.

No matter how clever you are with the needle, it is always the best plan to buy the shape in the shop, then cover it with the same material used for the little girl's coat.

To begin covering cut a straight piece of goods wide enough to cover both top and bottom of the brim and long enough to go around the lower and larger edge. Allow several inches on both dimensions.

Sew the ends together on the wrong side, run white basting line through the center (use silk thread if the material is silk or velvet), then turn in the top edge on the wrong side and gather with tiny stitches until you have made it tight enough to fit snugly around the base of the crown. Sew it there after adjusting the gathers.

The basting line should be on the edge all round, when you finish the under side of the brim, by turning in the raw edge and sewing it well up into the crown, gathering if necessary.

The top of the crown is covered by a circular piece of the goods, no care being taken of the finish, as it will be hidden. Next a bias piece of material is cut long enough to exactly fit the sides of the crown as a band after the slanting ends have been joined. This is generally finished before being sewed on the crown, either by stitching or cording.

If the little girl's coat is velvet use corduroy of the same shade. It is more serviceable, and the stripes give the appearance of accordion plaiting without its perishability. The same idea can be carried out in silk by using material with a corded weave.

The trimming should be extremely simple. A silk cord, with tassels, tied on one side, or one of the new crocheted chain cords ending in balls covered with the coat's material makes a good finish.

Cleaning Hints.

Few housewives enjoy cleaning wall paper, but it is a task that can be made easy and the work done with good results.

Surface dust may be removed with a cloth, a long handled brush or a broom covered with a canton flannel bag. Take only downward strokes in going over the wall.

In giving a thorough cleaning a cheesecloth bag filled with warm bran or pieces of stale bread may be used. A very stiff flour and water dough may be rubbed over the paper, turning so that a fresh surface is always ready for the paper.

Grease spots that do not yield to this treatment are removed by applying fuller's earth with a soft cloth, rubbing well. Brush off after a few hours and repeat if necessary.

Fillet Lace Trimming.

New blouses show filet lace used extensively as trimming. This fashion began in November, but was not widely taken up until the present month. The usual form the filet lace takes is a wide turnover collar, extending into a broad panel that runs to the waist in front, and deep cuffs that fit the wrists and are fastened with small lace buttons. Although the lace is sometimes put on handkerchief linen blouses, the most fashionable combination is with crepe de chine and georgette crape.

HER SPORT HAT.

Paisley Holds Its Own For All Spring Styles.

Russian shapes still dominate the new outlines. This tall crown of blue milan straw is tailored with Paisley satin, two bandings of the straw circling the middle crown. They are held by two interesting buttons, Roman coins stamped with real warriors.

TALL AS SMART.

Oriental Influence.

A toll has been levied on things Chinese. They are unusual and not a little becoming. Among the Chinese novelties are tasseled hatpins, which are delightful. For those who prefer stones there are all sorts in jade, amber and other substances. Vivid flowers such as nature never produced—really brilliant ones—are another feature of dress today. The substance composing them is left to the discretion of the milliner, but scraps of felt, odd bits of leather, wools and even the homely red flannel are all employed, outlined, it may be, with an edging of wool or silk in a contrasting shade worked in blanket stitch. Another idea of hat decoration is wool work in cross stitch motifs, with a few glass beads to give an additional decorative touch, and the latest notion is luminous hatpins and medallions.

Homemade Hanger.

A handy clothes hanger for children can be made of a broom handle. Make a cross of two pieces of wood fourteen inches long, three inches wide and one or one-half inch thick for a standard. Fasten together, bore a hole in the center and insert the handle. Screw half a dozen hooks in the handle, paint or enamel any desired shade, and the hanger is finished. Small children will enjoy hanging their dresses on this hanger, thus teaching them to be neat and tidy.

Some Difference.

"How is it that Smith seems to be rolling in money? I understood from friends of his that he had got into a hole."

"So he did, but it was an oil well."

Was He One?

Mr. Meeks—I understand not a microbe exists in mountain air about the height of 2,000 feet.

Mrs. Meeks—Of course. Why, you couldn't exist at that altitude, John.

A Luxury.

"But," objected the heiress, "I have been accustomed to every luxury."

"That's all the more reason why you should marry me," replied the impecunious suitor. "I'm a luxury myself."

How They Do It.

In a hotel in a certain city is the following notice:

"Boarders are taken by the day, week or month. Those who do not pay promptly are taken by the neck."

Ice Clan and Sun Clan.

HUN INFLUENCE IN RUSSIA.

Responsible for Intrigue and Assassination for Many Years.

Prussomania has been a disturbing factor in Russia for many years, and has been the continuing cause of revolution, intrigue, abdications, assassinations and the perpetuation of factions within the empire that in the present day have brought about the fall of the greatest absolutism in history.

Two Tsars, Peter III. and his son, Paul I., owed their death by assassination largely to the resentment of the Russians at the Prussian influence. Alexander II. also forfeited his life to that malign influence.

The history of the Tsars is a long record of stormy regimes and intrigues within the imperial court probably without parallel in the history of any other dynasty. It is replete with abdications and removals of emperors by violent deaths, but the first tremendous struggle of Russian sentiment against the Prussian influence culminating in the present revolution, may be said to have begun with the death in June, 1762, of Peter III., who was the husband of Catherine II.

The Ides of March thereafter were days to be well remembered by the Romanoffs, self-asserted successors to the line of Byzantine Caesars, for it was on March 23, 1801, that Paul I. died by the hands of assassins, and March 13, 1881, that Alexander II., after four attempts on his life, finally fell a victim to a Nihilist's bomb. The recent revolution is the latest example of the fateful March days in the fortunes of the Romanoffs.

Since 1605, when Dimitri was assassinated in Moscow, four other Tsars have fallen victims to assassins. They were Peter III., in June, 1762; Ivan VI., in 1764; Paul I., March 23, 1801, and Alexander II., March 13, 1881.

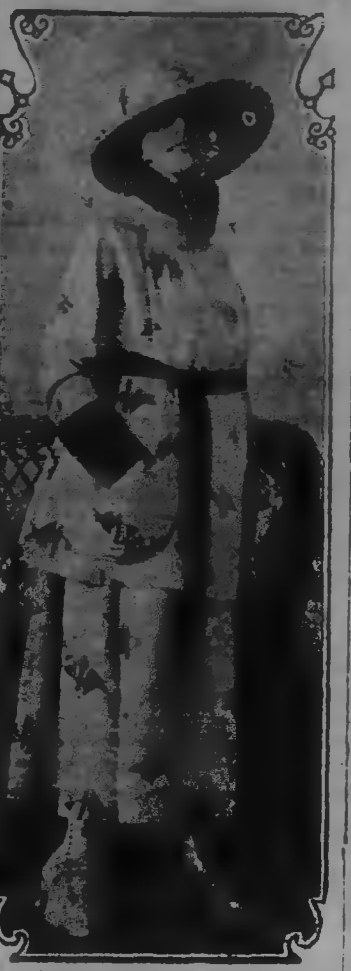
OFF FOR THE SOUTH.

The Newest Kind of Suit Is This Silk Model.



THE CHIC ONE.

Figured tussore will be all the rage this spring. The body of this pictured is deep cream color with odd figures in terra cotta contrasted with a Chinese blue. Terra cotta velvet gives the smart rumpled collar, strapped cuffs and stringy belt. Please note the round yoke on the coat.

BEAUTIFUL TEETH.

A Hygiene Note For Mothers of Small Babes.

Good milk will make good teeth, for it makes teeth for calves. Good meat will, for it makes them for young lions and wolves. Good vegetables, nuts and fruits will, for it makes them for monkeys. Good corn, oats, barley, wheat, rye, and indeed everything that grows, will make good teeth if taken in their natural state, no elements being taken out, for every one of them makes good teeth for horses and cows.

But starches and sugars and lard and adulterated foods will not make good teeth, therefore a wise mother will keep from very young children pastry, white bread, cakes and tea and will give them instead good milk, whole wheat bread, cereals, meat, eggs, ripe fruit, vegetables and nuts and will do well to see that these helps are given them early enough.

Every mother should remember that the duty of giving her child useful and strong teeth devolves upon her.

Some Wedding Ways.

Goodby to the plain gold band, at least for awhile. The really smart bride now wears a band of platinum set close with diamonds or merely a plain band of chased or filigree platinum. Hoops of platinum set with one kind of gems—rubies, emeralds, sapphires, as the case may be—are surely unusual as the symbol of "the tie that binds." Green gold, the latest metal fad in jewelry, is fashioned in plain chased bands for the same dignified purpose.

It is something of a change to have the bridesmaids garbed with short veils instead of hats or bonnets. The custom is a pretty one when properly carried out. The veil may be a square of hemstitched chiffon, bound pointwise on the head with a circlet of pearl beads or a band of metal ribbon.

Hot Water Bags.

A few precautions taken with a new hot water bag and continued throughout its life will greatly prolong its days of usefulness. To begin with, buy the bag from a reliable dealer. Most bags are guaranteed and are replaced with new ones if there is any defect. These guarantees, of course, are not good if you treat the bag harshly. But as soon as you get a new bag home fill it with hot water, screw in the top and look it over carefully to see that there is no leak and no other visible imperfection. If there is none and if the bag is of good quality it is your own fault if you cannot tear up the guarantee as not needed.

Grape Sponge.

Soften one tablespoonful of granulated gelatin in one-fourth cupful of cold water, then dissolve over boiling water. Bring one cupful of grape juice to the boiling point, add three-fourths cupful of sugar, the dissolved gelatin, the juice of one lemon and strain. Stir occasionally until beginning to thicken, then add gradually the stiffly beaten whites of three eggs and beat until stiff enough to hold its shape. Turn into a wet mold, place on ice until firm and serve with whipped cream or soft boiled custard.

Had the Wrong Music.

A national anthem, it would seem, is the cause of trouble in more than one country in the world. The other day the King of Roumania was visiting the troops near Boulogne, and it was decided by the British that the only fitting thing for them to do was to welcome him with his own national anthem. For a long time no shop in Boulogne would yield up this piece of music, but at last the true anthem was discovered, guaranteed by the seller, and duly practiced by the British military bands in the town. On the day the king appeared on the parade ground he was, accordingly, greeted with the strains of his own national anthem, whilst the British soldiers presented arms. The officers of the French troops, higher up the line, looked down with some astonishment at what was happening. The king's A.D.C., seeing the British soldiers presenting arms, hastily saluted. Then the King himself, noticing all the commotion, gravely saluted too. It was this that gave the whole show away, for a king never salutes his own national anthem. The organizers of the scene were left with the sad conviction that they had been playing a national anthem to the king which he was hearing for the first time.

Subs Grow More Deadly.

A torpedo device for submarines, which is said to give the underwater craft the ability to fire at their mark without ever showing their periscopes, has been invented and patented by Simon Lake. The new invention is in the form of a superstructure swivelled to turn at a range of nearly forty-five degrees. The torpedoes are loaded in tubes in the body of the submarine and then raised into the superstructure to fire. The new method is designed also to eliminate the necessity of manoeuvring to take aim, as submarines with built-in tubes are compelled to do.

The Lily Family.

In the great lily family of 200 generations and 2,000 species, the chief division is allium, or the onion group. There are 250 species, not all of which are edible. In the same family are 200 species of smilax and 100 species of asparagus.

Galician Villages.

The villages of Galicia are especially interesting on Sundays and holidays, when the national costumes are donned. The cottages are generally made of stone or boards plastered over, and are then covered with a coat of whitewash. The straw roof is frequently crowned with green-growing moss, which adds to its picturesque appearance, if not to its healthfulness. Water is drawn from the wells by a long pole balanced near the centre. These wells have a decided old-world appearance. The interior of the cottages is usually divided into two rooms. In one room the entire family live, eat, and sleep; in the other, in more or less harmonious contentment, dwell the cows, pigs, chickens, and geese. No household would be complete without a number of geese. Around the cottages a number of children are sure to be seen playing. A dozen or twenty or thirty of such cottages, each separated only by a small yard, make up a village.

The Parrot's Opinion.

Mrs. Boodle was proud of her parrot, a wise and wily old bird; but she was prouder still of the new gramophone when it arrived. Thinking to give the parrot a surprise, she started the instrument off with "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep," Mr. Boodle's favorite "warble." At the very first note Polly opened her eyes in surprise and then flew to her perch, where she rocked herself to and fro in deep and speechless astonishment, while the machine ground out the air. "There, Polly!" said Mrs. Boodle, when the song had come to an end. "What do you think of that?" "My word!" shrieked the old bird, her head on one side and winking wickedly, "my word, my word, my word! You've got the old man boxed up this time, and no mistake."

AUTOINTOXICATION OR SELF-POISONING

The Dangerous Condition Which Produces Many Well Known Diseases.

HOW TO GUARD AGAINST THIS TROUBLE

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" — The Wonderful Fruit Medicine — will Protect You

Autointoxication means self-poisoning, caused by continuous or partial constipation, or insufficient action of the bowels.

Instead of the refuse matter passing daily from the body, it is absorbed by the blood. As a result, the Kidneys and Skin are overworked, in their efforts to rid the blood of this poisoning.

Poisoning of the blood in this way often causes Indigestion, Loss of Appetite and Disturbed Stomach. It may produce Headaches and Sleeplessness. It may irritate the Kidneys and bring on Pain in the Back, Rheumatism, Gout, and Rheumatic Pains. It is the chief cause of Eczema — and keeps the whole system unhealthy by the constant absorption into the blood of this refuse matter.

"Fruit-a-tives" will always cure Autointoxication or self-poisoning — as "Fruit-a-tives" acts gently on bowels, kidneys and skin, strengthens the bowels and tones up the nervous system.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

EMBROIDERY CRETONNES.

How to Make Attractive Spreads by the Art of Applique.

Simple work for busy hands seems to be in demand just at present. Appliqued patch embroidery is simple and is made quickly.

To make centerpieces, cushion tops, scarfs, tidies or chair backs, clothes bags, etc., plain linen or silk is needed, preferably linen.

Circles of applique are cut from cretonne. The design should be a large single flower or small spray in order to cut three inch circles. The circles are basted to the cloth and stitched on by machine close to the edge. Chain stitch around each circle with coarse thread, then run through with a white thread in what is called the blanket stitch, or whip it straight along the last row of stitches, catching it over and over. The white rolls in with the black and is very pretty. A scroll is drawn in by cutting out a figure which looks well and then tracing it off on the cloth.

In a centerpiece six medallions are used, three in a pillow, three in each end of a scarf and three in a chair back. To finish the edge outline it as the medallions were outlined. Dots, which are often placed in the center of the scrollwork, are made of black in the satin stitch.

Fashion's Creed.

It appears that the prevailing creed in fashion is that a woman must not think of going in her shirt sleeves any more than a man would think of doing it. She wears a wash blouse beneath the jacket for purposes of cleanliness, but not publicity. So farreaching is this creed that the medieval tunic which extends only to the hip line and is fastened to the shoulder or slips over the head is worn over a blouse with a cloth skirt even in the house.

Probably the best thing to remember in buying clothes now is that the figure must be straightened out, in the medieval manner, from bust to hips. You can choose your own way of doing it, whether by a deep girdle, by the straight lines of the fabric or by a belt of suede or leather that conceals any inward curve beneath the arms toward the waist.

For Stout Women.

Becoming to the stout woman are tunics of plaited Georgette crape weighted at the edge with a band of velvet and drawn in loosely at the waist line with a knotted or buckled sash. The plaited Georgette hangs in graceful lines, and such a tunic is flattering to the figure, disguising embonpoint more successfully than a fitted tailored frock of cloth material. The skirt may be of velvet, cloth or silk, and the band at the tunic edge should be of similar material, the cuffs also to give continuity of the costume.

Sash an Important Thing.

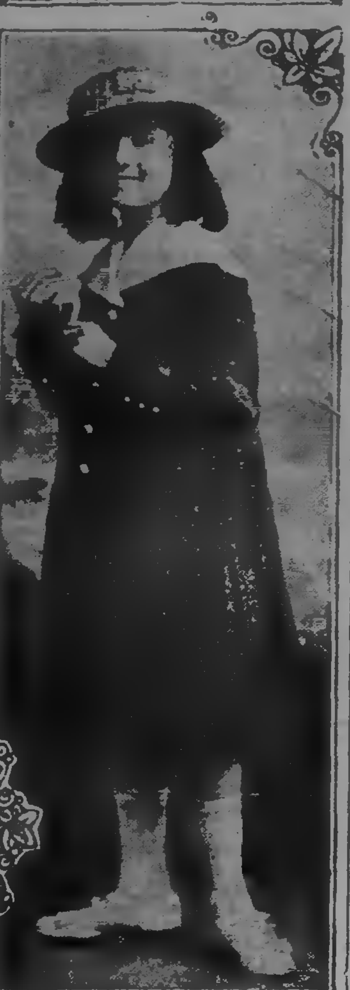
All the French gowns are showing that the girdle or the sash will be an important feature of the spring fashions. There is no attempt to define the waist line by any kind of belt, but it is swathed in oriental fashion with soft and stiff belts, with Chinese embroidery, with Russian handwork, including threads of old silver and colored crystals and with broad pieces of satin which are cross stitched with silver and gold thread, and on these jersey blouses there are sashes in broad peppermint candy striping.

A Dragon Blouse.

A novelty in a dressy blouse shows the Chinese influence in two wild eyed dragons which are embroidered at each side of the front. In back there is a pointed collar, a kind of variation of the capuchin hood.

THE NEWEST.

Topcoat For the Small Girl Who Sheds Her Old One.



DELIGHTED WITH IT.

Serviceable navy blue gaberdine affords daughter this smart spring coat, cut with a kilt skirt and double breasted front. Natty white and blue buttons add almost as much trimming as does the white cloth collar all picoted around the edge.

Shirkers in Khaki.

Next to the men who have made great profits out of the war and apparently done nothing in the conflict, those most criticized by the general Canadian public are the wearers of khaki who draw officer's salaries and never go to the front. A good deal is said about them in private, especially when they become recruiting officers, but the first man to tackle them in public was Rev. W. E. Millson, a Methodist clergyman of St. Thomas. Recently the minister, speaking to a Sunday evening congregation, hotly berated officers who go overseas, but do not reach the front, and stated that he had heard one in particular speak at a recruiting meeting of the yellow streak up the backs of young men who do not enlist. He declared that that young officer had the most offensive streak of yellow. The result of this sermon was a hot altercation between Mr. Millson and a major of an overseas battalion, and this caused the affair to become public. The matter of officers who have not been to the front calling civilians "yellow" is one that the newspapers have not taken up at great length, and speeches can hardly be made about it. For that reason the St. Thomas clergyman is attracting considerable attention. It was timely in view of the current rumor that one major who only got as far as England intends to come back to Canada for the purpose of conducting a recruiting campaign and urging young men to go to France as privates.

NECK FIXINGS.

Gay Colors and Collarless Effects the Thing.

Just when it seemed that the white collar had become an obsolete feature of dresses it shows evidence of reviving, and it may be said that the broad collar of satin or of lingerie fabrics will be one of the principal attractions of incoming fashions.

As things are at the present moment many women look as if they had dressed in a hurry and omitted the important item of neckwear. The French designer who brought out the collarless frock had in mind the eternally young and piquant type of girl. As this type is limited, despite all efforts to the contrary, it follows that only the favored few look well dressed in the gown sans collar.

There is something rather commendable in the dress that exploits a neck finish of a gay color. It is in keeping with the trend of fashion that emphasizes everything connected with sport wear, whether the garment in question has anything to do with athletic life or otherwise.

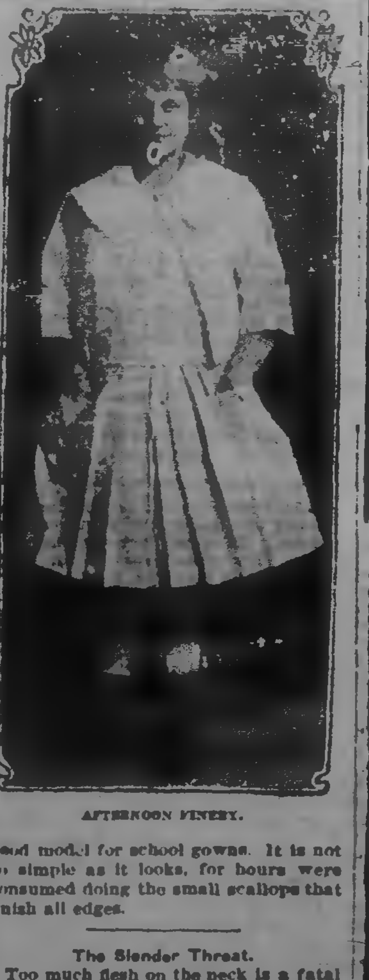
Some of the color combinations are decidedly startling. One finds green associated with purple, and yellow with old rose, and turquoise with pink. Usually the collar is of satin, and this in itself supplies a decorative note when the dress is of wool jersey, serge or similar fabric.

Frequently it happens that the color of the collar is repeated in the facing of the sash. A recent model shows a collar whose front lines are extended to give a four-in-hand effect. The front of the bodice shows two slashes, and through these the ends of the cravat are passed.

FOR TEN-YEAR-OLDS.

Serviceable Frock That Is Also Smart Style.

Flesh colored linen cut kilt skirt, wide belt, bolero and patch pockets, always a childish delight, give this good model for school gowns. It is not so simple as it looks, for hours were consumed doing the small scallops that finish all edges.



AFTERNOON FINERY.

The Slender Throat.

Too much flesh on the neck is a fatal bar to beauty. It is far simpler to put flesh on a woman's throat than to take it off, for if the tissues are fed with a good skin food, such as cocoa butter, the neck will soon begin to round out. On the other hand, only exercise of the most vigorous sort will reduce the size of the throat. For a tendency to a double chin and to tighten the muscles which have become loosened, try this simple exercise: Throw the head back as far as it will go, drawing the muscles tight. Now turn the head slowly as far to the right as you can and then to the left. Repeat ten times, increasing as you become accustomed to the strain. Massaging the neck with a piece of ice is excellent for keeping the flesh firm.

BEHIND CLOSED DOORS.

In Secrecy and Dread the Daring Deed Was Done.

He carefully locked the door behind him. No one should see him do the dreadful deed. He could no longer stand the smiles and jeers of his friends.

It was true he had met all their remarks with a smile and a laugh, but it hurt him none the less.

Even his own particular friend had turned against him, and this was the last straw. He would end it all.

He had been trying for many weeks to summon up his courage, but at the last moment it had failed him. Today he was determined. He had carefully made all preparations, no one should see, no one would know the scene that was being enacted behind the closed door.

What if he failed? Perish the thought, he must not fail! What was that—a footstep? But it passed on, and all was quiet again.

Then light came in through the window, and he pulled the blind down. No prying eyes should see him. Now he braced himself together, and, with resolution and determination depicted on his countenance, he stepped forward and took up the deadly weapon.

To make assurance doubly sure he sharpened it until it had the keenness of a razor. With a fearful glance around and with uplifted arm he began the ghastly deed.

Blood! Eugh! His hand trembled! Never mind, he would not fail. The seconds crept slowly on and passed into minutes.

At last the deed was done!
He had had his first shave!

Stops that Pain in the Back

Pain in the back is one of the most common symptoms of Kidney trouble. Every movement becomes a torture, and if neglected, the disorder finally confines the sufferer to bed.

This is exactly what happened in the case of Mr. Arnold McAskell, of Hants County, Nova Scotia. He sought in vain for relief until he decided to try

GIN PILLS FOR THE KIDNEYS

Before he had used one box he began to feel better. Two boxes entirely relieved him. And best of all, up to the time he wrote us, he had had no further sign of the trouble. Mr. McAskell concludes his letter of gratitude by saying, "I cannot say too much in favor of these great pills and would recommend them to anyone suffering from Kidney trouble."

Kidney or Bladder trouble may also take the form of swollen joints, rheumatism, Lumbago, gravel, irregularity of urinary system or constant headaches. Don't neglect these symptoms. Take Gin Pills in time and escape worse ills.

All dealers sell Gin Pills at 50c. a box, or 6 boxes for $2.50. Or sample will be sent free upon request to

LORD SHAUGHNESSY TO AID "BACK TO THE LAND"

Some Details of the Thousand Ready-Made Homes for the Soldiers Who Will Undertake to Cultivate the Land.

WHAT is to become of the soldiers after the European war? What will be the nature of the work of readjustment in the many war-ridden countries? There promises to be a greater problem than the rebuilding of cities from ashes. It is the work of human readjustment that will be the tremendous undertaking. Many a man of former sedentary occupation will have become completely unsettled by trench life. Every Government is faced with the vast responsibility of this problem.

Lord Shaughnessy, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, bids the ex-soldiers go "back to the land." He offers a practical scheme for putting them on farms. He offers to take care of 1,000 veterans. Lord Shaughnessy is giving 1,000 ready-made farms to returning soldiers. Each farm comprises 100 acres, and each is to be part of a small colony, and the locations of the various colonies will depend upon the agricultural possibilities of the land in various designated sections. Several colonies will be located in Alberta. Several colonies rated in Alberta. As a result of the completion of the Bassano irrigation system, the largest of its kind in the Western Hemisphere, 3,000,000 acres of farm lands have been made available for settlers, so that this vast area offers unlimited possibilities. Many of the "ready-made farms" will be in shape for occupation this spring, as work upon them has started and is well under way.

Canadian soldiers will be returning from the war by the thousands before long. Some will be penniless and without homes. With them will come others intent upon starting life anew. Colonization on small farms is the hope of these veterans. But [illegible] mistake of [illegible] drawbacks to colonizing [illegible] been the first [illegible] started. Where to get the money to build a house and barn and dig a well? These first difficulties have often broken the enthusiasm of hopeful settlers.

The new plan overcomes the old difficulties. Its purpose is to help the settler when he needs the help most—at the start. As a matter of fact the plan is not new. It has been thoroughly tried out and found to work. Under the plan a soldier settler will be given a comfortable house of four or five rooms, a barn large enough to house eight or ten head of stock, a well all dug with a pump installed, wire fences stretched and in place, and land ready for cultivation. The veteran settler will probably find some of his land sown to wheat, oats, and barley when he arrives. In short, the settler will find the pioneering work all done. He steps into a farm that is ready to bring in a living. All that is required of the settler is hard work. It is up to him to keep his farm going.

This great plan represents the expenditure of $3,500,000 for preparations alone. It means the building of 1,000 houses and 1,000 barns, 1,200 miles of fence, digging 1,000 wells and getting some 50,000 acres of land under cultivation. It is estimated that 20,000,000 feet of lumber will be required for the buildings.

Each returned veteran colony will be a little city in itself. Perhaps it will be the nucleus of a future metropolis. Some will be located in districts already thickly settled, others will be in more isolated sections. In either case there will be plenty of social activities, schools, and churches. The settler will know none of the loneliness that was the part of the early pioneer. Such are the plans of this unusual scheme as they have been worked out so far.

One thousand [illegible] cannot go very far among the many, many thousands of returning soldiers. They are not expected to go far. The great value of the project lies in the fact that it is a constructive program. It points a way. The example is so practicable and of such manifest sincerity that it is sure to be followed upon a vaster scale by other parts of the British Empire.

The career of Lord Shaughnessy, the man responsible for this constructive piece of work offers a fund of romance. It is the story of a Milwaukee boy coming to Canada, and becoming a Canadian citizen; then later an empire builder, the head of the Canadian Pacific system and a baron.

Shaughnessy had a good job with the well-organized and efficiently run Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, when he was offered the position of purchasing agent by Sir William Van Horne, who was at that time at the head of the Canadian Pacific. The Canadian Pacific of those days was in a formative state, and was a chain of many loose links. Probably Shaughnessy was attracted by these loose links. Constructive work rather than money has always allured him. He looked several years ahead. He accepted Van Horne's offer.

Promotion came rapidly to Shaughnessy. Within two years he was made assistant to the general manager. From one office to another he climbed, until he became president of the Canadian Pacific system.

Surprised.

GOOD MR. BOWSER

Comes Home From Business in a Happy Frame of Mind.

MR. BOWSER had come home with a good streak on. All husbands get them at intervals, and most wives know how dangerous they are. Husbands get to thinking things over in the intervals of business and come to the conclusion that it is time to make a change for the better in their conduct, and they come home with a more or less angelic look on their faces and take their wives by surprise. Mr. Bowser's look on this occasion was soft and ripe and balmy. He even halted on the front steps to speak a sympathetic word to the cat and to reply in gentle tones to a watermelon man. Even before he had hung up his hat he gave Mrs. Bowser a kiss and observed:

"Well, dear, I hope you haven't been lonesome today. I tried to telephone you about 3 o'clock, but the wires were crossed. I am home ten minutes ahead of the usual time."

"And it's nice of you," replied Mrs. Bowser, though she glanced at him keenly and doubtfully.

She had experienced all of Mr. Bowser's moods, and she was always prepared for either the angelic or desperate. Even when he put his arm around her to go down to dinner she didn't lose her self possession. The cook had had trouble with the stove, and the grocer and butcher had been late, and the dinner deserved no praise whatever. As a matter of fact, it was expected that Mr. Bowser would raise a great kick over it and threaten to go looking for a boarding house. But there wasn't the hint of a kick. On the contrary, the human angel looked the table over with a bland smile and remarked that he felt sorry for the people who had to eat at Sherry's and Delmonico's. His unexpected words so flustrated the cook that she cut her thumb to the bone and broke a platter. When dinner was over and the diners had gone up to the family room Mr. Bowser lighted a cigar and puffed at it a few times and said:

MR. BOWSER HAD REMOVED A MILLION MATTRESSES IN HIS TIME.

"If there is anything more pleasant than this I would like to see it. My pity goes out to the man without a home."

"I am glad you like your home," replied Mrs. Bowser, though at the same time she found herself wondering if his streak would hold out through the evening.

"Of course I like my home and all that makes it a home. The main thing is my little wifey wife, and I feel like giving her a big kiss for being the woman she is. Mrs. Bowser, if you were to die or go away from me I wouldn't care to live another day, honest Injun. I wouldn't. Won't you give your old hubby a hug?"

She blushed and looked shy and performed the hugging act, and after a moment the penitent husband continued.

"I was thinking things over today. I'm an old kicker and I know it, and I want you to forgive me. Nobody but a wretch would shout at you as I do at times. When I do you ought to hire a man to boot me around the block."

"But I have no fault to find with you, dear. All of us get out of temper at times."

As to Excuses.

"It is lovely of you to make excuses for me, and you hear me say that if I ever act up again I hope the town will turn out and ride me on a rail. Is there any work I can do around the house this evening?"

"N-o-o, I hardly think so. I wanted a bedstead taken down and put in the storeroom, but the man who comes up to whitewash the cellar can do that."

"But what's the matter with me doing it? I haven't anything to occupy me during the next half hour. I can save at least $2, and I'll give the money to you. I'll twist that old bedstead off her feet in no time at all."

"You are real good, Mr. Bowser, but it's hard work taking down a bedstead, and if you get mad you'll—you'll"—

"You mean I'll be sure to get mad and blame you, eh?"

"Y-es."

"Never made a bigger mistake in your life, my dear. I've reformed in those things, and I want you to believe it. Get mad at an old bedstead. Blame my wifey! What put such an absurd notion into your head?"

"I—I thought you might. Shan't we let the whitewash man do it?"

"Pish! Nonsense! I feel just like wrestling with something heavy, and I'll have that bedstead down before you can count a hundred. Blame you! Why, you don't know your old hubby yet. He has taken down over a million bedsteads in his life and never lost his temper."

And he whistled a merry air as he took off his coat and cuffs and started upstairs. The bedclothing had been removed, and the bedstead stood there in a bedroom in innocent attitude. To look at it the most astute could not have suspected it of breaking up happy homes. The first thing to be done was to remove the mattress. It does not require any great art to flop one off a bed. A farmer's hired man can do it after one or two lessons. Mr. Bowser had removed a million mattresses in his time, and he suddenly seized this one by the roots and gave it a flop and a twist, and it was on the floor.

"The idea of the whitewash man fooling around here!" he said as he pushed up his sleeves and reached out for the springs. "And the idea of my getting mad about"—

The end slats fell down, and the springs made a sudden drop, and the start he gave brought Mr. Bowser's shins against something hard. It was not a railroad sandwich. He had already begun a speech when Mrs. Bowser appeared in the door and queried:

"How are you getting along, dear?"

"Beautifully, and you can't help me any," he replied as the red on his face spread clear back to his collar button.

She retreated, and he spat on his hands and surveyed the springs from six different directions. It finally and suddenly occurred to him to drop the other slats and let the enemy fall through to the floor, and he was rubbing his hands over his success when Mrs. Bowser looked in again.

"Heard the crash, eh? Just a little scheme of my own. I think I can give some of the furniture men a pointer or two on handling bed springs. There is a right way and a wrong way, the same as in handling a balky mule."

His First Move.

It was a wooden bedstead. A brass bedstead is a passive piece of machinery; a wooden one is ever maliciously aggressive. Mr. Bowser's first move toward taking it down, after hauling the springs aside, was to stand off and give the footboard a tremendous kick. The intention was simply to give the piece of furniture a strong hint, but it went beyond that. The bedstead fell apart and two-thirds of it jumped for the kicker and flattened him to the floor. When Mrs. Bowser came running his face was the color of chloride of lime, his ears were working back and forth, and she was greeted with:

"Woman, you knew how this thing would result, and yet you wrung me in! Behold a wrecked man! Behold a human ruin!"

"Why, dear, I warned you at the outset. I told you we had best leave it to the whitewash man, but you insisted."

"Never! Never! You had the thing all planned before I got home. If you want to murder me, and it seems that you do, why not chop me up in my sleep?"

"How can you talk so? I don't believe you started in the right way. What did you do to the bedstead first?"

"Never you mind that. I've got my eyes open at last, and no further words are necessary. Go down to the telephone and call up your mother and tell her you are packing your trunks and will be there on the forenoon train."

"And you—you"—

"Never mind me. If I can manage [illegible] down to the lib[illegible] awhile I'll put all my legal papers in order so that our lawyers can look them over. Leave me, madam, to perish or recover, and good night to you—good night!"

Soon as warm nights arrive this fetching substitute for velvets and furs will delight dancing maidens. A long chiffon scarf with deep borders of metal cloth is the idea, and in this case the color is old gold hemstitched on to a maize chiffon. Any becoming colors may be had.

Never Touched Him.

"Yes," said the amateur fisherman, "I caught a three pound trout yesterday, and while at the end of my line in midair it was seized by a hawk and carried off."

"You're all right," rejoined the village grocer. "Such a trifle as fixing the weight of a fish before it is landed can't impair your standing in the Ananias club."—Chicago News.

BAKERS BOOST BREAD TO 18 CENTS FOR LARGE LOAF

Grocers Refuse to Handle it at That Figure as Price to Them is Raised to 16 Cents---Further Increase Likely as a Result.

The high cost of living became more acute than ever this morning when the bakers gave notice that the price of a large loaf of bread had been increased from 16 to 18 cents. One result of the boost will be that the members of the Retail Grocers' Association will refuse to handle bread, and the bakers will be obliged to deliver directly to the consumers. This will mean extra outlay on the part of the bakers, so that on one need be surprised if the price of bread is raised again in the near future.

Mr. S. H. Mitchell, president of the Grocers' Association, says that when bread sold for eight or more cents a loaf the grocers were allowed two cents for handling it. Now that the price has gone to 18 cents the bakers refuse to allow the grocers any more than the old rate of profit, which is 11 per cent. Mr. Mitchell says that it is imposable for the retail dealers to work under such an arrangement otherwise than at a loss. They have handled bread for the accommodation of their customers rather than for any money there was in the business.

It takes considerable twine and a large sheet of paper to wrap up a large loaf of bread. The price of the paper has gone up from three to ten cents a pound and that of twine from 11 to 64 cents. Bread is a bulky article and takes up much valuable space on counters and in delivery wagons. The grocer must pay the baker cash for his bread on delivery. He often sells it on credit and sometimes loses the price of it when a customer defaults in the matter of settling his account.

Some of the grocers refused to take bread from the bakers this morning. The new price was sprung on them as a surprise, and several of the dealers had laid in their usual weekly supply before they learned of the new conditions. It is expected that tomorrow morning all the dealers will be in line and refuse to handle bread.

The grocers say it is not fair to expect them to spend 16 cents now in order to make a profit of two cents, when the same margin was possible a short time ago with a lesser outlay. They are convinced that the bakers cannot supply the public with their present delivery equipment. If they put on more horses and rigs it will be necessary to raise the price again in order to make the business pay.

The Bakers' Side of It.

Mr. T. H. Hooper gave the bakers' side of the controversy to The Review this morning. He declared that the grocers have no facilities for handling bread. Bakers have nothing to gain by retailers acting as middlemen, and are undisturbed by the action decided upon by the latter.

GARDEN CLUB MOVEMENT

List of Lots in City and Vicinity That May Be Used for Growing of Vegetables.

Following are lists of lots available for use, including those of which consent of owners has been obtained, and a second list of lots quite suitable but those desiring to make use of will have to see and arrange with owners.

The name and address of the owner is given. As near as may be the positions of lots has been defined in a general way so that the location may be recognised. Formal entry on plans, as registered, does not afford the necessary information, short of consulting the plan. In case of doubt as to exact location the city assessor, Mr. Henry,, will no doubt be glad to assist in affording further information.

For all lots which have been given over for use by the owners, any selection from these will have to be made by notification to the secretary, Mr. Dobbin, at the Patriotic Fund Office, City Building. his rule is imperative, otherwise confusion is sure to result. If you find a lot in the first list, one which you would wish to use, telephone and afterwards write and secure it. Act promptly. Even now two or three requests are in for lots deemed especially convenient and workable.

Having secured one of these parcels, as a matter of courtesy the owner should be communicated with to see if he have anything in regard to care of the property, etc., or things which he would wish to be respected. Seeing the owner is not absolutely necessary, but advisable, if only to thank him for the use of the place.

Conditions with regard to selection and use of property, the consent to use of which has not been obtained by the committee, will be found preceding the lists of such lots. Be sure and do not confuse the proceedings in regard to the two propositions.

Lots of Which Consent to Use Has Been Obtained by Committee.

For purposes of identification the parcels, or lots, have been numbered. As far as possible the information will be put in this order:—No. or parcel; owner's name and street number; street and number of lot (so far as possible); or failing this the lot and plan number. When dimensions of lots have been supplied such are printed.

1—Milton W. Brown, Vancouver. Lot 1, plan 22, Dufferin St., just across from street numbers 59 and 60.

2—W. H. Bradburn. Lots 89 and 94, each 28ft. front. South side of Prince St.,, coupe of 100 feet east of George St. Asked for by Geo. Rayner.

3—E. A. Peck. Several parcels. Particulars from Mr. Peck at office, Water St.

Thomas Hooper, 327 George St. Two lots on Maitland Ave. Also ask Mr. Hooper about lots 20 and 21 Lansdowne St., the second and third lots on Lansdowne St., east of Park.

5—J. T. O'Connell, 138 Hunter St. Several lots. Mr. O'Connell will supply particulars to those enquiring.

6—Frank Browness, 299 Boswell Av. Lot 16, plan 120, on Lansdowne St. About 320 feet west of Aylmer St. Also lot 13 same street.

7—S. Windsor, Apsley, Ont. Lot 44, plan 138, 48 by 110 feet. Mr. Windsor does not give the street and number, but such can be learned from the assessor, Mr. Henry, city building.

8—John E. Firth, 185 Dalhouse St. Lot 38 and E. part of lot 27, plan 120., corner of Aylmer and Prince Sts., south side.

9—Mrs Mary Elstone, cor. Monroad and Walkerfield Ave. Lots 4.

GERMANS DESTROYING WHAT THEY CAN NO LONGER HOLD

Lens is Being Reduced to Ashes and Mining Property Destroyed---Shells Unearth the Bodies of Those Slain Two Years Ago.

(By Stewart Lyon)

Canadian Army Headquarters in France, April 23.—The burning of Lens by the enemy is a most thorough and systematic process. Beginning in the southern end of the town incendiaries yesterday extended their operations to the northern district. Simultaneously Avion and other centres of the mining district addjoining Lens are being destroyed with all the appliances of the enemy. Where he has been driven out and can no longer apply the torch he neglects even our working parties to make targets of the overhead plant of mines and the houses of miners.

A trip up to Souchez Valley today through the mining region furnished evidence that the enemy is hanging on solely for the purpose of completing his destruction. Everywhere in the valley are ruin and desolation, some of it caused by our guns before the taking of Vimy Ridge, but much of it by the enemy. In his hurried flight he left many unburried dead and many others hastily interred, whose bodies have been again brought to view by German shells. The narrow valley between Lorette Ridge and Vimy Ridge is a charnel house of the bones of thousands of both sides, who died during the great French offensive of 1915. Once more the tide of war has swept up the valley and added horror to horror.

REV. R. POGUE'S TRIBUTE TO TWO FALLEN HEROES

In Capt. Harold Hill and Max Breckenridge St. Paul's Church Loses Devoted Members.

At St. Paul's Church yesterday morning the pastor, Rev. Robt. Pogue referred to the death of two members of the congregation who had been killed on the battlefield in the recent big offensive. He said:—

"The shadows of a great sorrow lies over this congregation today. Word was received yesterday that two of our brightest young men were killed at the now celebrated Battle of Vimy Ridge, which began on Easter Sunday, and continued through the days following. I refer to Captain Harold Hill, who fell on the 9th, and Max Breckenridge, who was killed on the 10th of April.

Harold Hill

Harold Hill was known to most of you. He was born in the city, and grew up in our midst, and was identified with this congregation all his life, first as a Sunday school scholar and then as a communicant member of the church. To know Harold was to love him. Hence I venture to say he was the most widely known and beloved of the young men of the city. He was a young man of the highest ideals, and one to whom the junior boys loved to look up, and whom they admired. He distinguished himself all through his high school career and college; not only in the field of athletics, but in his studies. He had intellectual gifts of a high order. One evidence of this is the fact that he took his second year in arts and stood high in his examinations at a time when he was in training for overseas service. When he enlisted it was as a private. Any honors that might come to him he wished to come by merit on the field of battle. He rose from the ranks of private to that of captain, and was even acting adjutant previous to the battle in which he lost his life. He was in high favor with his commanding officer, just because of his fine, many qualities of head and heart. His moral qualities were as high as his mental ones; his moral development as perfect as his physical. He was the soul of truth and honor.

He united with St. Paul's Church since I became its minister. When he took his stand for Christ it was with a clear knowledge of what Christian discipleship meant. His life was always such as to commend the religion which he professed. I believe the high conception of the meaning of life which he held, his wonderful attainments, his popularity with all who knew him, his stainless record, and then the free and glad surrender of his life in a cause which he believed to be righteous were all made possible because of the influence upon his life and heart of that religion which had been taught him, in a Christian home, and then in the church of which he was a member. We have no doubt in our minds today concerning his welfare. Such lives go at once to be with the King. He has already received the "well done" of the Master. He may not complete with us his university training. He has entered a better school than the schools of earth, where he will continue his education in the higher spheres and in the broader spaces, and under the Master's own tuition. We do not sorrow today as those who have no hope. Nor indeed do we sorrow for him. It is well with Harold Hill. His is now a felicity of which the world knows nothing. Our sorrow is for his dear parents, and for his sisters. Life can never be the same to them again. But even they

GLASS BULLETS USED BY HUNS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

PETROGRAD, April 23.—The Germans on the northern part of the Russansian front have been firing glass bullets from their rifles at the Russian lines, says today's War Office statement. The statement reports exceptionally bad weather both in the Carpathians and on the Russian front.

Hostile activities by the Kurds against the Russians in Persia are increasing, according to the announcement.

ALL ENGAGED.

Practically all the O. A. C. dairy students competent to act as head butter or cheese makers were engaged before the close of the late trm.

THOUSAND HUN PRISONERS CAPTURED BY THE BRITISH AND TWO VILLAGES TAKEN

WAR IN BRIEF

Recent operations indicate another big British advance about to begin.

LONDON.—All quiet on the British front except artillery fighting.

A German attack north of the Aisne was repulsed last night.

An official statement from Berlin says the Germans lost two destroyers east of Dover.

During March, 28,000 volunteers enrolled for all forms of national service in England.

The guns taken by the French since Monday number over one hundred, and the prisoners over nineteen thousand.

Wounded German prisoners on the hospital ship exhibited pitiful cowardice contrasted with the serene behavior of the British wounded.

Arthur J. Balfour, British Foreign Secretary, and British high commissioners arrived safely in the U. S. capital at 3 p.m. Sunday and were welcomed at the station by Secretary Lansing.

Sunday afternoon's official statement says the enemy made an unsuccessful attempt to recover the village of Gonnelieu, captured by the British Saturday night. The attack was repulsed. The Germans left numerous dead. The British gained ground during the day along the north bank of the Scarpe eastward of Fampoux and advanced their lines slightly northwest of Lens. Two German attacks in this area were successfully beaten off. The British brought down one hostile machine and one of their airplanes failed to return.

ST. JOHN'S HONOR ROLL.

One hundred and eighty members of St. John's Church are serving with the Canadian military forces, the majority of whom are overseas.

Fighting Began at Dawn This Morning and Troops Continue to Make Satisfactory Progress---Turks Fall Back Everywhere and General Maude Draws Nearer Samara.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

British Headquarters in France, April 23. — In their new offensive the British have captured the town of Gavrelle, the last part of the defences of the Hindenburg line north of the Scarpe. They have also taken the village of Guemappe south of the Scarpe. More than one thousand prisoners have been taken today.

FIGHTING BEGAN AT DAWN.

LONDON, April 23.—Official Announcement.—"Our troops attacked at dawn along a wide front on both sides of the River Scarpe. Fighting is in progress and our troops are making satisfactory progress. South of the Bapaume-Cambrai road we captured the remainder of the village of Trescault during the night, and gained possession of the greater part of Havrincourt wood.

GERMAN TRANSPORTS SAIL.

LONDON, April 23. — German transports have left Libau, on the Baltic, south of the gulf of Riga, for an unknown destination, according to a Central News despatch from Petrograd today.

TURKS GIVE WAY EVERYWHERE.

LONDON, April 23.—Official Announcement.—During Saturday night the enemy evacuated the remainder of the Istabilat position, portions of which we had stormed and consolidated on the previous day. At daybreak Sunday our troops passed on in pursuit, capturing some prisoners and one 5.9 howitzer. The enemy was found occupying another position on the right bank of the Tigris, about six miles further toward Samara, and at 7 o'clock on the evening of Sunday, when Gen. Maude's telegram was dispatched this position was being attacked. As the result of an air fight on Sunday a new Halberstadt airplane was brought down. The pilot, who was the enemy's flying corps commander, was killed, and the machine fell into our hands.

GETTING NEARER TO SAMARA.

LONDON, April 23. — The Turks in Mesopotamia have evacuated the Istabilat position on the right bank of the Tigris, ten miles below Samara, the war office announces. They are now being attacked at a point six miles nearer Samara.

FRENCH FOIL THE FOE.

PARIS, April 23. — Heavy artillery fighting continues along the front of the French offensive, the war office announces. East of Craonne the Germans, after a fierce bombardment, grouped detachments for an attack. The French guns replied effectively and prevented the advance.

GERMANY'S NAVAL LOSS SERIOUS.

LONDON, April 23. — A Dutch paper says both the German destroyers sunk near Dover were of the newest and largest type and sailed from Zeebrugge. Two other destroyers were heavily damaged and numerous wounded were brought to Bruges on Saturday. A squadron of eight vessels is said to have sailed from Zeebrugge on Friday.

LONG LIST OF LOCAL CASUALTIES TODAY

Signaller Max Breckenridge Now Officially Reported Killed in Action---Pte. Edward Hall in Hospital for Second Time.

The list of Canadian casualties over Sunday occupies over five columns of a newspaper. Peterborough figures in them to quite an extent.

As stated before the list is not complete, so far as the local list is concerned, as the telegraph office that receives them here will not accommodat the public by giving them to the newspapers. The Review will greatly appreciate any information of local casualties as soon as possible after they are received here. Telephone 435, or send in a copy of the telegram.

The following are the ones sent in today:—

SIGNALLER MAX BRECKENRIDGE

Signaller Max Breckenriddge son of Mr. M. Breckenridge, of Westwood, was reported in yesterday's casualty list as killed in action. He went overseas with the 39th Battery, and formally worked in the drug store of Mr. McDermid and Jury.

LANCE-CORP. HARDWICKE

Mrs. J. T. Hardwicke, 488 Cross Street, received the unwelcome news this morning that her son, Lance-Corporal Charles Ernest Hardwicke, of the Signal Corps of the 21st Infantry, had been admitted to the No. 22 Stationary Hospital, Wimereux on April 16th with gunshot wounds in the shoulder and back.

PTE. EDWARD HALL

Sheriff Hall received a cable from the record office yesterday that his son Pte. Edward Hall, had been wounded in the late Battle of Vimy Ridge and had been admitted to the clearing house hospital at Wimereux, with a gunshot wound in the leg. Private Hall was one of the first Peterboro boys to offer his services to the King, and went over with the first contingent. He was in the Battles of St. Julien and Festubert and had been previously wounded.

Several names of men who enlisted at Peterboro appear in the casualty list issued today.

Pte. H. J. Dorset, a member of the 93rd.

Pte. W. F. Davidson, a member of the 93rd.

Pte. P. Hammond, another member of the 93rd.

Pte. C. Thacker, of Cavan.

Pte. E. G. Hardie, of Peterboro, a member of the 93rd.

Pte. J. Tutton, of Port Hope, a member of the 93rd.

Pte. F. Cornell, of Omemee.

MR. SPENCE HAS RESIGNED AS C.A.S. AGENT

Mr. C. A. G. Spence has resigned his position as agent of the local C.A.S.. His letter of resignation was sent to Secretary Joseph Waring this afternoon. The reasons for this step are stated, but will not be given out until after the meeting on Thursday.

Lieut. Brittain for Forestry Draft.

Capt. Freeman returned last night from Verona. While in Peterborough this week he secured Lieut. Brittain of the 247th Battalion for adjutant of the Forestry reinforcements. He has received applications from several capable officers, but is anxious to get officers who have the technical training in forestry. By the end of the month the strength of the draft could reach fifty. The percentage of medically unfit men among the recruits has been very low as Capt. Freeman has instructed his recruiting sergeants to recruit only strong, healthy men. — Kingston Standard.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, MONDAY, APRIL 23, 1917

GREAT IN LIFE, GREAT IN DEATH.

THE LATE Capt. Harold F. Hill was one of the first young men in Peterborough to answer the call of the Empire when the war broke out. He enlisted as a private and worked his way up to the rank of captain by the stepping-stones of devoted service to his country. He succeeded in the hard school of military discipline, in actual warfare where advancement and reward does not depend upon influence but where merit alone counts.

The best appreciation of the young hero who lost his life at the battle of Vimy Ridge has already been written. No further obituary notice is required than the letter written by Capt. Hill's commanding officer to the young man's father, Capt. W. H. Hill, when the son was promoted to the rank of captain. It was a graceful tribute to worth and heroism, the estimate of a man who knew his fellowmen and could set the proper store upon their personal qualities and professonal attainments.

"My attraction to him," wrote the commanding officer, "is due firstly that I consider him absolutely straight (a great thing these days). He is a splendid type of athlete, a splendid sport, and lives a clean life. I honestly congratulate you on having such a son."

No higher encomium could be pronounced by one man of the world upon another. Perfectly straight and morally above reproach. The tribute, graceful as it is, only serves to increase the sorrow at his untimely removal. The world may lose by his being called away, but the Empire has gained by his life and his sacrifice.

It is not hard to imagine, in the absence of details, as to his tragic end, that a young man so great in life was surpassngly great in death, and that the fatal shot found him in the thick of the fray, leading to victory the men whose deeds have made the name of their native land more illustrious than ever in the annals of war.

"DO GOOD TO ALL MEN."

THE ABOVE WAS THE TEXT selected by Mr. C. A. G. Spence for his discourse in St. John's Church last night, and he made it the basis of a forceful appeal on behalf of the Children's Aid Society, of which he has been the executive officer for the past year. He treated the subject from the religious standpoint alone, showing how the doing of good was one of the Divine injunctions laid upon man. In all the world there is no more worthy charity than that which has to do with the care of neglected and dependent children. "For of such is the Kingdom."

Mr. Spence uttered a painful truth when he stated that some people engage in good works not for the love of humanity or because the command to do so comes from above, but simply to win praise from mankind. But, though a man give all his goods to the poor or his body to be burned, and has not charity, it will avail him nothing.

Since the Children's Aid Societies were inaugurated in 1893, under legislative sanction, 20,000 children have been cared for and placed in life. Of these fully ninety per cent. have been successful and are self-sustaining. But for the assistance given them it is probable that a large proportion of them would have sunk into the criminal classes and would now be a charge upon the province.

Whatever may be the outcome of events, the fact remains that Mr. Spence has always been zealous in the discharge of his official duties and has had the proper conception of the importance of any work that may have been entrusted to him. He has acted in different public capacities in this city for the past five years, and in none of these has his efficiency or devotion ever been questioned. He discharged his obligations to his employers as light was given him.

MORE POLITICAL HISTORY.

"SCRATCH ONE of the active agitators for Dominion-wide prohibition in the face of the contention that Parliament has no power to enact such a measure," remarked an observant citizen whose temperance principles are above question, "and you are almost certain to discover a man who is more of a partisan than anything else."

Which recalls a local political episode of some years ago. There was an election on for the Provincial Legislature, and each party had selected a candidate. The temperance party was active even then, and the candidate were asked formally to state their attitude on that issue. The chosen standard-bearer of the Conservatives was a man who had been a practical prohibitionist all his life. He declared without reservation that if he was elected he would support any measure in the interests of temperance, no matter with which party it originated. His opponent—his party being in power at the time and not having adopted even the compromise plank that was inserted as a last resort into their platform since dropping into the minority—refused to commit himself by answering the question at all.

When the temperance people met to consider the replies, one of them was pleased to declare that he had no faith in a man who would return such a general reply as the Conservative candidate had done. That was his excuse for refusing to break with his old party affiliations. He is one of those active workers now for Dominion prohibition. The leopard's skin is as spotted, the Ethiopian hiding in the fence is as dusky as ever. That man appears to think that the present affords an excellent opportunity to drive the Government into a corner.

One of the amendments to the Ontario Temperance Act passed at the last session of the Legislature was the creation of an Indian list. Any magistrate or an official charged in any way with the enforcement of the prohibitory law can decree that it is illegal for certain individuals to keep liquor even in their private houses. This should silence the contention of the temperance people that the Ontario Government has no right to declare the private use of liquor illegal. If it has authority to do so in the case of John Smith, the same authority can be applied to Tom Jones. When a man is put on the Indian list it is illegal to give him liquor, and it is illegal for a dealer in Montreal to ship it to him on his order.

Why not, then, put every man in the province upon the prohibited list and thus stop importations automatically and in a manner which leaves no constitutional controversy to be settled? That would appear to be the logical as well as the non-partisan method of settling the matter.

SUPPORT THE 57TH BAND.

AN ENTERTAINMENT will soon be given in this city to raise funds for Peterborough's popular and efficient musical organization, the band of the 57th Regiment. The entertainment considered apart from the object is worthy the patronage of the citizens. It is doubly so when the end in view is taken into account.

The 57th Band requires no apologists. Its reputation is firmly established. It has brought fame to this city year after year at the Toronto Exhibition and in every place where it has been heard. Its open-air concerts in the parks have become a feature of city life during the summer months.

To help the band is now a patriotic duty, for that organization may now be regarded as a military adjunct in every sense of the term. Only yesterday the Veterans who have done their duty at the front paraded to church to the music of that band. It is at the service of the public on all occasions, and as a public institution is entitled to something more substantial from the people than expressions of appreciation.

VOLUNTEERS AND CONSCRIPTION.

A COMPANY is building a railway, and the work of laying the track begins. The rails are heavy, but eight or ten men can handle one of them without undue exertion. All are required to take hold, and none regard this form of conscription as an injustice. If the foreman called upon one man to volunteer to handle the rail he would either wait in vain or valuable time would be lost as some energetic workmen toiled to littlep urpose alone while the others stood by and watched his efforts, regarding him as over zealous or foolish, as his conduct appealed to their individual ideas.

Conducting a war is, after all, a good deal like building a railway or carrying on any other big work. The volunteer system is not sufficient. While one man works there are eight or ten willing to stand, with folded arms, looking on.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

CHILLY WEATHER is the only consolation for the lack of those bathing beaches.

• • • •

THE MAN with the tractor or the three-horse plow can put it all over his neighbor with the hoe.

• • • •

"LOVE THY NEIGHBOR as thyself," and the injunction makes no note of the question of parentage.

• • • •

THE VOLUNTEER SYSTEM evidently requires some impetus other than April showers and good growing weather.

• • • •

IT IS NO LONGER sufficient to call a spade a spade. The necessities of the times demand that you get out and use one.

• • • •

MERCURY MAY BE invisible to the naked eye, but just now the planet on which we live is claiming all our attention.

• • • •

"REMEMBER the Lusitania" is one of the American war slogans. By this time Germany probably does so with infinite regret.

GERMANY should note that the lion and the lamb will never lie down together until the lion overcomes its fondness for a meat diet.

• • • •

THE BOY doing his bit on a farm or garden plot will look better than if yelling himself hoarse at a baseball game or some other athletic contest.

• • • •

SEVEN BILLION DOLLARS for the war looks big, but it is a trifle compared to the tribute the Germans would levy on the United States if the chance ever came to them.

• • • •

TRIS SPEAKER leads the American League in batting for the first month of the baseball season. Great as such a performance may have been once, it is insignificant when compared with the gallant deeds of young men on the battle line.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

(Toronto Mail and Empire.)

Saving ought not to be confined to money. There is enough food wasted in Toronto every day to feed a battalion for a week.

American Frightfulness.

(New York Herald.)

Some of the 482 New York bachelors who on Monday obtained marriage licenses admitted that their aim is to avoid fighting. May their brides be ardently militaristic and give them a daily black eye as a skulker's token.

The Real Aristocracy

(Brooklyn Eagle.)

Is every Methodist minister to be a Lucullus and dine on larks' tongues every day in the week? This proposition of a $1200 a year minimum salary is revolutionary. Skilled mechanics may get $7 a day or more, but they belong to our real aristocracy. The ministers don't.

CHINESE FUNERAL CURIOUS SPECTACLE

Quaint Customs Prevailing in China—A Manchui Funeral Headed by Twenty-four Camels

A visitor from China writes: "One of the most extraordinary sights we saw while in China was a Manchui funeral." The account told that the procession was led by twenty-four camels laden with huge red saddles, then a great flagstaff of red and gold carried and supported on a platform by thirty-two bearers, through the medium of movable poles. Next came bearers with guns, penants, battle-axes, seals and hand-like tops on the summit of long staves.

Mourners Wear White

After these a large red satin chair was carried by four men in white, followed by thirty-two mourners, also in white; this is the mourning color, or rather absence of color in China. Next twelve boys in white, and wearing Manchurian hats, sign of the high state of the deceased. These boys carried trays filled with presents which would later be burned at the grave. The great hearse or catafalque was all red, heavily embroidered. It was borne by sixty-four bearers in green, followed by twenty-four boys, also in green, carrying long poles. Twenty-two priests in red came next, and then a seemingly unlimited number of bearers of all kinds of curios in the shape of puppets, artificial flowers, flags, mock lions, deer made of paper, "cash" also of paper, and the white horse of the dead Manchui. These are but a very few of the details.

Stops Made For Tea-drinking

Stops were made now and again by the roadside to give all an opportunity of drinking tea which was served from small tables. Then the leader of the band—for there was a band gathered his forces together, the curiously monotonous sounds, which the Chinese are pleased to call music, began again, and once more the procession would get into line. The personal friends followed last in carriages and Peking carts. Tablets carried en route were left beside the coffin at the grave—where the gifts and cash were burned—and afterwards deposited in the ancestral hall or shrine to descend to posterity.

EDUCATING OYSTERS

How the Japanese Teach Them to Make Pearls

In Japan there is a great oyster farm where the bivalves are taught to make pearls. It was Dr. Mikimoto, a well-known scientist, who conceived the idea that oysters might be educated and made to work for man. After many years of costly experimentation he discovered the method in use today. The farm has an area of about fifty square miles, and the water varies in depth from five to fifteen fathoms. The farmer selects the spots where the larvæ of oysters are most numerous and then he plants small rocks and stones. These are soon covered with oyster-spat. They are then removed and placed in special beds, where they lie undisturbed until the third year. An oyster will not produce a pearl unless it be irrigated by some foreign substance. As soon as it feels this it proceeds to cover it with nacre, layer on layer, until after a few years it has made a pearl. When large enough the oysters are taken from their beds and carefully opened; a tiny speck of some foreign substance is introduced into their bodies, and they are replaced in the sea. By the end of from three to five years the oyster has coated the foreign substance with nacre and this has become a pearl. All the work on this oyster farm is done by women, who bring the oysters up and down by diving.

TREE THAT OWNS ITSELF

Love of Tree Causes Extraordinary Bequest

At Athens, Georgia, there is a giant white oak tree which no one may buy or sell or cut down; nobody owns the land in which this tree stands. The tree owns itself. It stands on top of one of the hills of the city, and is said to be between 400 and 500 years old. Early in the nineteenth century the owner of the plantation on which the tree stod often used to sit in the shade of the huge oak. Finally, he became so attached to the tree that he made a will which deeded the tree to itself. He wrote: "For, and in consideration of the great love I bear this tree, and the great desire I have for its protection for all time, I convey to it entire possession of itself, and all land on 8 feet of the tree on all sides." And so the tree came to own itself and 8 feet of ground surrounding it.

Eastern Nations' Discovery

The Eastern nations, which are far more pestered with flies than we are, have discovered how much flies dislike blue. The Arabs treat their houses with a kind of light blue wash, and the Japanese hang curtains of blue glass beads and bamboo at the entrance of their baker and butcher shops. These curtains let the air in, and the flies, should there be any in the room, pass out between the blue beads towards the light, but they do not re-enter.

Grand Total of C.P.R.

The Canadian Pacific Railway has a grand total of 1,500 miles of double track. Ontario district has a double-tracked mileage of 105. Manitoba district is laid with no less than 643 miles of double tracks. British Columbia district is equipped with 148.90 miles. Alberta district has 12 miles and Saskatchewan district has 210 miles of double track.

The First Letter Box

The first letter box seems to have been installed in Paris, as a useful part of the first penny post established in any country. But, strangely enough, the people of Paris did not like the boxes for their letters, and the system was for some years given up.

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review: Is it right that a landlord in this city can put a soldier's wife and children into the street? A soldier's wife, whose husband is in France, got notice to leave her house, by word of mouth only, on April 1st, and was told to get out by May 1st, as the landlord wanted the house for himself. She has tried ever since to get a house, and cannot. Everyone knows what a problem it is these days to get a house. She told the landlord she couldn't get a house, and he told her today in a very insulting manner that she would have to get out, as he would come in on May 1st, and that he had heard from a solicitor in town that he could put the rent to $50 and collect it. Is there no protection for the soldiers' wives and little ones?

Aviator Golfer's Remarkable Flight From Aegean to Adrianople

At the outset of the war Lieut. Jack Devlin, of Ottawa, a son of Mr. R. J. Devlin, and formerly known as a brilliant young golfer, took up aviation and was attached to the Naval Aerial Service, being appointed to one of the coast stations for defensive work. He did splendidly there and was subsequently transferred to the near East. He was in the Balkan campaign for some time, with headquarters on the island of Imbros. Later he was among the aviators who carried out a dangerous night flight, which resulted in the destruction of several big bridges, about twenty miles south of Adrianople.

The flight was made from Imbros at a height of about ten thousand feet. Reaching their destination, one of the railway bridges over the Maritza River, Lieut. Devlin and Flight-Lieut. Herriot, descended to within 500 feet and dropped their bombs, several of which were direct hits. The destruction of the Maritza River bridges severed communications between Turkey and Bulgaria, except for the mule trails and pontoon service. Several attempts to hit Turkey and Bulgaria thus had been made, but that by Lieuts Devlin and Herriot proved successful.

Their flight was about 100 miles, but, though subject to a heavy fire from anti-aircraft guns, the daring aviators returned safely to Imbros, though Lieut. Devlin had both hands severely frost bitten. Earlier one British aviator made the trip and damaged the bridge considerably, for which he was awarded the Distinguished Service Order.

FIRST CHEMONG TO DIE

One of Five Brothers, Indians, Who Went Overseas

Pte. Isaac Taylor, a Chemong village member of the 93rd Battalion, who was reported seriously ill of wounds, was later reported to have died. He was the first of the Chemong Lake Indians to give his life for his Empire. He was one of the five sons of Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, Chemong, who joined the colors and went overseas. A brother already had been wounded, and his uncle, Pte. Chas. Taylor, and a cousin, Pte. Russell Taylor, were also in the casualty list.

The "Fighting" Fools

Major H. H. Armstrong of Hamilton, returning from the front, said: "There will be a big show on the Western front, and the Canadians will be the king-pin of it. Among the allies the Canadians are known as the 'Fighting Fools.' It is a term of commendation. The Canadians will fight anywhere and anything that is to be fought."

Good Results to Federal Policyholders
The Transfer to Sun was Evidently a Good Deal For Them.

The Sun Life annual report just to hand contains the following paragraph:

"It is most gratifying to report that the agreement under which this company reassured the Federal Life Assurance Company of Canada in 1915, has worked out so satisfactorily that we already enabled to raise the apportionment of future profits to holders of participating policies in that company to the scale used for holders of corresponding Sun Life policies. The advantages which have accrued to Federal Life policy holders from the reassurance of that Company have thus been marked and substantial."

This emphasizes what we have often said, that the Sun Life is so fortunately situated financially that astonishing results to policyholders are to be expected.

TWO CANADIAN VOCALISTS.

Had Successful Career in Germany Before the War.

The European war, responsible for bringing so many musical artists to this continent, has brought two Canadians from brilliant successes in opera in Germany back to the United States for concert work. These two are Francis Maclennan, tenor, and his wife, Florence Easton, soprano. These valued members of the Chicago Opera Association will not again return to Europe until the great war is ended. Both last autumn and the autumn before the pair came near being blown up by mines while crossing the ocean. Coming over from Holland on the Dutch liner Noordam last autumn, the ship was obliged to take a detour around the northern end of Scotland. Several floating mines were passed, any one of which might have blown the ship in two.

Florence Easton obtained high praise this year through her singing of Brunnhilde in "Siegfried," Nedda in "Pagliacci" and Cio-Cio-San in "Madame Butterfly," with the Chicago Opera Association. She had sung "Madame Butterfly" in English for Henry W. Savage, having been heard here in Canada with his English Opera Company. In Germany she had often sung the role in the German tongue, but she had to relearn it in Italian for her Chicago appearance. She has been guest artist in Berlin many times and is well liked for her impersonations in the Verdi and Puccini operas. Her singing of "Salome" and "Electra" called forth a letter of admiration from Richard Strauss.

Maclennan was the only Canadian who ever sang "Tristan" in Germany. His singing of "Parsifal" with the Henry W. Savage company was considered by Frau Cosima Wagner sufficient to keep him from singing in Bayreuth. He has sung leading dramatic tenor roles in Germany for years, and for the past three years has been the leading dramatic tenor of the Stadt-theatre in Hamburg.

The Maclennans, in addition to their work in Germany, have done a great deal of singing in England. Both have sung at Covent Garden. They sang at the Wagner festival in Edinburgh, Scotland, in 1909, and have sung in England every year since then. Maclennan's work in Wagerian opera, and in Humperdinck's "Konigskinder," in which he learned his role in a very few days, earned him a deserved popularity in Chicago.

The Maclennans have brought their little girl with them on this trip to America. The little one, who is five years old, was born in Berlin. The Maclennans' boy, ten years old, has lived most of his life in Germany. He is now attending a French school in Lausanne, Switzerland, where he is being taught French and English. Francis Maclennan comes from Collingwood, Ont., and Florence Easton from Toronto. Their careers in Germany were watched with interest by Canadian friends, who are glad that they were able to leave the enemy's country in safety.

Huns in Canada.

There are now 2,646 enemy aliens in the internment camps throughout the country, of whom 1,501 are Germans, 1,135 Austrians, and ten Bulgarians. There have been 7,751 in the camps up to November last, but many of these have been given comparative freedom, as they were not regarded as dangerous. After the war began, when employment was scarce, many of the aliens out of work were taken to the internment camps, as it was felt they were safe there.

Last year most of the prisoners were given work in the Dominion parks, building roads, and doing other necessary work, and it is understood that their services will be utilised in this way again. They were given the same pay as the overseas forces.

Many of the recent arrivals at the camps were taken off enemy ships and after investigation were considered too dangerous to be allowed at large.

There were originally five internment camps in British Columbia, three in Alberta, one in Manitoba, two in Nova Scotia, five in Ontario, and two in Quebec. Six of these have been closed down.

According to immigration figures, 112,000 aliens of enemy nationality have entered Canada since 1911. In that year the fixed male population of alien enemies was given as 106,-

Mrs. Jarvis Says Dr. Cassell's Tablets Cured Her Delicate Child When Nothing Else Could

Mrs. Jarvis, Box [illegible], Penetang P.O., Ontario, writes: "It is a pleasure to tell you what Dr. Cassell's Tablets have done for my baby. When only five months old he fell ill, and though I had medical advice for him he got worse. I tried several special foods, but none of them would stay on his stomach, and he became so thin that he seemed just skin and bone. He only weighed 10 pounds, and we never thought he would live. But chancing to hear of Dr. Cassell's Tablets I got some for baby, and am thankful I did. He is a bonny boy now, quite cured, and weighs 25 pounds at twelve months old."

A free sample of Dr. Cassell's Tablets will be sent to you on receipt of 5 cents for mailing and packing. Address: Harold F. Ritchie & Co., Ltd., 10, McCaul St., Toronto.

Dr. Cassell's Tablets are the surest home remedy for Dyspepsia, Kidney Trouble, Sleeplessness, Anaemia, Nervous Ailments, Nerve Paralysis, Palpitation, and Weakness in Children. Specially valuable for nursing mothers and during the critical periods of life. Sold by druggists and storekeepers throughout Canada. Prices: one tube, 50 cents; six tubes for the price of five. Beware of imitations said to contain hypophosphites. The composition of Dr. Cassell's Tablets is known only to the proprietors, and no imitation can ever be the same.

RELIEF AT HER OWN EXPENSE.

Mrs. Penfield, After Thirty Months of Devoted Service In Her Workshops, Discontinues Them—Daughter of a Late Philadelphia Multimillionaire.

Following closely the break in relations between the United States and Germany, Mrs. Frederic C. Penfield, wife of the American ambassador at Vienna, closed the workshops where for thirty months, at her own expense, were produced millions of bandages and wound dressings. The late Emperor Francis Joseph gave his recognition of her great service by conferring on Mrs. Penfield a high order.

MRS. FREDERIC C. PENFIELD.

Mrs. Penfield is a daughter of the late William Weightman of Philadelphia and inherited his vast fortune, estimated in that city at from $40,000,000 to $50,000,000. Her first husband was Robert J. C. Walker, lawyer and for a number of years a member of congress from Pennsylvania. As Mrs. Walker she was prominent in Washington society during the sessions of congress. She is an accomplished linguist and is a patron of art, music and literature. Her gifts to Catholic institutions and charities have been munificent, and she has frequently been honored by the pope.

Mr. Penfield for a number of years was American minister resident and consul general to Egypt. As an author he is known chiefly by his books, "East of Suez" and "Present Day Egypt." He is a fellow of the Royal Geographical society of London. The cross of the Legion of Honor was bestowed upon him about twelve years ago. He is a member of the Authors', the New York Yacht, the Manhattan and the Players' clubs, New York, and of the Metropolitan club of Washington.

ABOUT NERVES.

No Woman In This Day Can Afford to Have 'Em.

The nervous woman is rarely pretty. She may be extremely beautiful when young, but the nervous tension under which she lives inevitably wears out her body. At twenty-five she looks near thirty; at thirty she seems forty; at forty she's thin, haggard, wrinkled, old.

So if you are the least bit neurotic take extra good care of yourself. Rest more than the ordinary woman does to overcome the nervous strain; eat plenty, for food soothes the nerves; eat often to keep the blood in the stomach. This does not mean that occasional nibbles of candy are to be taken or that meals may be eaten any time of the day or night. It means frequent nourishment at regular periods. A good plan is an egg and milk between breakfast and luncheon and between luncheon and dinner and a cup of hot chocolate and a cracker just before going to bed.

The nervous woman should rest a lot to conserve her energies. When possible she should lie down in preference to sitting down, as the relaxation is more complete. It is surprising the number of minutes of rest that can be snatched between the duties of the day. If the rest follows immediately after a meal it will do double good, for it will allow all the energy to go toward digestion.

Unfortunately it is hard to convince the nervous woman that she must rest. She always means to, but she never will take the time, for her type can find more things to do than any other sort of woman.

About Stockings.

At almost any shop where needlework designs are sold one can purchase perforated patterns for transferring to stockings. As a rule the design is supposed to start at the instep and extend upward for six or eight inches. It is best to hold a darning ball inside the stocking while doing the embroidering. Or one might rip open the back seam, provided it is neatly and tightly sewed again when the embroidery is finished.

While it is customary to use silk for the work, there are extremists who bring out the designs in beads. The only objection to these is that they may be difficult to launder.

PAINS IN SIDE AND BACK

How Mrs. Kelly Suffered and How She was Cured.

Burlington, Wis.—"I was very irregular, and had pains in my side and back, but after taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Tablets and using two bottles of the Sanative Wash I am fully convinced that I am entirely cured of these troubles, and feel better all over. I know your remedies have done me worlds of good and I hope every suffering woman will give them a trial." Mrs. ANNA KELLY, 710 Chestnut Street, Burlington, Wis.

The many convincing testimonials constantly published in the newspapers ought to be proof enough to women who suffer from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the medicine they need.

This good old root and herb remedy has proved unequalled for these dreadful ills; it contains what is needed to restore woman's health and strength.

If there is any peculiarity in your case requiring special advice, write the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass., for free advice.

ABOUT FOOD VALUE

How to Buy Nourishment Is Told by an Expert.

COMPARISON OF NUTRIENTS.

The High Cost of Living May Be Reduced by Simple Arithmetic and a Knowledge of What the Different Foods Contain Both of Nourishment and of Waste.

"How much is it a pound?" inquires the housekeeper, whether she purchases meat, flour, cheese or coffee. On the pound value she bases the cost of her housekeeping and the cost of the meals and living of her family. One would think, to hear her talk, that if meat costs 28 cents a pound or cheese 22 cents or coffee 35 cents, just in so many cents does she get an equivalent in nourishment. But this is totally wrong. The price per pound in nowise represents the price of nourishment to the body!

The housekeeper who is really trying to solve the high cost of everything will first study nutritive values. She can do this by the aid of government bulletins and several small volumes which she can buy. She must know how much nutrition she gets out of her meat, her sugar, her cheese, her coffee, before she knows the actual cost of feeding her family. In other words, she must learn to buy not by the pound, but by the food value.

Let us compare porterhouse, the rump and the flank. From actual figures we see that the food values of these pieces are not the same; neither do they contain the same amount of waste:

	Refuse. Pct.	Water. Pct.	Protein. Pct.	Fat. Pct.
Porterhouse	12.7	52.4	19.1	17.9
Rump	20.7	45.6	13.8	[illegible]
Flank	10.2	54.0	17.0	19.0

The main nutrient which we buy food for, protein, is greatest in the porterhouse. But it is nearly equaled by the flank, and when we compare the refuse of the two we see that there is less refuse in the flank and more fat. But comparing the rump, which is a much cheaper piece, we see it has quite as much refuse and a third less protein value. Now, many a housekeeper with a sense of economy would purchase the rump because it sells for 6 cents or 8 cents a pound less than the porterhouse; or, again, she might purchase the porterhouse, which sells for sometimes 10 cents more than the flank. But the really true economy would be to purchase that meat which sells not for the lower price, but which has the most nutrient "on the dollar," we might say, and this would certainly be the flank. In other words, given a dollar or any number of dollars, on what can it be spent to get best value?

Every food has a certain per cent of waste, and this per cent of waste must be known in order to do really economical buying. It frequently happens that the higher priced foods without waste are less expensive than the cheap food where there are bones, gristle, skin, parings, peel, etc., paid for. Marketing along this new line is being carried on in some of our high schools, where girls are given a definite sum for weekly expenditures and are asked to figure how best to nourish some imaginary family for that amount. How many older housekeepers are following this new and scientific marketing? Perhaps the new arithmetic will have such examples as these: If one pound of cheese costs 22 cents and yields a 25 per cent protein value and one pound of rib roast costs 30 cents and yields only 13 per cent of protein, how many pounds of the most protein value can you buy for a dollar? Arithmetic based on actual practical problems might do more to interest girls and to bring up a new race of scientific housekeepers.

MAY GET ST. PIERRE.

One Important Change Suggested to Follow the War.

Ceded by France to England in 1713, after several recessions and cessions, St. Pierre and Ile-aux-Chiens and Miquelon, the little group of fishermen's islands forty-seven miles off the coast of Newfoundland, have been under the flag of France since 1816. They have a population of less than 7,000 persons, and are not particularly valuable, though some years they have exported as much as $2,000,000 of fish annually. The rumor now is that they are to be taken by England, and made a part of Newfoundland, which, in its turn, is to become a part of the Dominion. "St. Pierre and Miquelon" has one deputy in the French Chamber. Its people are proud of the connection. But not one of them doubts that liberty would remain under England's flag, and France will be likely to agree to the scheme, getting her compensation elsewhere, when the war ends.

Probably the ends of civilization are best served by having as little as possible geographical separation of any colony from the authority that must act on its graver problems. If the plan goes through this authority for St. Pierre will be in Ottawa, and not in Paris.

Newfoundland, once rejected by Canada, and afterward invited into the Federation in vain, will perhaps accept another invitation. Most of the people favor union, some are strongly opposed. The old friction between Newfoundland and the French over old fishing rights on the Newfoundland coast was ended when England gave France a free hand in Morocco, and accepted control of her own Newfoundland line in return.

The general scheme of remapping the overseas dominions of Great Britain, of which the above is a part, would solidify South Africa, solidify Australia and New Zealand, as well as Canada. It would lessen in a measure the expense of government, and the division of authority. It ought to work well, but some local antagonisms certainly remain to be overcome.

Slandering Canada.

The following correspondence appeared recently in The Chicago Tribune:

Ulm, Ark., Feb. 10.—I am enclosing clippings from two Milwaukee publications containing statements of the deplorable condition of interned Germans and Austrians in Canada. Is it true that women and children are being imprisoned in barracks where they undergo untold suffering from lack of food, and heat, and clothing? Is it a fact that money and gifts of necessities sent to such as are interned are confiscated by the Government? The Rev. August Lolits.

In the main the statements in regard to the treatment of Germans in Canada are untrue. The percentage of Germans and Austrians in Canada that have been interned is very small. Those that have been interned are reservists, men who had no personal interests in Canada and were considered a menace. Reports of American Consuls who have visited these internment camps have in every instance, so far as I know, spoken in favorable terms of the treatment of the interned prisoners. They are well fed and clothed, have free medical treatment, and are allowed any presents sent them that are not a menace to safety. There are in this consular district thousands of Germans who are living the same way they lived before the outbreak of hostilities. There has been no internment of women. In Toronto wives of interned prisoners that are dependent are allowed $30 per month, and if they have children the allotment is more. One case that came under my personal observation a short time ago, the wife and one child, a babe, are receiving $40 per month from the military authorities for their support. Enemy subjects in Canada have no just cause for complaint as to their treatment by the authorities.—Chester M. Martin, American Consul at Toronto.

Sleepy Time Story. About Kind and Unkind Trees.

THE REWARD OF EVERGREENS.

Experience of a Lame Robin Which Could Not Fly Away With Its Companions—How the Oak and the Beech Were Punished For Their Lack of Hospitality.

I am going to tell you tonight, said Uncle Ben to little Ned and Polly Ann, about

THE TALKING TREES.

Once upon a time as the little birds were making their long journey to the pleasant warm countries where birds spend the winter a little robin was left behind. He had a lame wing, and lame winged birds never can fly far.

Little robin looked about in the strange woods where, tired out, he had to stop. He crept up to a gnarled old oak tree whose branches soared a hundred feet into the air.

"Please let me stay with you all winter," the little bird pleaded. "Your leaves will shelter me from the winter winds."

But the oak was proud. "Go away," he said. "I do not want tramp birds like you about my branches."

The little bird sped to the beech tree, but the beech tree made believe not to hear the robin.

"The maple is so lovely. Perhaps she is also kind," the little bird said. And he went to the maple tree to ask her for shelter. But, the maple tree was not kind.

He flew to the little stream along which the white birch trees gleamed, but the birches said that they were not strong enough to take lodgers.

As, tired and sorrowful, the little bird started away on his lame wing a dark, shaggy tree standing on the hill slope called to him. "Here you are welcome to shelter, little wanderer." It was the tall pine tree with thick needles which could turn off the roughest winter wind.

"I, too, have a home for you," called the tall, dark spruce. And the stately cedar whispered that if the little bird cared to live near the dwellings of man not to overlook its sheltering branches in the garden.

"As for me," called the little juniper, "though I may not be able to offer shelter, my berries will provide you with food, to which you are welcome as long as you need them."

And so the little bird stayed with these kind ones, and every morning and every evening he sang them a little song of gratitude.

Old King Winter heard it one day and learned the bird's story. He said to one of his wildest winds:

"Go out into the woods and strip those unkind trees of the leaves of which they are so proud, but the trees that have been kind and willing to share what they had with the unfortunate shall always wear their green leaves all winter."

Happy Days of Ice and Snow.

RESTING AFTER A SPIN.

Old Mrs. Northwind and sprightly Jack Frost are friends of little folks. If it were not for the activities of these two worthies there would be little joy in the land for the devotees of coasting and skating. Many people complain and rail against the ice and snow, but boys and girls are loud in their praises. The little lady in the picture was snapped while resting after a strenuous hour on her gleaming skates. Like her playmates, she revels in such sports.

The Milkman.

Our milkman, he comes every day,
No matter if it rains and pours.
He never seems to mind a bit
What it is doing out of doors.

And in the middle of the night
I hear him coming up the stairs.
He tiptoes to our door and leaves
Our milk and leaves our neighbors theirs.

JUST CREDIT.

Do not fear to give credit where credit is due. If we cannot do great deeds we can at least appreciate them in others. No jealous and envious spirit can rise to greatness, whatever opportunities are offered, and no broad and generous spirit can ever live an ignoble life, however circumscribed its surroundings. A whole lifetime of humdrum duties cannot so narrow existence as does the habit of belittling the deeds and experiences of others.

Nelson as a Courtier.

Nelson was the hero of England even in his own time, but not apparently of the court. Samuel Rogers recounts a conversation with him which appears in the life of the poet by R. Ellis Roberts. "I heard him once during dinner," says Rogers, "utter many bitter complaints (which Lady Hamilton vainly attempted to check) of the way he had been treated at court that forenoon—the queen had not condescended to take the slightest notice of him. In truth, Nelson was hated at court; they were jealous of him." But then it must be remembered that Rogers was renowned as a particularly ill natured gossip.

Last Revolutionary Survivor.

The last survivor of the Revolutionary war was John Gray, who died in Noble county, O., aged 104 years, on March 26, 1868. He came to the Buckeye State early in its existence. For some years before he died he drew an annual pension of $500 from the government, General John A. Bingham having got a special act through congress for this. Gray's father was killed at the battle of Stillwater, and he took his place in the army, being only sixteen years old then. He served through the remainder of the war. His military record is on file at the office of the state commissioner of soldiers' claims.

One of Three Worst Wives.

St. Giles, Camberwell, is the burial place of Mrs. John Wesley, wife of the famous preacher. Southey grouped Mrs. Wesley with the partners of Socrates and Job among the three worst wives in history, and she seems to have deserved the distinction. One of Wesley's friends, says the London Mirror, records having seen him dragged round the room by his hair by the powerful virago, and she seems to have made the poor man's life a misery for twenty years. At last, to his great relief, she decamped, carrying away many of his papers simply to annoy him, and he saw her no more. She died in October, 1781.

Metallic Magnesium.

Metallic magnesium, the lightest metal known, will be produced as a commercial commodity by a factory at Niagara Falls. It is said to have many qualities superior to aluminum. The output of the factory has been contracted for by the French government until the end of the war, the material to be made use of in the manufacture of aeroplane parts.

Cold Winters Are Due.

Abbe Moreaux, the French meteorologist, says the world's rain cycle, which from his study of the sun's face he predicted would begin in 1902, is now at an end. For the next twenty-six years, beginning with the present one, he forecasts a series of hard winters, but is not sure that the series will be entirely unbroken.

Believes That.

"Do you believe everything you hear?"

"No, but when I come to a railroad crossing and hear a whistle I never doubt that a train is coming.

SIR SAM HUGHES POPULAR AS EVER WITH THE PEOPLE

Certain of Nomination at Convention in Lindsay Saturday---Liberals Will Put up an Opponent.

LINDSAY, Ont., April 23.—There is no immediate prospect of any im-opposition to General Sir Sam Hughes at the Conservative convention to be held hear next Saturday to select the Conservative candidate for Victoria County in the next Dominion Election. The party throughout the riding seemed disposed in regard Sir Sam as their natural choice. A year ago when the ex-Minister's connection with the Allison deals were receiving wide publicity, there undoubtedly was a feeling among his former supporters, that the party should look for another candidate, but that feeling has apparently passed away, and Sir Sam's re-nomination is regarded as a certainty on Saturday next. The securing of the Diminion Arsenal for Lindsay by the ex-Minister has undoubtedly done much to restore Sir Sam to his old-time popularity, particularly in the town of Lindsay, which in the past has controlled nominating conventions, and will again have a large voice in the nominating convention next Saturday.

Liberals Will Fight

Among those who are mentioned as probable Liberal Candidates are Dr. J. A. White, president of the Liberal Association of Lindsay, Dr. Blanchard, president of the Reform Association of Victoria, and James Robertson, ex-Warden of the County, now Reeve of Ops Township, and a prominent farmer. The choice will probably be between Dr. White and Mr. Robertson.

Sir Sam to Talk

Lindsay has waited seven months for the promised statement from General Hughes regarding the criticism of his former colleagues and his differences with the Government When Sir Sam resigned as Minister of Militia he stated that his constituents would be the first to receive an explanation from his lips. The statement which he made in Parliament at the time has never been regarded as a complete review of the facts, and his speech at the nominating convention a week hence, however, is expected to contain much new information. Sir Sam is expected in Lindsay today, and will probably spend all week in his constituency, completing arrangements for the convention which will include the running of a special train to Lindsay from Haliburton and northern points in the riding.

For the purpose of facilitating the work and movement, the following list of men available for engagement to do plowing is printed here. We are sure the papers will excuse the complimentary advertisement in view of the general help given. In fact, the papers do a heap of helping and this is just one more boost:

F. Turner, 489 Donegal St.
R. Frise, 498 Bonaccord St.
G. Sexsmith, 558 Romaine St.
J. O'Brien, 501 Bolivar St.
B. Revoy, 292 Woodbine ave.
P. Quinlan, 335 Downie St.
F. Moncrief, 62 Lansdowne St.
J. T. Ormistone, 826 Water St.
W. Millain, 891 Water St.
W. Stinson, 576 Harvey St.
F. Drake, 567 Bolivar St.
J. Healey, 228 Cameron St.

From the number of enquiries already received for addresses of plowmen, it is certain that a good many are going into the work and movement, a healthy and hopeful sign. Harry Evans has supplied the list of artists at the plow, and says they are all good men. If a piece of land requires to be disced, and the plower has not that tool, it is understood the Peter Hamilton Co. have agreed to loan such things for public service. That is another helpful thing.

During the past week a number of applications have been made to the office for reservations of lots. These lots have not been entered on the lists as printed. Those who have signified that they want them had better come to the office at once and get the matter fixed up.

If anything has been forgotten just 'phone the Patriotic Fund office and the secretary will try and supply.

There will be a meeting of the committee of the club presently. As to seed potatoes the supply is just now limited, but some help in this direction is being looked for. If successful, due notice will be given. There is land enough in the list as above which, if planted, would feed the city next winter. Let each man go to it in the firm resolve that, if for nothing else, he will never again pay $4.50 per bag for the humble but now lucrative potato. We shall see what we shall see.

must not think themselves poor and as losers only. Only those are poor who have lost nothing, and who have made no sacrifice that truth and righteousness might be vindicated in the earth. Blessed indeed are those who have parted willingly with their nearest and dearest for a cause which they believed to be sacred. Verily, I say unto you, they have reward.

Max Breckenridge.

Not so many of you knew Max Breckenridge. Much that I have said of Harold Hill I could also say of Max. He was active in our church work as usher, as a member of the Young People's Guild, and as a member of the Young Men's Bible Class. His smile when you went into Mr. McDermid's store, in which he was a drug clerk, was as good a tonic as anything he had for sale. I was hoping that God might yet direct him into the ministry. He had, to an unusual degree, the gift of choice effective speech. On two occasions he figured in our debates, when he surprised us all by his mental as well as his oratorical abilities.

It is hard to think that so many of our splendid young men will come home no more, and that our victory over German militarism must be bought at such tremendous cost. But, as one of our ministers recently said, "No sacrifice shall be finally without its reward. The full results of our sowing it will take the nations years to reap." But already a new heaven has been won for us. We had our mediaeval conceptions of a place where men and women of maturity and over-seriousness found endless scope for contemplation. But heaven has become the rendezvous of the youth of all lands. They suddenly emerged out of the heat and stress of warfare into the joy and freedom of the heavenly land.

"Heaven thronged with gay and careless faces,
New waked from dreams of dreadful things;
They walk by green and pleasant places,
And by the crystal water springs.
Forget this nightmare field of slain,
And the fierce thirst and the strong pain.
Oh, if the sonless mothers weeping,
The widowed girls, could look inside
The country that hath them in keeping,
Who went to the great war and died,
They would rise and put their mourning off,
And say 'Thank God, he has enough.'"

Cabinet of Silver For Mrs. Ira Robson

MEMBERS OF SPRINGVILLE CHURCH REMEMBER THE ORGANIST.

On Thursday night at Springville, the departing organist of the Presbyterian Church, Miss Helen White, was handsomely remembered on the occasion of her retirement, due to her having entered the matrimonial state and becoming Mrs. Ira Robson.

At the close of the "Endeavor" meeting, Mr. John McIntosh was called to the chair. After a short musical programme, presented by Miss Baird, Miss and Mrs. [illegible]raw, Mr. Clarence Laing and others, the chairman called upon Mr. J. H. Sanderson to read the following address:—

To Mrs. Ira Robson:

Dear Friend,—On this the happy occasion of your marriage, we, the Springville congregation beg leave to acknowledge our appreciation of your work as organist in our church during the past three and one-half years.

We recognize the fact that you have very often greatly inconvenienced yourself to attend to these duties, and the cheerful manner you have always displayed, has endeared you to the hearts of the Springville people.

Many times you must have felt discouraged when you had difficulties to surmount, as all organists are sure to have.

Your regularity and efficiency in the discharge of your duties have been very noticeable, and your work as organist has been a great benefit to the Springville congregation.

We would ask you to accept this cabinet of silver, not as a reward for what you have done, but as a slight tangible token of our appreciation of your services.

The congregation join in wishing you and your estimable husband many, many years of prosperity and happiness.

(Signed
John McIntosh
A. E. Sanderson
W. E. Ball

The presentation of the beautiful cabinet of silver was made on behalf of the congregation by Mr. E. Ball.

The sentiments of the address were confirmed in short remarks by members of the congregation who had had pleasant experience and have pleasand recollections of the fidelity and excellence of Miss White's work.

Mrs. Robson replied in a very graceful and grateful manner to the address, and Mr. Robson also expressed his appreciation.

Refreshments and social intercourse brought a delightful evening to a close.

WAR VETERANS AT KNOX CHURCH

LISTEN TO APPROPRIATE SERMON BY REV. J. A. MACKENZIE.

The War Veterans attended the morning service at Knox Church yesterday. About 10:30 the men assembled at the Armories, and, headed by the 57th Band, marched to the church. There were about twenty returned soldiers in the parade, and a number who were not able to walk found transportation provided for them by kindly auto owners.

Rev. J. A. MacKenzie preached the sermon, which dealt with the splendid work of the Canadians at the famous battles of Ypres, St. Julien, Langemarck and others that will go to make our Dominion famous in the world's history.

REBEKAH REHEARSAL.

There will be a practice of all taking part in "Rebekah" this evening at 8 o'clock. All interested are invited to attend.

WHAT FARMERS OFFER

Willing to Give as High as $32 a Month for Boys

Dr. Riddell, superintendent of the Trades and Labor Branch, who is looking after the applications for help for farmers throughout Ontario at the head office in Queen's Park, has made out a table showing just what the farmers are offering.

The highest wages that has been offered for boys is $32 a month, while the general wage offered for boys is $15 a month. For single men the farmers have offered as high as $50 a month, while the general wage has been $30 a month. Married men have been offered as high as $50 and a cottage, while the general wage offered is $35 and a cottage. For a married couple the highest wage without a cottage has been $50 a month, and the general wage $40 a month.

A BIT OF FLUFF SHOW OF LAUGHS AT OPERA HOUSE

ALBERT BROWN AND HIS COMPANY DELIGHT THEATREGOERS.

Albert Brown in his new play delighted a large audience at the Grand Opera House on Saturday night. It had been hailed in the different newspapers as a show of laughs, and it certainly was. Whether it caught the majority or the audience just as well as his other production "The White Feather," is doubtful, but, at any rate, every one was satisfied. The production affords Albert Brown an opportunity to play a type which he has never before presented to the Canadian public. His part was that of a good young man, a London mission worker, who by an extraordinary disarrangement of circumstances, was compelled to assume many guises foreign to his character. Each transformation was accompanied by screamingly funny episodes, and before the curtain drops something of the old Adam developed in him. It was a part that called for the highest order of comic versatility, and Mr. Brown proved equal to the occasion. The supporting members of the cast also gave their respective roles excellent characterization.

Bandying Authorities.

Surprised am I that our gloomy pacifist friends have not hurled Holy Writ at the heads of those young soldiers who take a bride, kiss her good-bye and rush off to war. There is good Biblical authority for calling down these youthful patriots, declares a writer in the Philadelphia Public Ledger. In Deuteronomy you will find this direct command: "When a man hath taken a new wife, he shall not go out to war, neither shall he be charged with any business, but he shall be free at home one year and shall cheer up his wife which he hath taken." But that is an injunction hardly any man heeds—a year's honeymoon. And if the pacifist again quotes Scriptures against fighting, "Scatter thou the people that delight in war," the advocates of standing up for our own rights can throw back this indignant question of Moses: "Shall your brethren go to war and shall ye sit here?"

DEMOCRACY SOUNDS THE DEATH KNELL OF GERMANY

Rev. R. B. Grobb Preaches Eloquent Sermon to Oddfellows---The World on the Threshold of a Golden Age.

The Peterborough Odd Fellows attended All Saints' Church last night and listened to a splendid sermon from Rev. R. B. Grobb. The front main section of the nave had been reserved for the visiting brethren, and the rest was filled with members and friends of the congregation. The altar was covered with vases of beautiful flowers, the gift of some Odd Fellow members in memory of the late Brother Benjamin Cooney, a very active member of the church during his life.

The text of the sermon was taken from the 17th verse of the 2nd chapter of the first epistle of St. Peter: "Love the Brotherhood, Fear God, Honor the King." In opening, the rector extended a very cordial welcome to the Odd Fellows and congratulated them on the fact that it was the 98th anniversary of the founding of the Order in America, the first lodge having been founded by Thomas Wyldie in Baltimore on the 22nd of April, 1819. Wyldie had been imbued with the spirit of the Order and was always anxious to promote its advancement, and he lived to see the splendid institution of the original five members which constituted the first lodge in Baltimore. The wonderful confidence of the human heart, the desire of all men to fraternize, was referred to, and the fact that many of us feel things we never express was condemned. It was to the glory of the Order to which they belonged that it was an obligation to give expression to these feelings.

The danger that arose from prejudice was another point made by Mr. Grobb. It was the highest wall in the world. Break it down and you open up an understanding between man and man and a more congenial companionship, and, like the Order, it would be a great force for good.

Rev. Mr. Grobb took up at considerable length the wonderful age through which the world was passing. The advancement of freedom so that a world democracy was an almost assured fact, the triumph of the people in the past few weeks in Russia, and the liberation of the hundreds of thousands of prisoners from the "living death" of Siberia, were all evidences of the statement. The crowning sin of Germany was that Germany had exalted Germany and things German and forgotten God. The death knell of Germany had been sounded by the development of democracy, and the people paying more attention to man's duty to man. The pouncing upon the people by a miserable autocracy was a thing of the past, and no one knew it better than the Kaiser.

The message of the war today was "Love the Brotherhood," and in this connection the speaker commended one of the Odd Fellow rules which commanded that a Bible be kept in all lodge halls, emblematic of the three links, Friendship, Truth and Love. Friendship and Love were founded on Truth. Fraternity will stand only when founded on a Christian foundation. Blest be the tie that binds.

In conclusion, Mr. Grobb dealt with the religious shipwreck of Germany. It was reported that they were tearing the leaves out of Bibles and telling the people that the teachings were only fables. Hold fast to the truth of God's Word. Reference was made to the day being the anniversary of the wonderful battle of Ypres, and that St. George's Day follows. It was a very wonderful thing the way the cords that bind the British Empire together had been tightened. German ideas of a disruption in the Empire had been balked and a consolidation formed that guaranteed to the world a future liberty. If there ever was a Divinely appointed institution it was the British Empire, and it appeared to be God's chosen nation guaranteeing the Divine right of kings and the wonderful British traditions of freedom.

The music selected for the service was of a nature in keeping with the anniversaries that were commemorated.

BEATS THE GERMAN DOLL.

Canadian Manufacturer Says Problem is Solved.

Something of a sensation was caused at the Toy Fair in Toronto when a manufacturer announced that he had succeeded in making a better doll than the once-famous article produced in Germany. Several previous attempts resulted in failure. Manufacturers in Canada and the United States have tried for years, since the war especially, to duplicate the German dolls, but have never had much success. There was something the matter in the process, but was of such a nature that the trouble could never be found. One large doll house established a kiln and secured the services of several foreigners who had previously worked in toy factories in Europe but the finished article was of a very poor grade. Finally one of the Germans employed in the chemical department volunteered the information that the clay used in his country and the atmosphere were responsible for the high grade dolls.

Last spring at the Toy Fair the subject of producing a better doll than the Germans was discussed, both pro and con. Most toy men thought the task impossible, but one maker thought it could be done. He secured the services of a French and English sculptor and an Italian expert on bisque. Several Italian mechanics were also engaged and the work started. After numerous difficulties and setbacks from time to time he produced a doll which, it is claimed, is better than those produced in Germany. The head is better and will stand much more hard usage. One large wholesaler stated that the doll is excellent and will find a big market if the price is right.

Dolls are the largest item on every buyers' list and for years great sums have been spent in the United States and in foreign countries for this class of toy. Receipts in the different stores throughout the country have been enormous and Canadian manufacturers are determined to keep this trade in Canada.

A Gift for the Kaiser.

Here is a story from the German front regarding certain little tricks the Canadians played on the Huns while attempting to celebrate the Kaiser's birthday. It is from the Berlin Tagblatt and written by Franz Quigge, who was official correspondent at that time. It refers to the Canadians as "barbarians."

"First," it says, "they sneak over the snow-covered ground to the shelter in our trenches which is as icy as their own freezing country, and they even explore our trenches. While one famous Bavarian battalion was celebrating the Kaiser's birthday our sergeant, against all discipline, suddenly interrupted festivities and pointed to a sinister looking bottle on top of a dugout in which reposed a cuckoo's egg. The sergeant had already had experience with Canadian barbarians' tricks, so he urged the officers not to attempt to take it. They did, and it exploded, and from the parapet came a chorus wishing 'many happy returns, Kaiser Bill.' "

The same correspondent refers to letters which had been found on prisoners from Canadian women in England after the peace note had been sounded, which, incomprehensible to the Teuton mind, urges these same barbarians to kill all Germans they can before peace can be declared.

The correspondent goes on to say that "of all the devilish fiends our brave Germans have ever been against, the Canadians are certainly the worst, and one never knows when they have crawled over the parapets and are behind them."

It is a sign of the times that this is printed in a paper like the Tagblatt, and is some little compliment for the many raids which seem to have struck a slight terror in the Huns who oppose us.

The Real "Jack Horner."

There is a belief in some quarters that the familiar nursery rhyme which relates to the youth who "sat in a corner" had its origin during the Reformation. The head of Glastonbury Abbey resolved to make his peace with Henry the Eighth, and in token thereof sent certain title-deeds of abbey property to the King at Whitehall. For security's sake the abbot placed the documents in a pie-dish and covered them with a crust. The dish he gave to a rustic named Jack Horner, and he told him to carry it by the high road to the King in London. On the road Jack Horner became hungry, and came to the conclusion that it would be foolish to starve while he had a pie in his hands, so he broke the crust and put in his thumb and pulled out a roll of parchment. Disgusted and disappointed, he threw both pie and parchment into a brook. When the deeds did not appear the King charged the abbot with contumacy, and commanded that the unfortunate cleric should be hanged.

Ontario's Generosity.

Sir John Hendrie has received a letter from Sir Robert Hudson, chairman of the Finance Committee of the British Red Cross Society, acknowledging a cheque for £47,225 12s 6d, a further contribution from "Our Day," 1916. This brings the amount from Ontario up to the present, to the immense sum of £347,225 12s 6d, thus outdistancing every other part of the British Empire, he states. His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, as Prior to the Order of St. John, and Lord Lansdowne, as chairman of the council of the British Red Cross, asked that in every way possible their thanks be made known to all who so generously contributed to bring about this magnificent result.

ELLIOT'S

HISTORIC PLYMOUTH.

A Name That Recalls the Brave Days of Old.

The recent notice served on the neutral consuls in London that for the remainder of the war only British and Entente allied ships will be permitted to enter the port of Plymouth, calls attention to one of the most historic towns of England, second to none in the influence which it has exerted on the history of our own country. The town is located near the south-west corner of England, at the mouth of the river Plym. The site is on a series of natural terraces sloping south to the sea, and forming part of the foot-hills of Dartmoor. The harbor, one of the finest and largest in the kingdom, opens to the South.

"'Tis a notable old town," said Longfellow, and every patriotic Canadian who has visited there has trod lightly and with reverence. Out of the harbor of Plymouth sailed Sir John Hawkins and Sir Francis Drake to meet and conquer the Spanish Armada, a feat which wrote "finish" to the sea-power of Spain. Had Philip succeeded in his design to crush the British lion in 1588 the history of this republic would have borne little of the English impress. Sir Humphrey Gilbert sailed from here to take possession of Newfoundland; Sir Walter Raleigh to colonize Virginia; and in 1620 the Mayflower spread its sails at the barbican of Plymouth on its daring expedition to the new country.

To Plymouth men was given the first charter for trading with America and to Plymouth men, also King James gave a charter whereby the region which has been called "the North Paris of Virginia" was to be the domain of "the council established at Plymouth in the county of Devon, for the planting, ruling, orderly and governing of New England in America.' The first colonists of Australia (not the Botany Bay convicts) took ship at this port for their home beyond the seas. Here, also embarked the brave troops which fell in the Crimean war, and a year or so later the troops sent out to quell the Indian mutiny.

The principal sights of interest in Plymouth are St. Andrew's church, in the centre of the town, built in the thirteenth century and restored by Sir Gilbert Scott in 1875; the old Guildhall, now a public library; the old town hall, now a museum of old books, drawings, printings, and portraits, among which is to be found Earl of Edgecumbe, built in the reign of Henry VIII.; the Eddystone Lighthouse; and the Citadel, on the eastern portion of the Hoe, constructed in 1616. Most interesting of all is the Hoe, a hill 110 feet above the sea, the top of which is laid out to parks and gardens, and the most wonderful promenade in the kingdom. It was on this hill that the fabled wrestling matches between the Trojan Corinæus and the Giant Gœmagot (Gogmagog) took place. To Corinæus, who held "it a diversion to encounter giants" was reserved the privilege of wrestling with this being "twelve cubits high," after the Trojans apparently took little interest in the encounter until the giant had broken three of his ribs, which so provoked Corinæus that, taking the giant on his shoulders he ran with him to the shore, and "getting upon the top of a huge rock, hurled down the savage monster into the sea. There falling on the sides of craggy rocks he was torn to pieces, and colored the waves red with his blood."

To the world of arms, art, and song Plymouth has made large contributions. Three Royal Academicians and one president of the Royal Academy were born there. Among the painters are Sir Charles Eastlake, Samuel Prout, James Northcote, Benjamin Robert Haydon, Solomon Hart, and many others, while Sir Joshua Reynolds was born four miles away in the little town of Plymton.

A Restful Place.

The office boy in our printing office this morning rushed in with the information that a very much excited lady waited outside. "Take her to the composing room for a minute, boy," said the boss.

MEXICO'S NATIONAL DISH.

Mole de Guajolota Not Chile Con Carne is the Word.

Canadians in some mysterious way have gained the impression that the national food of Mexico is chile con carne, a hot composition of peppers and meat. Canadians also hear much about frijoles and tortillas, the first being a preparation of beans boiled and then fried, and the second being a preparation of cornmeal cakes somewhat resembling griddle cakes. Ask a Mexican what the national dish of his country is and he will no doubt answer "mole de guajolota."

Though Mexican cooks show individuality in the preparation of mole de guajolota, it is usually a combination of raisins, almonds, peanuts, cinnamon, chocolate, "ajonjolin," cominos, anise, four or five different varieties of chiles, garlic, tomatoes, and perhaps some other ingredients. These ingredients are thoroughly ground and mixed and put to stew in an enormous earthen bowl, with perhaps barely sufficient lard and water to leaven the mass properly, while it is left to stew for perhaps two or three hours. While it is stewing one or two turkeys are cut up into small pieces and dropped into the bowl to be thoroughly cooked in this rich gravy.

It is said that the turkey cooked in this gravy gives to the "mole" a rich turkey taste, while the "mole" itself gives the turkey a savor unsurpassed. In popular speech the long name of this dish is contracted to "mole" and which is pronounced "mo-lay."

In Mexico City there is, or at least until recently there was, a firm doing a large business in cooking and canning mole, and it is to be found in all the good grocery stores of the country. It has been urged in Mexico that an export trade might be built up for canned mole very much as a trade was built up for French sardines, German bratwurst, Russian caviar, Scotch herrings, Oxford sausages, Italian tomato paste, and Seville olives, and other articles of preserved food. An enthusiast on the subject of mole has written: "There is not the slightest doubt in the world but what it would take big in the United States and England. It is a dish so entirely toothsome that there is not the remotest fear but what the people of New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, London, and Paris would go crazy about it, and that would have as great a vogue as did chile con carne, tomales, chile sauce and Hungarian goulasch."

M. Venizelos Explains Why King Constantine Must Give Up His Throne

THE TEMPS reproduces the most important passages of an interview which M. Venizelos granted recently to a special representative of the Havas agency. The Greek statesman dealt with the motives which had compelled his political attitude during the European war. Having recalled the conditions in which he was kept from power, after having obtained a majority in the 1915 elections, he referred to the second occasion on which, in a perfectly unconstitutional manner, he was kept from office. "It was at this point," said M. Venizelos to his interviewer, "that I might have considered revolution. You want to know why I did not adopt that plan? First of all, because a government man cannot, in 24 hours, become a revolutionary, any more than a nation can plunge with a light heart into the convulsions of civil war, especially at a time when its hereditary enemy is massed on its frontiers. It is only when all other means have failed that such methods can be considered. If, previous to the Bulgarian invasion of Macedonia, I had started a civil war, public opinion might have considered me responsible for that invasion and this would certainly have been a drawback to the cause for which I stand. Limited to my own resources I could not have succeeded. Not being able to count on the Greek army, the majority of whose officers are devoted to the King, I was risking the defeat of the Liberal Party if civil war had broken out."

M. VENIZELOS

"You want to know why I did not at once give my movement an antidynastic character, since I knew and had declared that King Constantine had betrayed his country? The reply is a simple one; it was not my intention to change either the form of government or the reigning dynasty. What I wanted was to fulfill, as far as possible, our alliance obligations to Serbia, co-operate with the Allied armies in turning the Bulgarians out of our territory, and contribute, in so far as we could, to the final victory, by bringing Greece back to its traditional policy at the side of the protecting powers. After the war and following on the success which I expected, we could have re-established our constitutional liberties by calling a constituent assembly for that purpose."

M. Venizelos went on to say that after his arrival in Salonica he intended to have visited the islands of the Ionian Sea which stood for the Venizelist cause and to have raised important contingents which would have helped to hold Greece in the interests of the Allies, but the Ekaterini incident occurred which put a stop to his plans.

Following on this incident it was decided to create a neutral zone which prevented his access to Thessaly and Epirus, preventing thus all development of the movement in these provinces which were Venizelist. "Our military organization," continued M. Venizelos, "is so advanced that when the support decided upon at the Boulogne Conference is placed at our disposal we shall be able to have 60,000 men under arms, which would permit us not only to meet all the necessities of [illegible] sions to the front, while maintaining in our depots more than 13,000 men to fill gaps and maintain our divisions at their full strength. In three months' time we shall be ready to mobilize the Cyclades division which we are at present organizing. It is not impossible that we shall be able to form a fifth division, when the reign of terror having ceased in Old Greece, a number of officers and subalterns will once more, as is most probable, join our ranks. This is all over and above the thousands of Greek workmen who have been provided for the Allies for various purposes. . . . If Germany were, by any chance, victorious, autocracy under King Constantine would be established in Greece and we should have to disappear. But if Germany is finally beaten, as I am certain she will be, everybody will understand that King Constantine, who has stepped from his constitutional throne to become a mere party leader, must suffer the consequences of the defeat of his policy, just as any political leader has to suffer from defeat."

Illuminating gas is now extracted from a mixture of peat and coal.

Colored Veils Worn.

Colored veils are being worn to a considerable extent. Beige, gray and navy are the most popular colors. The embroidered veil continues to dominate, yet one sees a combination of colors; for example, beige colored embroidery on a navy veil is smart, again gray on navy. Black and white combinations are making their appearance in increasing number. We note white chenille embroidery on a fine black hexagon mesh. There seems to be a wane in metallic embroidered veils.

Cheesecloth Bags.

Refrigerator bags are a comfort. They are plain and made of white cheesecloth, with white drawstrings at the top. The name of the contents of each bag is written in a running stitch across the side in a fast shade of blue. The celery bag is made long and slender, lettuce bag wide and short and parsley small and square.

A set of these bags is a welcome gift to a friend just starting housekeeping.

Bachelor Privileges.

Wife—Dear me! You can never find a thing without asking me where it is. How did you get along before you were married? Hub—Things stayed where they were put then.

UNCERTAIN LIFE.

Nature has lent us life with no fixing the day of payment, and uncertainty is one of the conditions of its tenure.—Cicero.

BETWEEN SEASONS.

Just the Kind of Hat You Need For Spring Wear.

Beige straw in a fascinating new rough weave with a draped silk crown is here mounted by an odd white wing that gives a military dash to the contour of the hat. Turbans were never so trig as this season.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

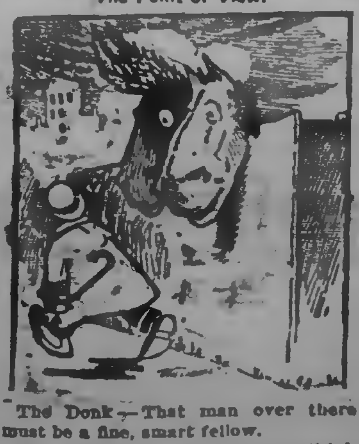
N.B.— Unauthorized publication of this advertisement will not be paid for.

Times Changes.

In days of old, when knights were bold
And by their courage swore,
Without a trace of fear they'd face
Eternity's veiled door.

But, oh, the men have changed since then!
From danger now they fly.
Alas, 'tis true, 'tis women who
Are not afraid to dye.

The Point of View.



The Donk—That man over there must be a fine, smart fellow.

The Steed—What makes you think so?

The Donk—I hear every one speak of him as a perfect donkey.

Sofa Song.

The young man sputters and stutters;
His nerve to the post he glues it,
Asks the maid of his choice
As he finds his voice
At the time he ought to lose it.

Valuable.

"When she was an actress on the legitimate she got two hundred a week, and now in the movies she gets five hundred."

"Well, it's worth three hundred a week to keep any woman from talking."

SANCTITY OF BALLOT

One of the first duties of the newer Canadian citizenship is instruction in the meaning and sanctity of the franchise—not so much its extension as a better appreciation of what it means on the part of those already possessing it. But this, after all, depends in a large measure upon the independence and intelligence of the individual voter, which again depends upon native character and public opinion. Up until quite recently, we citizens generally have never heartily approved of either the independent candidate or vote. Quite frequently we talked of independence, that is, when there was no election in sight, and probably boast of our own independence, but when the elections came along, or any measure came up for public discussion, we scurried away to our several party camps and awaited orders. Independence! Bah! We were so thoroughly wedded to our own particular party that nothing else would do, and we liked to know that when we died the editor of our particular party journal would note in our obituary that we had been a life-long Conservative or Liberal—rather than to simply state we had been good citizens (though both statements might be said with truth). The fact is, that our party affiliations stood for citizenship. But party loyalty, as we have had it, has too often degenerated into something totally hostile to the true purpose of the secret ballot and its purpose will never be achieved until we recognize the necessity for an intelligent, independent electorate, and have a really consecrated discharge of this greatest of all privileges of citizenship marking our ballots.—E. K. Marshall, B.A.

LIFE OF A BOOK FROM START TO FINISH

What a Printer's Warehouseman Has to Know—Warehouse is an Indispensable Part in Printing

The warehouse in a printing establishment is the place where the finishing touches are given to the printer's work, and is not merely a packing and despatching department. A warehouseman here has to be something of a stationer, bookbinder, and publisher as well. The duties of a printer's warehouseman vary according to the particular work done by the weekly papers. In the first case he will deal with much fancy and small work, from visiting cards, dainty programmes, trade stationery, labels and leaflets, and all the varied small jobs required by the public demand.

Making the Book

In dealing with book work, the printer's warehouseman has to bring various kinds of ingenious machinery into play to aid him in his work, such as folding, rolling, and stitching machines. If you look at the back of any volume you will notice that it is put together in so many portions. These consist of sheets containing a certain even number of pages, usually thirty-two, and the first operation in putting a book together is to fold the printed sheets so that all the pages face one another in their right order.

It is very interesting to watch the work of a folding machine as it snaps in the sheets with a jerk, and then delivers them, rapidly folded, and packs them one after the other into a slide tray. A large amount of folding work is done by hand as well, and in this women are very adept. Drawing one edge of the sheet over the other with the left hand, with the right they skilfully and rapidly press the folder, a small piece of shaped bone or wood, along the folded edge, repeating the operation as many times as required. When folded, the sheets of a book have to be collated in proper sequence. To aid the warehouseman to do this rapidly and correctly, each sheet of printed matter is lettered in alphabetical order.

The Work of a Day

If they require to be stitched, the papers will have to be passed through the wire stitchers, and then be gathered again to be placed in the cutting machines and their edges trimmed up. Usually, however, with the printing machines now in use, this stitching and trimming are done during the process of printing. The last operation with which the printer's warehouseman is concerned in connection with the publishing of a weekly periodical is to see the copies despatched to the wholesale newsagents, after all the parcels have been carefully labelled for their various destinations—north, south, east, or west. With a scheduled list in hand, he sees the goods packed into the right vans, and their labors are over until next publishing [illegible]

COLOR BLINDNESS TEST

A new and accurate test for color blindness has been devised in Sweden. It is made with a chart on which are evenly scattered patches of color, all very much alike and of irregular outline, showing the white background between them all. They are a light and a dark reddish lavender and a full cherry red. The dull red patches are arranged in such a way that they form a large figure, 3 or 6, but as these are exactly the same tone as the lighter lavender it would be impossible to distinguish the figure unless one was certain of the difference in tint between the red and the lavender. The figures are to be spoken aloud as read.

MONEY NOT ALWAYS METAL

Some Nations Use Leather, Fur and Porcelain

M[illegible] people have come to regard coins as being necessarily made from metal of some sort. This, however, is by no means invariably the case. Porcelain money is in use to-day in Burma and Siam, and feather money, manufactured from the short red feathers from beneath the wings of a species of parrot, is the ordinary currency of the Santa Cruz islanders.

The Loyalty islands, which lie in the Pacific to the east of Australia, are famous for their fur money. The fur, which is taken from behind the ears of the so-called "flying fox," in reality a large fruit-eating bat, is woven into cords of various lengths, and these constitute the ordinary currency of the islanders. [illegible] money was put into circulation in Germany on October 1, 1916. In Mexico cardboard money is in use, owing to the disappearance of metal currency due to the unsettled state of the country. Cardboard pennies and half-pennies to the value of $350,000 were also issued at Toulouse, in France, in September, 1916.

BILLION DOLLAR TRUST

U.S. Steel Trust Biggest Concern in the World

Mr. Carnegie's vast operations and the fright they gave the other money kings of America, brought about the creation of that colossal combine which is called the Billion Dollar Trust, organized by Mr. Schwab and John W. Gates and floated by Mr. Morgan, the father of the present head of the Morgan concerns. It represented the creation of new capital amounting to 1,400 million dollars, hence its nickname. This trust, which bought out Mr Carnegie, is now the United States Steel Trust probably the biggest concern in the world. Following on this transaction Mr. Morgan also brought into being the North Atlantic Steamboat Trust, which meant 120 million dollars, and the "Harvester" Trust, with a capital of 140 million dollars. And all this in the space of three years!

It is stated that it is an unwritten law and custom at the London docks not to employ a man wearing glasses.

SACRED LAKE IN ASHANTI

Natives Believe It to be Haunted by Powerful God

In Central Ashanti, West Africa, there is a sacred lake, Bosumtwi, which lies about eighteen miles southeast of Coomassie, and is the only real lake in the country. It is roughly circular in shape, with a diameter of four miles, and lies in a deep depression with sides rising to six hundred and seven hundred feet above its surface. It has never been fathomed. An attempt was made to sound it by A. J. Philbrick, acting chief commissioner of Ashanti, but the line broke after five hundred feet had been lowered. The water is fresh, though the lake has no outlet, and only a few small annual streams flow into it. The Ashantis regard the lake as a great fetish, believing that it is the abode of a powerful and energetic spirit which manifests itself, among other ways, by flashing lights on the surface and making noises like the discharge of artillery. There are numerous villages round the lake, but no canoes, paddles, fishhooks or brass pans are allowed on or near to it. The natives do, however, permit themselves to catch the fish which abound in the lake, and they resort to an ingenious method of overcoming the disabilities imposed on them by its sacred character. Plaited reed mats with gaping mouths are taken out from the shore by men lying face downwards on cigar shaped logs of wood. They propel themselves by paddling with their hands, and, having set the mats as a trap, they retire long enough to allow the fish to enter. They then return very quickly in the same fashion, pull together the two parts of the trap, and retire with their [illegible]

DOOR WITH SEVEN LOCKS

Westminster Abbey Has Many Interesting Parts

A London paper writes: Few who explore Westminster Abbey are aware that there are many of its most ancient and interesting parts of which they have never had a glimpse. For instance, in the eastern cloisters there is a door so guarded against unauthorized intrusion that it can only be opened by seven keys, which are in the jealous custody of as many Government officials. Five of the keyholes of this wonderful door, which is covered with human skins, are concealed from view by a stout iron bar which traverses it. This door gives access to a vaulted chamber, known as the Chapel of the Pyx, the walls of which were standing as they stand to-day before even the Norman Conqueror landed in Sussex. The chamber was once the Treasury of England, to which were brought "the most cherished possessions of the State." The regalia of the Scottish Kings and the Holy Cross of Holyrood were deposited here, and for many years it served as a mint for coining silver and gold. It was centuries ago, the scene of a daring robbery, and to-day it contains, in addition to a stone altar, some old chests one of which is said to have held the jewels of Norman kings.

WESTERN BANKERS SURPRISED BY WEST

Directors See Peace River Development—Find Branch Managers Alert—Advice to Farmers

The Directors of the Union Bank of Canada, accompanied by a few invited guests, undertook in 1916 a trip of thirteen days of inspection of Western Canada with reference to local conditions and prospects [illegible] and, specifically, with reference to their own branches extending throughout the Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. Their report says: During this trip we met 192 Branch Managers, with whom the Directors discussed very freely their respective local conditions and prospects. The meeting of these Branch Managers (most of them young, vigorous, intelligent men) to some of us was a revelation. We found them uniformly loyal and enthusiastic workers for the good of the Union Bank, well advised as to their own local conditions, and what was required for the betterment of these conditions as respects mixed farming. The paying of greater attention to stock raising, thereby minimizing the risk with which a business or a community constantly stands in peril by reason of depending upon one crop only.

Thrifty Paying Debts

We saw some very wonderful agricultural development at different points and a very noticeable appearance of thrift and prosperity in the purely agricultural districts among the farmers. We also found a very satisfactory condition prevailing in the larger towns and cities of the West with regard to commercial affairs, which seem to have been reduced to dealings in staple articles and necessities of life rather than the luxuries. In these lines there was reported a very satisfactory volume of business. We also found an enormous amount of liquidation of indebtedness, particularly among the farmers, by reason of the exceptionally large crops of grain, with good prices during the years of 1915 and 1916.

Railways and Courage

The trip was very interesting to many of the Directors by reason of the passing through of so much new and hitherto, to them, unknown territory, and particularly the Peace River country, which seemed to open up an enormous field for settlement at a later date. The Peace River country is now being invaded by the iron trail under the vigorous auspices of Mr. J. D. McArthur, who has extended the rails of the Edmonton, Dunvegan and British Columbia Railway to Peace River Crossing, and it is to be hoped that he will receive a full measure of reward for the courage he has displayed in this undertaking, and, in this connection, it is only proper to state our hearty appreciation to Mr. McArthur for the many courtesies received at his hands during the progress of this trip.

SEVEN FISHING AREAS

Canada's Great Industry Has Seven Distinct Divisions

A bird's-eye view of Canada's fisheries may be afforded by dividing the country into seven fishery divisions: (1) Atlantic deep sea fisheries, embracing the famous Cod Banks, from which are taken cod, mackerel, haddock, halibut, herring, hake, seals and whales of annual value of $12,000,000. (2) The estuaries and inland waters of the Maritime Provinces and Quebec, producing lobsters, clams, oysters, salmon, shad, gaspereaux, striped bass, smelts, fresh water salmon, trout, lake trout, pickerel, etc., annual value of $4,000,000. (3) The Great Lakes and tributary waters, producing whitefish, pike-perch, black bass, maskinonge, catfish [illegible],000 annually. (4) Northern [illegible] from Lake of the Woods to Lower Slave Lake, producing [illegible] gold-eye—an excellent fresh water herring—and caviare, value $1,000,000. (5) Rocky Mountain Plateau, embracing little developed fisheries, including salmon, whitefish, trout, grayling, etc. (6) Pacific Coast fisheries, including the great salmon canning and curing industries, the immense halibut fisheries, black cod, etc., value $14,000,000. (7) The Hudson Bay and Peri-Arctic division, embracing whale, walrus, sea trout, herring, sturgeon, cod, salmon, etc.—the richest whale and walrus grounds in the world.

SEEN 75 MILES AWAY

Interesting Facts About Lights and Lighthouses

The tallest lighthouse on the coasts of the United States is at Cape Hatteras, 200 feet high. The brightest light is on the Navesink Highlands, at the southern entrance to New York harbor. Its candle-power is about 25,000,000; it is visible twenty-two miles at sea under unusual conditions of the atmosphere. The highest light is at Cape Mendocino, Cal., 422 feet above sea level. The first lighthouse on the American continent was built in 1715-16 at the entrance to Boston Harbor.

Forest Fire Menace

The number of fires suppressed on national forest lands during the calendar year 1915 was 6,324, as against 7,014 in 1915, and an average annual number of 4,769 during the last five years. While more than the average number of fires occurred, the timber area burned over was only 155,416 acres, or 30 per cent. less than the average year a year for the period 1914-1915 inclusive. The average loss a fire was $60.41. Forty-four per cent. of the fires were confined to areas of less than one-quarter of an acre.

Bibles To Cost More

It will cost the British and Foreign Bible Society an extra $40,000 to replace 68,000 Bibles lost in vessels sunk by submarines in 1917 owing to the increased cost of paper and labor.

Daylight Photography

Apparatus with which photographic plates can be loaded into holders or removed and developed in daylight has been invented by a South Dakota man.

TOTAL ABSTAINERS

Curious Menagerie on Henderson Island

Recent investigations on the little known and rarely visited Henderson or Elizabeth Island have led to the discovery of a complete and curious little colony of zoological total abstainers. The island, which is uninhabited, is situated about 120 miles northeast of Pitcairn Island—itself sufficiently out of the way, but famous as the home of the descendants of the mutineers of the Bounty. There is no water on it, not even a swamp, and it is only six miles long, yet it harbors quite a menagerie—a kind of rat, a lizard, described as very abundant, and no fewer than four kinds of birds, all peculiar to the island. These are a fruit pigeon, a lorikeet or honey-eating parrakeet, a little rail or crake and a reed warbler. The strange thing about the inmates of this curious little natural aviary of coral rock, surrounded by waves instead of [illegible], is that two of its inmates are birds, one especially associated with water—the rail and the warbler.

Boiled Icing

To one cupful of granulated sugar add three tablespoonfuls of cold water and the white of an egg unbeaten. Put in the top of a double boiler, have the water in the lower part boiling and beat with an egg beater for eight minutes. This is soft and creamy and may be used for filling as well.

THANK THE CITIZENS

Women's Patriotic League of Ashburnham Grateful for Aid.

The Women's Patriotic League of Ashburnham wish to thank those who so generously contributed papers, etc., toward the collection made by the League on Thursday last. This was largely due to the co-operation of contributors who so thoughtfully had their parcels ready and tied in bundles for the collectors. The collection was the most successful of any yet made.

The contributions of papers in all parts of the city were the most gratifying and showed an appreciation of the needs of the Red Cross work. It also shows that the people of the city are realizing more than ever before the necessity for conservation.

The ladies of the League also desire to thank those who so kindly put their cars and motor trucks at the disposal of the League and also those who volunteered their services in packing the car.

OBITUARY

GEORGE AHERN.

George Ahearn, a well-known resident of the city, died in St. Joseph's Hospital yesterday after an illness which had lasted since Christmas. He was born in Ireland 55 years ago. For many years he was employed by the Peterborough Lock Co., but latterly had been in charge of the T. A. S. building.

He is survived by Mrs. Ahearn, two daughters, Misses Aileen and Lizzie, and four sons, George, Joseph, David and William, Peterborough. Mrs. M. Riley of this city and Mrs. O'Neill, of Meriden, Conn., are sisters, and Mr David Ahearn, of Troy, N.Y., is a brother.

The funeral will take place tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock from the family residence, 423 Downie street, to St. Peter's Cathedral and thence to St. Peter's cemetery.

EDWARD PAGE.

Edward Page, an old resident of Otonabee, died this morning after an extended illness. He was 85 years of age, and had lived the greater part of his life in the County of Peterborough. He is survived by five daughters: Mrs. Sheppard, Toronto, and Mrs Thorndyke, Mrs. Robinson, Mrs. Baker, and Miss Violet Page, all of this city, and two sons, Messrs. Wellington and William Page, Toronto.

The funeral will be held from the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Thorndyke, just past the locks in Otonabee, on Wednesday at 1:30 p.m. to the Fraserville cemetery.

JOSEPH HOPKINS.

Joseph Hopkins died at his residence, Lot 10, Con. 12, North Monaghan, on Sunday, after a year's illness. He was born in Millbrook 66 years ago. His wife, who survives him, was Martha Alexander, whom he married 37 years ago. One son, Walter Hopkins, who lives at home, also survives him.

The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock to the Little Lake Cemetery. Services will be conducted by Rev. Dr. Wilson.

MRS. ALEX. REID.

Eliza Amelia McCauley, wife of Mr. Alex. Reid, 212 Aylmer street, died yesterday after an illness of less than a week's duration. She was a daughter of Mr. Robt. McCauley of Chandos, where she was born about 38 years ago. Surviving her are her husband and three daughters: Misses Alice, Ray and Rohna, and two sons, Russel and Eddie.

Mr. Reid was in Park Rapids, Minnesota, at the time of his wife's death and is expected to arrive this evening.

The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 to the Little Lake Cemetery. Rev. Canon Cornish will conduct the services.

The funeral services will be under the auspices of the I. O. F.

FINAL FIGURES IN COURT HOUSE FIRE INSURANCE

COMMITTEE EXPLAIN THE DELAY IN GETTING ADJUSTMENT.

Editor Review: Satisfactory settlement has been made in the settlement of the Court House Insurance. Delay in taking the initiative in restoring the building has been caused as a result of the difference of appraisement of Mr. Wm. Langford and that of Messrs. J. Finnie and J. G. Graham.

The adjustor for the various insurance companies requested some time to consider, and after obtaining the figures of a third party's appraisement, response was made in accordance with the appraisement of Messrs. Finnie and Graham, whose figures were in the neighborhood of $19,000.00 and Mr. Langford's figures in the neighborhood of $13,000.00.

The committee acknowledge the interest taken by Messrs. Hill & Weddell on behalf of their agent, Mr. Hope, of Otonabee, also the interest taken by Mr. Richardson or Norwood, in bringing about a settlement satisfactory to all concerned.

By order of the committee.

FIERCEST FIGHT SINCE WAR BEGAN

THREE LOCAL MEN REPORTED KILLED IN TODAY'S LIST

Ptes. Percy Mann, Cecil Bennett and John McGregor Give up Lives For Empire---Long Roll of Those in Hospital.

Peterboro again contributed very heavily to the casualty list as issued today, and some of the local heroes have paid the supreme price. There are a number of others that have been sent to relatives here in the city, but it is' impossible to get trace of all of them.

The list as far as is at present known is:—

PTE. MANN KILLED

Mr. Sherman received word that his son, Private Percy Mann, who left here with the 93rd, had been killed in action.

DIED OF WOUNDS

Pte. John McGregor, also a member of the 93rd, is reported as having died of wounds.

PTE. CECIL BENNETT KILLED

Pte. Cecil Bennett, whose next of kin live near Mounut Pleasant, and who enlisted with the local battalion is also reported as having paid the supreme price.

PTE. SNIDER WOUNDED

Private W. E. Snider, of the 93rd Battalion, who lives at Glen Alda, is reported wounded.

PTE. TOMS WOUNDED

Private E. I. Toms, who formerly lived on Chamberlain Street, and a member of the 93rd, is reported wounded.

PTE. T. E. GRANT

Pte. T. E. Grant, of Bobcaygeon, is reported as wounded in today's list.

PTE. J. A. LOUDEN

Mr. W. Louden, 499 Donegal St., received word this morning that Pte. J. A. Louden, a member of the 93rd had been injured in the fighting on April 10th, and had been admitted to No. 7 General Hospital at Etaples, suffering with a shrapnel wound in the shoulder.

PTE. JOHN MORROW

Mrs. Edith Morrow, 160½ Simcoe Street, has received word that her husband, Pte. John Morrow, who left here with the 93rd Battalion, had been wounded, and was in the No. 2 Stationary Hospital at Wimereux, suffering from concussion. Mrs. Morrow received a field card from her husband a few minutes before she received the wire from the record office, and he was well.

PTE. WILKINSON WOUNDED

Mrs. Henry Wilkinson, 84 Douro St., received word this morning that her husband, Pte. Henry Wilkinson, of the 109th Batt., had been wounded, in the shoulder, and was at No. 15 General Hospital at Etaples, on April 12th. Pte. Wilkinson enlisted at Lindsay.

PTE. DONNELLY WOUNDED.

Mrs. Donnelly, Brock St., received word today that her son, Pte. J. Donnelly, had been wounded.

GUNNER SODEN IN ENGLAND

Mrs. R. J. Soden has received a letter from Major J. McKinnon, at Cobourg, as follows:—"I am in receipt of a cable from Lieut. Ponton, officer in charge of a draft from the Cobourg Heavy Battery, stating that they have arrived in England, and all is well." Gunner Lawrence Soden was a member of this draft, and the news was welcomed my his mother, as well as his many friends.

REMAINS LAID AT REST WITH MASONIC HONORS

Funeral of Late Edwin R. Rogers Held With Impressive Ceremonies This Afternoon---Sketch of a Useful Life.

The funeral of the late Edwin R. Rogers took place this afternoon to the Little Lake Cemetery. The body arrived in the city last evening from Toronto and early this morning was placed in St. Luke's Church, where it remained until this afternoon, when a very impressive service was conducted by Rev. W. H. White, the rector. The funeral was under the auspices of the A. F. and A. M., the representatives of several lodges participating.

The services last night were held in St. John's Church, West Toronto, under the auspices of the Masons and Orangemen. A deputation from Victoria Masonic Lodge accompanied the remains to Peterborough.

The pallbearers were: Messrs. E. A. Peck, Mark Burnham, Dr. Burnham, H. Rush, R. Ritchie, G. W. Hatton, Robert Fair and Judge Huycke.

NO ORDINARY MAN

The passing of Edwin Robert Rogers is that of no ordinary man. His varied experience in the affairs of life gave him a mature judgment of people and in all matters with which he had to deal in after life. The high esteem in which he was held by all classes of people with whom he came in contact betokened the whole-souled nature of the man.

He was born at the old family homestead in the then village of Ashburnham, which is now Ward Five of this city, about fifty-seven years ago. His father was Robert David Rogers, and his mother was Elizabeth Birdsall. Of a family of twelve, only two brothers now remain, Richard B. Rogers, of Peterboro., and Alfred B. Rogers, of Calgary.

He was educated in the schools of this city, and at Trinity College School, Port Hope. He left the city at an early age and went to Uxbridge, where he soon became manager of the Hardware store and foundry of W. B. Stewart. Leaving Uxbridge, he was engaged with dry goods and hardware merchants in Toronto for a few years. In the year 1882 he went to Winnipeg and engaged with the well-known hardware firm of J. H. Ashdown end Co. It was not long before he reached the highest position with this firm, and having gained a good insight into the business and needs of the country, which at that time was so rapidly developing, he decided to start a hardware business in Calgary and together with a partner, established the largest hardware business west of Winnipeg. A good opportunity offered and he sold out his share of the business to his partner.

Supreme Court Clerk

He was then appointed Clerk of the Supreme Court of the District, now known as the Province of Alberta, which position he held for about ten years. The esteem in which he was held was voiced in an address which was presented to him on his retirement from the position of Clerk of the Court, which was signed by every member of the Bar at Calgary, which was as follows:—

"On the occasion of your retirement from the office of Clerk of the Court for this district, which you [illegible]

AUTO PARADE THURSDAY NIGHT

The following is the formation and line of travel of the Motor Show Automobile Parade which is being conducted on Thursday night under the auspices of the Motor Association:

All cars come into Water street at 7 p.m. from Brock street, turn south on Water street, and form in two lines, one on each side of the sreet. These two lines will extend down Water street and west on Charlotte street as far as George street. Motors should form thmselves into these two lines before the parade starts. Then the two band trucks will be located at the proper position in the parade, and the line will start in single file ta 7:30. The right-hand line will start first, the head of this line going west on Charlotte street. As the rear end of this line crosses George street the head car on the left side of Charlotte will fall in bhind and the whole parade will then be in motion. Follow the car ahead all the time.

The route will be west on Charlotte to Park, north to Hunter, east to George, south to the C. P. R. Turn at the C. P. R., going into the yard and around the garden block, coming out to George, and turn to the north, going up the right side of the street. This will double the parade and give the participants a chance to view the others. The parade will pass on up George street to Antrim street, east on Antrim to Water, north to Smith, west to George, south to London, west to Aylmer, and south to McDonnel.

At McDonnel and Aylmer streets the head car will turn east on McDonnell, the second car continuing down Aylmer, the third car going east on McDonnel, and the fourth car going down Aylmer, and so on. This will divide the parade into two divisions. The one going east on McDonnel will turn south on George to Murray, then east until the head reaches Aylmer, when this line will close up next to the right-hand curb, stop, and unload. The line going down Aylmer will turn east on the right-hand side of Murray, north on George, and west on McDonnel until the head reaches Aylmer, then close up on the right-hand curb, stop and unload. This will leave the two lines of cars all parked on both sides of McDonnel, George and Murray streets, and will avoid confusion. The bands should both turn from Aylmer into McDonnel and pass around George and Murray after the parade stops, so as to run the band cars up opposite the entrance to the Armories, so that the bands can play there while the cars are unloading. Chief Thompson has promised ample police protection to the cars. Both the 57th Regimant Band and the Salvation Army Band will take part in the parade.

Kindly decorate your cars a little, if possible, but come anyway, without decorations, if necessary. Of course, the more decorations in the way of flags and bunting, the greater the success of the parade. Every car owner should get out with his car. This is a public parade. The Motor Association is only trying to boost it along, but the co-operation of every car owner is desired t make this a great event. We should have at least three hundred cars in this line.

Mr. T. F. Matthews, chairman of the Red Cross Committee, will head the parade, with Mr. E. G. Patterson's car second. These two cars will divide at Aylmer and McDonnel streets, leading the two divisions around the Armories as outlined above.

Two trucks for transporting the bands are being donated by, the Canadian General Electric Company, through Mr. Patterson, and one truck is being provided by Mr. G. A. Gillespie.

Magistrate Dumble Dismisses the Gambling Charges

Police Magistrate Dumble this morning dismissed the charges of gambling on the Lord's Day preferred against seventeen Chinamen.

In delivering judgment the Magistrate stated that the foundation of the Lord's Day Act was English for the purpose of making the people religious by Act of Parliament. It levied penalties on people who gamed on the Sabbath. Gaming is gambling. A friendly game of cards is not condemned by the Lord's Day Act, although some people would have it so. It does not interfere with games of skill. In this case there was no evidence that the defendants were playing for money; there was no treasurer nor banker; there was nothing whatever to prove that a game of chance was played or that gambling was going on He was compelled to dismiss all the charges.

The charge against Jim Hum, charged jointly with Hum Hoy with running an opium joint, was also dismissed.

Hum Hoy was fined $250 and costs last week on different charges.

ITALIANS TOO SCORE SUCCESS

ENGAGEMENT STARTED AT DAWN AND AUSTRIANS LOST HEAVILY.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ROME, April 24. — Lively artillery actions occurred on the Trentino front, says today's official statement. Our batteries set fire to the enemy's stores at Torbole, in the Sarca valley and damaged the railway station at Marter in the Sugana Valley. At the head of the Rienza an enemy detachment, after violent artillery fighting on Saturday night, succeeded in entering an advanced position north of Trecime. We counter-attacked at dawn and drove out the enemy, inflicting severe losses and taking thirty prisoners, including an officer. On the remainder of the front there was normal artillery fighting.

HORSE KILLED, ENTERED SUIT, GOT HIS MONEY

HYDRO-ELEC. COMMISSION SETTLES CLAIM OF A. PRESTON.

Last fall a team of horses belonging to Mr. A. Preston, ran away and in their flight collided with a tank near the gas works, killing one horse. The tank had been placed there by the permission of the City Council, and as it was on Simcoe Street, Preston entered an action for damages against the city.

The case has been settled out of court by the Hydro Electric Commission of Ontario, who admitted liability for the accident.

CRIES OF GERMAN OFFICERS URGING MEN TO DO OR DIE HEARD ABOVE BATTLE'S DIN

Enemy Putting up Fiercest Fight Since War Began---"This is Last and Deciding Push For We Shall Soon be Able to Hold Out No Longer," Reads Diary of Captured Officer---Kaiser's Last Throw of the Dice.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

British Headquarters in France, April 24.—The resistance of the German armies appears to increase in accordance with the nearness of the British approach to the Hindenburg positions. The ground gained yesterday by the British beyond Arras was won in the face of the most desperate fighting on the part of the Germans since the war began. The Germans were urged by their officers to make every sacrifice. During the attack and counte-attack the cries of the officers to their men colud be heard above the tumult of battle.

"This is the last and deciding push, for we soon shall be able to hold out no longer," reads the diary of a German officer captured yesterday. It is plainly in this spirit that the present fighting is going on.

OVER 1,500 PRISONERS YESTERDAY.

LONDON, April 24. — The number of prisoners who passed through the collecting stations as a result of yesterday's operations already exceeds 1,500, including 30 officers. Many more are still to come in. South of the Bapaume-Cambrai road we gained ground during the night on a wide front east of Epesy and reached the St. Quentin canal in the neighborhood of Vendsuille. Further north, the villages of Villers-Plouch and Beaucamp have been captured by us, together with a number of prisoners.

TURKS LOSE SAMARA STATION.

LONDON, April 24. — The Turks in Mesopotamia have been driven from their positions between Samara and Istabilat, the war office announces. The British, pursuing them, occupied Samara station yesterday, capturing sixteen locomotives and 224 railway trucks.

The official announcement says: Gen. Maude, telegraphing on Monday evening, reports that the battle which was in progress on the right bank of the Tigris between Samara and Iztabilat continued well into the night of Sunday. Fighting was severe and hand to hadn, numerous counter-attacks being made by the enemy, but he was driven from stubbornly-defended positions elaborately prepared with iron-roofed dugouts. We followed in pursuit and occupied Samara station early Monday.

The enemy had hastily destroyed what he could, but our captures included sixteen locomotives, 224 railway trucks and two barges containing munitions. Saturday and Sunday the enemy's casualties were heavy, but a full count of the wounded and unwounded who fell into our hands has not been completed.

WAR IN BRIEF

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

The second stage of the Battle of Arras, which was resumed yesterday , is called the fiercest yet. Canadians are in it, fighting near Lens.

Prince Eitel Friedrich, son of the Kaiser, is reported dead of typhus.

The first American Loan to the Allies will go to Great Britain. The rate of interest will be 3½ per cent.

The German are said to be trying a new poison gas.

THAT HEAD TAX NOT TO APPLY TO RESIDENTS

OF CANADA WHO GO TO THE U. S. FOR BUSINESS OR PLEASURE.

That Canadian business men and tourists, residents of Canada for a year, will not be called upon to pay the $8 head tax which is to be levied on aliens entering the United States after May 1, is the belief of John F. Turahey, attorney of the Canada Steamship Co. at Washington.

The head tax will only apply to aliens, he says. Provided Canadians are on a bona fide tour they will be allowed a thirty-day period without paying the tax, and if on a flying visit permitted in for 24 hours free on producing a return ticket.

SCHOOL PUPILS WILL TAKE PART IN RECEPTION

TO GOVERNOR-GENERAL AND PARTY NEXT MONTH.

The City Legal and Reception Committee met last night for the purpose of arranging some of the details in connection with the reception to the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire, on the 25th of next month. All the members were present, and School Inspector Mowat was present as a member of the Special Committee to assist.

The school children of the city will take part in the ceremonies at the park, for which they are being prepared under the direction of Miss Ranney.

The trip up to and over the Last Lock has also been arranged for and the road on the east side of the lock will be put in good shape for the autos.

The other details will be worked out by the chairman, the Mayor, and a few of the alderman.

The committee will meet again at the call of the chairman.

LIFE IS WORTH WHILE ONLY WHEN LOST IN WORTHY CAUSE

Eloquent Address By Ven. Archdeacon Cody in St. John's Church---Justice, Honor and Truthfulness British Characteristics.

St. George's Day was observed locally by a special service in St. John's Church last evening, at which the address was delivered by Ven. Archdeacon Cody, the well-known pulpit orator of Toronto. The spirit of unity pervaded the service as the lessons of the evening were read by Magistrate D. W. Dumble and Col. D. Walker, representatives of another denomination. The musical program under the direction of Mr. R. J. Devey was of a high order.

During the course of an eloquent sermon, Ven. Archdeacon Cody referred to the traditional characteristics of the patron saint of England, St. George, and drew an analogy between him and the ideal English spirit. St. George was popularly supposed to fight the dragon because it was a menace to humanity, and the same spirit actuates the motives of the Englishman today. He is ready to die for a conviction, for an ideal. England is determined to kill for all time the most bestial dragon that ever cursed the earth—German militarism.

British Characteristics.

There are three outstanding features of the Englishman's inheritance. First there is justice. British justice has passed into the language of proverbs. Let the millions of India bear testimony to what British justice has done for them. When the German crown prince went through India hunting tigers he was nothing more than a first-class privileged spy. His efforts to stir up sedition failed because of the loyalty of the natives, who recognized justice and all they owed to it.

Darkest Africa, too, could bear witness where the devilish trade in human flesh and blood was forever stopped by British justice.

Egypt again had been literally lift-

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, APRIL 24, 1917

THE FINISH OF THE AGITATOR.

QUEBEC has its infliction in the shape of Henri Bourassa, and Ontario is not without the pernicious agitator who thrives on the racial hate and the sectarian prejudice that he breeds. Sometimes he is accorded the opportunity to appear before a Ministerial Association, where, if anywhere, we would naturally look for Christian charity in its purity, and there air his views, with none among his hearers to dispute his statements.

The political and sectarian disturber of national harmony should make the most of his opportunities. His day is short and his finish is in sight. Prussianism will not be the only evil swept away by the war. When this conflict is over a new order will arise. The old political lines are likely to be obliterated and the soldiers' vote will rule the country. Months of military service in the constant presence of death will make men brothers as all the teachings of Christianity have so far failed to. The agitator will lack an audience among those who faced death together and who prayed to the same Providence for protection before the battle began. One man is not likely to regard as an enemy the fellow mortal who shared ethe same perils as himself with the same fortitude and with the same high object in sight.

The trouble with the agitaor is that he stands alone as a mischief maker, lacking even the support of the better element of the community that he assumes to represent.

"BLEST BE THE TIE THAT BINDS."

THE UNITED STATES and Canada have lived at peace for a century, but the relations of the two countries have never been so fraternal as since the former has decided to become an active participant in the war. All sorts of kindly proposals are being made to promote these friendly relations. Dr. Bayard Holmes of Chicago has suggested that his country take over the care of twenty or thirty thousand of the insane in Canada, so as to leave the public institutions where these unfortunates are now confined free for the accommodation of the wounded and disabled soldiers who are returning from the front. The doctor's idea may be chimerical, it is unlikely that it will ever be given effect, but it at least is worthy of consideration as showing a spirit of good fellowship on the part of a prominent American citizen.

In the United States Senate several members cited the case of Canada as an evidence of what may be accomplished under the voluntary system in the time of war. Senator Gallinger, who was born in this country, took occasion to boost his native land and to hold Canada up as an example for the United States to follow. Canada, he said, gives her soldiers $1.10 a day. The best soldiers the world has ever seen came from Canada and Australia, not by conscription, but by voluntary enlistment They are the flower of the British army. They have distinguished themselves on every field. Those possessions have probably saved the cause of the Allies. But Canada and Australia saw fit to offer inducements to their young men to enlist, inducements permitting them to send something home to their dependent families. He thought the American people would resent sending their young men across the ocean to fight for the paltry sum of $15 a month.

Senator Nelson praised the women of Canada just as enthusiastically and eloquently as his colleague did the Administration. He declared that they had proved the best recruiting agents in the Dominion They ridiculed the slackers, they refused to associate with them, or to entertainments when slackers would be present. He wished such a condition could be created in the United States, but the propaganda of the pacifists has demoralized the country.

The two senators are, after all, only indifferently informed as to the situation here. The voluntary system has not been the success that they evidently imagine it has, and not all the women have acted the part that so appeals to one of their admirers across the border.

A SURPLUS OF OFFICERS.

ACCORDING to a Toronto paper the axe has fallen and lopped off the official heads of a number of officers in the 182nd Battalion with headquarters at Oshawa. Something like a proportion between the number of officers and enlisted men has been established. The battalion will go overseas shortly in charge of a conducting officer. The paper adds that if the discarded officers of this unit decide to take advantage of the recent order from Ottawa and go overseas as a separate draft of privates they would make a respectable party in size.

It has been estimated that there are in Canada a sufficient number of unattached officers to comprise a battalion. One of the most serious drawbacks to recruiting has been this very circumstance. Too many wall flower ornaments have been maintained by a generous Administration, and young men have held back because they lacked the "pull" which made advancement so easy for others possessed of no superior qualification for the berths they have held since the beginning.

ANOTHER APPEAL FOR RECRUITS.

THE VICTORY of the Canadian troops at Vimy Ridge has cost the divisions dearly in men killed and wounded. The ranks have been thinned by the fire of the enemy, and these gaps must be filled up if the prestige of Canada's army is to be maintained. The troops in training in England will be drafted for reinforcements and men will be sent from Canada to replace these. It is essential that an adequate home guard be maintained, and the Government has issued another appeal for men for the Canadian Defence Force.

Fifty thousand men are needed for the defence of Canada. Since the outbreak of the war the overseas troops being trained here have undertaken this duty, but the call for more men in the firing line has hastened the departure of the last of these from the Dominion. All the men who have volunteered for service overseas have been warned to hold themselves in readiness for early departure, and in the course of a few weeks they will all have gone.

The Government has issued a call for 50,000 men to undertake the defence of Canada. The need for a force of this size is real. Every contingency which may arise must be prepared for, and in war-time especially no one knows what may happen.

It is the intention of the Government to drill the men of this force, which is to be known as the Canadian Defence Force, two nights and one afternoon a week until such time as they go to camp for the summer. By this means it is hoped to make it an efficient fighting force, for many of the officers will be returned men from the front who have passed through many of the rigors of war. The men will have the benefit of training, and will be paid at the same rate as overseas men with equal subsistence. Separation allowances will be given in the case of married men. Terms of enlistment are for the duration of the war and for six months afterwards.

Those who join the Canadian Defence Force will have the satisfaction of knowing that they are thus relieving another men for duty overseas. In this manner the appeal is made to the large number of men in Canada who cannot, however willing they are, go overseas on account of family or other reason. These men know the needs of the time and are anxious to do whatever they can in the service of the Empire, and, recognizing this, the Government, with the need before it, has made the call.

Particulars can be got at the Armories. The Government has been conducting an advertising campaign in the newspapers for some time, and in these advertisements full particulars can be secured. No eligible man can plead a lack of knowledge of what is required of him as an excuse for not enlisting.

THE QUESTION OF IMMIGRATION.

THESE DAYS confusing theories are apt to be presented for the consideration of the public. Some writer draws a gloomy picture of probable conditions when the war is over. The soldiers will return and hundreds of men are likely to be thrown out of work, especially when the manufacture of munitions is no longer a necessity.

Another writer speaks of the need of adding to the working population of Canada by encouraging immigration. The two theories fail to fit. If there is to be a host of idle native Canadians, the presence of aliens can well be dispensed with. The Local Council of Women took a rational view of this question. The citizens of Canada are entitled to first consideration. Immigrants should be encouraged to come here only when there is room for them and a necessity for their services.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

Event of Stupendous Importance.

(Brooklyn Eagle.)

The arrival of former Prime Minister Arthur J. Balfour, British Foreign Minister, and former French Premier Rene Vivani, with their suites of military and naval advisers, is an event of stupendous importance. Their coming indicates that Washington City will be the scene of the grandest forward stride in what is called "civilization" since the "Revival of Learning!" The nations of the world to whom Prussian militarism is abhorrent will form an everlasting alliance against "Kaiserbunds."

Cannot Carry Slackers.

(Chicago Tribune.)

Without the draft there will be slacker individuals and slacker States. This country cannot in a time like this carry the weight of slackers. It must have, if it hopes for victory and not useless, futile bloodshed, an army selected by fitness and not one selected by the dictates of the individual conscience. It cannot have the laborer go forth to fight while the dancing man stays home and dances.

An Expected Statement.

(Providence Journal.)

We may next expect to hear that Germany has abandoned the Lens coal region because coal is not needed in the warm months and it is a wise strategic move to put the burden of operating the mines on the Allies.

The Object Was Plunder.

(Philadelphia Record.)

The German excuse for the invasion of Belgium was that it offered the easiest road to France. That is not the true reason. The German and Austrian artillery experts knew they had guns that would destroy the fortresses of France as easily as those of Belgium. The object of the invasion was to plunder the mineral regions and the industrial establishments and get hold of the seaports.

Unheeded Warnings.

(London Free Press.)

Probably the Motherland wishes today that she had listened to the advice of men like Colonel Denison, who urged the storing of great quantities of grain in the United Kingdom as a precaution against attack. Pacifists nullified the proposal.

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review:

The argument used in the editorial in your Saturday's issue entitled, "Spend your money at home," is used so extensively these days that I trust you will pardon me if I venture to draw attention to a fundamental defect in it. In quoting an illustration used by a former well-known politician to show the importance of people spending their money at home, you describe a village in which "the sum total of wealth was a lone five-dollar bill." This five-dollar bill, it was shown, was circulated through the wage-earner to the grocer, landlord and others, and thus was used to liquidate many debts One day some foolish individual sent $4.75 of it away to an outsider to purchase goods, with the result that he bankrupted "his own town which was forced to attempt to do business with the 25c saved from the wreckage."

In supporting this argument, and to emphasize the importance of patronizing local merchants, you state that "every dollar sent to Toronto for goods reduces the wealth of the city by just that amount."

Arguments of this kind sound so plausible and are used so frequently they receive wide acceptance in spite of the fact that they are based on a serious error. Here is where the error comes in., as is well known to anyone who has made a study of the subject:—

In the first place money is not wealth, as stated in the anecdote, but is merely a medium of exchange. In early conditions of society when the natives did not have money they used in its place colored shells, rare stones, or anything else that was convenient. The Eskimos, I understand, have been known to use certain of the cheaper kinds of skins of animals.

The difference between wealth and "mediums of exchange" is as follows:— Wealth represents what people need, such as wheat, live stock, clothing, furniture, etc. Mediums of exchange are what people use to help them exchange wealth for wealth.

If there was no money or common "medium of exchange," it would be inconvenient for people to do business. Supposing a man had a cow, another man had three pigs, another man had one hundred bushels of wheat, and another man a supply of clothing and household necessities. The man who had the cow might like to exchange it for some wheat, one for the pigs, and some for the clothing; but he would find it difficult to do so through there being no medium of exchange

The man who had wheat could exchange it more readily because he could give a certain number of bushels of wheat for the pigs, and whatever other quantities might be necessary for the household necessities. Money was invented for the purpose of making it easier for the people to effect transfers of wealth. That is the only value money has. It is not wealth in itself

If people did not have confidence that they could use a dollar bill or even a silver dollar to buy goods with that they wanted, the value of the bill or of the dollar piece would soon disappear.

When a man is able to sell his cow for money he is then able to take that money and buy one of the pigs and as much wheat and household necessities as he requires. The money enables him to trade his cow for the other things that he needs. Were the money to be destroyed there would be no less real wealth in the community, as the farmer would still have his cow, the other man his three pigs, and the other their respective forms of wealth

In the community that you speak fo where $4.75 was sent away to buy something from outside, no real wealth was sent away, but in return for the $4.75 real wealth was brought in. If, instead of speaking of money, you had said that one man in that village sent away a pair of boots worth $4.75 and got back sugar worth $4.75, it would have been perfectly apparent to everybody that the community was no poorer by the exchange, as the effect would have been to simply exchange one form of wealth for another form of wealth.

In view of the fact, therefore, that the money sent away did not represent wealth the community at the most could not have been bankrupted as stated in the anecdote, but merely inconvenienced through having lost its medium for exchanging the wealth that still remained.

Anything which makes it difficult for one man who produces wealth to exchange that wealth to the best possible advantage for the other forms of wealth that he needs, hampers just to that extent the production of wealth. Foolish restrictions on trade, therefore, always works out injuriously instead of beneficially. Were it not for the misconceptions people have about the use of money this fact would be clearly seen, but as it is it is often misunderstood. I hope this statement will serve to throw some light on what is a confusing subject to many.

Sincerely yours,

H. B. COWAN.

We gladly make room for Mr. Cowan's letter, but fail to see that he has cleared up the problem, and editorial comment on his communication will appear tomorrow.—Ed. Review.

THE CHILDREN'S SHELTER

Editor Review:

I am rather surprised that you should have seen fit in your editorials of Saturday to criticize the actions of the members of the Children's Aid Society on what is evidently an ex-parte statement of an officer of the board.

It is unnecessary to state that the purposes of the society are to investigate cases of neglected children, and if negligence is shown to take such steps as may seem advisable in the interest of such children.

The board is composed of a number of citizens (men and women) who are all very deeply interested in the affairs of this society, and are endeavouring most earnestly to carry out its purposes in all cases.

Amongst other duties imposed upon the board is that of the management and maintenance of a shelter for the neglected children.

It must be obvious that the policy of the society should be only to take children from their parents and place them in the shelter when it is clear that such a radical step is necessary for the protection of the child.

It would also seem obvious that the members of the board should have a voice in determining whether the conditions are such as warrant such step.

At the last meeting the agent of the society advanced the proposition that the board was not entitled to a voice in this matter, but that the board must accept at the shelter and must maintain there such children as he sees fit to send to that institution.

The point taken was a novel one to the board, and after Mr. Spence had been given a full opportunity of presenting his views, a committee was appointed to consider the whole question relative to the admission of children to the shelter.

This committee has met and prepared a report which will be presented to the board at an early date for consideration.

The child referred to in your editorial was, as I understand the facts, taken by the agent from a comfortable home and was returned to such home by the agent when the question whether she was, under the circumstances, a neglected child, was raised.

The general question, you will observe, is a clean cut one, and I have no doubt it will be satisfactorily dealt with at the next meeting of the board in the same way as other important problems with which the board has had to deal.

Many members of the society have devoted to it so much of their time and thought, and the work is such a meritorious one, that it seems a pity that you should take such action as may tend to discourage contributors to the work of the society.

Yours truly,

E. A. PECK

President.

ed out of the mud by men who lived up to the same ideal, the greatest of whom, Lord Cromer, had lately passed away.

The second feature is trustworthiness—to keep one's word. That also has passed into the language of proverbs. "An Englishman's word is as good as his bond."

The outstanding feature of British ideals was trustfulness, as witness the remarkable example of the career of Louis Botha, as an outlaw, then as premier of South Africa, and lastly thanked by the British Government for quelling rebellion and adding territory to the South African colonies.

These are the only principals on which a decent and humane civilization can be built. The Archdeacon paid a high and eloquent tribute to the Canadian soldiers who were carrying out these ideals on the blood-soaked battlefields of Europe, to those who had died that there might be a new and better Canada, and the men who came back from the war will be the men who will make a new and better Canada, who will have the say in administering the country.

Only by sacrifice can there be progress. Life is worth while only when it is given away in a worthy cause.

The Musical Service.

The service was fully choral and admirably sung by the Rev. Canon Cornish and the choir. Special numbers were Kipling's Recessional, the solo stanzas being finely sung by Miss Quartermaine, and the offertory, "Hallelujah" chorus from the Messiah. Archdeacon Cody after the service expressed his delight at the fine singing of Handel's noble chorus, which formed a fitting finale to the evensong of St. George.

OMEMEE

(Special Correspondence.)

OMEMEE, April 23.—Mr. J. Blackwell, who has been working in New Ontario the past year, returned to Omemee this week.

Mr. Jas. Laidley of Swift Current, who has been visiting his parents for several weeks, has left for his home in the West.

Dr. Walter Mulligan of Port Columbus visited his brother, Mr. R. J. Mulligan, last week.

Mr. W. O'Brien of Peterborough was a business visitor to Omemee last Friday.

Miss Lulu Bushnell returned to her school in Stouffville after a pleasant Easter vacation under the parental roof.

Mrs. Cunningham received word from Ottawa on Wednesday evening last that her son, Corp. Harold Cunningham had been wounded. Corp. Cunningham is one of Omemee's most popular young men and has been on active service with the 38th Ottawa Battalion for many months.

Miss Lila Parsons returned home on Thursday after a pleasant visit with her brother in Toronto.

Mr. Wm. Best is suffering from a sprained ankle, having fallen from a scaffold one day last week.

Miss Jennie Smythe was a visitor to Toronto Easter week.

Miss Heeln James, of Toronto, was the guest of her parents, Rev. and Mrs. James, for Easter.

On Tuesday night of last week, about nine o'clock, Mr. B. J. McQuade was brutally assaulted by an insane nephew, who had been absent from Omemee for years. Mr. McQuade was returning home and had reached his gate when he was attacked, his assailant springing out from the dark and striking him over the head with a sharp instrument eight times. Though staggered with the blow, Mr. McQuade recognized the man. His loud cries for help brought immediate assistance, but no trace of his nephew has as yet been found. Mr. McQuade was taken to the office of Dr. Earl, where his wounds were dressed, one wound being four inches in length. Police Constable Good of Lindsay is working on the case, and it is expected an arrest will soon take place.

Mrs. Morrison of Peterborough was a visitor here recently.

Miss Ida Nugent of Toronto was the guest of her sister, Mrs. Mahood, over Easter.

Mr. R. J. Mulligan was a visitor to Lindsay on Monday.

Mrs. Wallace and son are guests of Mrs. Dornan, Sturgeon street.

Pte. A. and Mrs. Peters have moved to Port Hope.

Mr. and Mrs. McMahon were visitors to Reaboro this week.

Reeve Parsons attended County Council in Lindsay on Friday.

The matrimonial bug has been busy in our midst this month. Among the recent weddings are: Mr. Wm. McQuade and Miss Bessie Brown, both of Omemee; Mr. Samuel Fitch and Miss Lillian Irwin; Mr. L. Southworth and Miss Dawson of Cannington. We wish the young people all happiness and success.

Miss Florence Downe, teacher at Bancroft, visited under the parental roof over Easter.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lamb and daughter Jessie spent Easter at the home of Mrs. Luxton, Toronto.

FACE TWINE SHORTAGE.

BRANTFORD, April 24.—A shortage of binder twine faces the continent. The supply of shipping to transport hemp from Manila is small and German ships will be utilized. This, however, will not do away with the difficulty of getting shipments east owing to the railway car shortage. The Brantford Cordage Company stocks are getting very low. It has 140 carloads of hemp at Pacific coast points which it cannot bring east owing to the railway embargoes. If the trouble continues the West will be seriously affected.

MORE STANDARD HOTELS

More standard licenses have been issued in the province in the last few days bringing the number of standard hotels up from 1,224 to 1,237 at present, and there may be some more to come. This brings the total almost up to the number issued last year.

AND NOW FOR SEEDING

Soil Should Be Allowed to Warm Up Before Planting---Some First Crops to Put in Beans Are a Splendid Food Product to Grow This Year—How to Proceed in Several Lines.

(By S. C. JOHNSTON, Vegetable Specialist, Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

Having discussed the methods of preparing the garden soil to receive the seed we now turn to the sowing of the seed itself. There is no need to hurry the sowing of the seed. Better results will be obtained if the amateur gardener will wait until the soil is warm and easily worked. The vegetables discussed are arranged as nearly as possible according to the time they should be planted.

LETTUCE. Lettuce is grown for its leaves, and is our best known salad plant. It is a short-season plant, and is often grown to follow or precede another crop. It is quite hardy and may be planted quite early in the spring, grown to maturity, and followed with a tender crop such as tomatoes, or it may be planted between any plants of the cabbage family. It is a good plan in a small garden to plant only a few feet at one time and follow this with successive plantings made every ten days or two weeks until July 1st. The lettuce seed may be sown in rows comparatively thinly at a depth of a quarter of an inch. The plants should be thinned to stand two inches apart.

If one desires large single heads of lettuce the plants should be thinned to stand from seven to nine inches apart. The thinnings may be transplanted to another part of the garden.

RADISH. The radish plant is grown for its roots, which are eaten raw just as soon as they are large enough to use. It is quite hardy, and may be planted very early in the spring. Radishes are frequently sown with other crops which are not such rapid growers, such as parsnips. They should, however, be pulled out before the parsnips or other crops need the ground. Successive planting is also advised for this crop. Radish seed may be planted in rows, four inches apart or broadcasted, the depth preferred being from a quarter to half an inch only. Radish as a general rule require no thinning, and the soil between the rows should be kept loose with the hoe. A crop of winter radish may be obtained if the seed is sown about the first of August. These should be thinned out to three inches apart.

SPINACH. Spinach is a short season crop which is grown to provide table greens. The plant matures in about six weeks from planting, and seed should be sown very early in the spring, as the plants run to seed during the hot summer months. The seeds may be planted in rows or broadcasted, and should be sown at a depth of one half inch. Successive planting may be made if so desired. When the leaves are large enough to use they may be pulled off or the whole plant may be cut from the root.

ONION. The onion is grown for seasoning, pickling, and for eating raw. A large percentage of onions stored for winter use are grown from seed planted in the soil very early in the spring. The soil should be rich, moist and well drained, but fresh manure is not the best to apply. The seeds should be planted at a depth of about one-half inch, and the rows should be from twelve to fourteen inches apart. The seed should be planted very thinly so that there will be no need for extra thinning of the onions. Cultivation should cease when the onion tops are such a size as to prevent easy work. In the fall when the tops are about two-thirds died down the onions should be pulled and laid in windrows so arranged that the bulbs are covered with the tops of the onions. This prevents any sunburn which causes considerable trouble in storage. After they have been kept in this position for five or six days they may be gathered up and placed in a slat box or basket and tied up some way so that the rain will not get at them and the wind will have plenty of chance to circulate around the bulbs. The tops may be removed from the onions at this time if so desired, or they may be left on. Dutch sets may be planted as close together as they will stand in a straight row very early in the season. They should be barely covered with soil, which should be well firmed by tramping on it, and the green onions should be pulled as soon as they are ready for use.

PEAS. Peas may be planted very early in the season, and for the early crop the seed should be sown in a furrow of two inches deep and the seeds placed an inch apart. Some arrangements should be made so that the pea vines will have some support. Limbs of trees or chicken wire may be used for this purpose, as the vines will cling to this for support and will be kept up from the ground. This support should be set preferably at the time of planting. This soil should be drawn up around the vine.

BEANS. Generally speaking, it is not a good practice to add fresh manure to the soil where one expects to grow beans. They prefer a moist, deep loam. The seeds should be planted fairly early in the spring. The rows being at least eighteen inches apart. A furrow two inches deep may be made with the corner of a hoe and the seeds placed from two to three inches apart in the bottom of this furrow. Another way which is sometimes followed in planting beans is to make holes two inches deep twelve inches apart and in each hole three or four seeds be placed. It is always advised not to touch the plant when they are wet.

The Salt in the Sea.

The Pythagoreans held that the sea was salt by reason of the tears shed by Kronos, father of Zeus. According to the old Hebraic tradition, the ocean was originally a great body of fresh water, but which was made salt by the abundant tears of the fallen angels. One sect of Buddhists believe that Lot's wife—that is to say, the "pillar of salt" which was once the wife of the humble gentleman named above—lies at the bottom of the ocean in a certain narrow strait and that once each year the waters of all oceans flow through that narrow channel. The Talmudic writers say that it was never salt until Moses wept repentance after breaking the tables of stone.

A Fount of Inspiration.

"My wife," said the celebrated purveyor of indifferent sellers, "can't be made to understand that a writer has his off days."

"No?"

"She thinks I ought to be able to write freely as long as there is ink in the fountain pen."

New Brand.

Lady (in book department) — Have you "Coffee and Repartee?"

Clerk — Groceries upstairs, madam. I'm not sure that we carry that brand of tea, but you might inquire.

Complete.

"Do you mean to say you paid only $50 for that frock?"

"Yes, but that, of course, was without the trimmings."

"How much were the trimmings?"

"A hundred and fifty."

Safe.

"So you think you are safe in marrying a widow?"

"Yes; my case is different. You see her former husband never made half the money I am making."

The Pessimist's Viewpoint.

"Father," said the small boy, "what's an optimist?"

"An optimist, my son, is a man who tries so hard to be cheerful that you feel sorry to see him overworking himself."

"John, I, too, am going to scrap some old 'machinery,' install new, and make my workshop efficient."

"Yes? And what's the new equipment?"

"A gas range that has big capacity built into compact space; that has everything at the right height to work without stooping; that burns the economical real 'blue flame'; and has an oven with glass front so you don't waste heat and spoil a cake just to see how it's doing."

"A millennial dream, Margaret."

"No, indeed! Mrs. Naybor has one—a McClary's."

Americans Are Peevish.

The United States Shipping Board has taken a hand in the American Government's fight to protect Alaskan fisheries against Canada's orders-in-Council giving preferential treatment to British Columbian interests. In an order forbidding the transfer of the American gasboat Venture to Canadian register the board declared that while the Canadian regulations apparently offer tempting inducements for such transfers, they do not in reality give American citizens an opportunity for free competition in the fisheries trade, but rather subject consumers of fish brought into American territory through Canadian ports "to the possibility of monopolistic price manipulations." Officials in Washington believe the effect of the orders-in-Council, if not offset, would be to bring the Alaskan fishing fleet operating off Ketchikan under Canadian registry, and its product into the Canadian port of Prince Rupert. Representations made through the British Embassy have failed to secure a modification, and retaliatory legislation framed by the Commerce Department failed with the adjournment of Congress.

Forests Are Valuable.

The forest production of British Columbia as a result of an increased cut and higher prices realized, reached a new record in 1916, the value of all products of the forest for that period being $[illegible]5,528,000, or slightly under two million dollars more than in the last record year 1913 and over twenty per cent. more than in 1915.

The figures submitted by Chief Forester Grainger to the British Columbia Minister of Lands shows a great increase in the output of shingles, the worth of which for the year amounted to $4,500,000. There was also a considerable growth in the production of mining props and posts and the demand for boxes for munitions led to the value of that item which first appeared last year rising to nearly two million dollars.

In the cut of lumber, while it is less than in 1913, there is an increase of about thirty-five per cent. over 1915. There is a slightly higher production of pulp than there was the year before, but for the past four years this figure does not show the change.

Prohibition in 1898.

On September 29th, 1898, a plebiscite on the question of total prohibition of the liquor traffic resulted in 278,380 votes for, 264,693 against. Only 44 per cent. of voters polled their votes.

A Chip Off the Old Block.

Sergt.-Major Charles Owen, of Woodstock, who recently was given the Distinguished Conduct Medal for gallantry in action, is a son of George Owen, who also is the proud possessor of a similar decoration won during the Afghan campaign, through which he fought under Kitchener. The sergeant-major is one of five sons, all of whom have served or are serving in the present war.

BOY SCOUTS ARE ENTHUSIASTIC

LOCAL YOUTHS ANXIOUS TO JOIN THE WOLFE PATROL.

Douglas Widdess, 400 Downie St., and Gerald Patterson, 463 Hunter St., both enthusiastic for the cause of the Boy Scouts, have written the following letter to Mr. H. G. Hammond, provincial secretary for the movement in Toronto:

Dear Sir: We would be very pleased to join the Wolfe Patrol There are ten of us, ages from ten to thirteen. We would be very pleased if you would come to Peterborough and organize the Wolfe Patrol. Please let us know when you are coming to Peterborough.

Yours very truly,
Douglas Widdess
Gerald Patterson.

"This type of letter," writes Mr. Hammond, in reply, "makes one feel that the game is worth the candle and that we have something that appeals to the boys."

It is likely that Mr. Hammond will visit this city in his official capacity at an early date.

GROCERS WILL HANDLE BREAD

DECIDE TO CONTINUE AS USUAL FOR SAKE OF CUSTOMERS.

The grocers have decided out of consideration for their customers to continue to handle bread as usual even if they do so at a loss. This action was taken after a consultation by members of the association, so that the consumers can secure the staff of life as usual, the only difference to them being the increase of two cents in the price of a large loaf, which has just been made by the bakers.

NEW ARMY CORPS.

Program Has Been Arranged For Local Event.

The program for the opening of the new corps of the Salvation Army at Byersville has been arranged and is as follows: A public reception to the new officers at the Simcoe street Temple Saturday at 8 p.m. The new officers will be introduced by Adjt. Burton of Montreal.

Sunday morning will be the first meeting with the new officers at the Byersville citadel, when all the Temple corps will assist in welcoming the new officers in their own building. Sunday school will be conducted at 2:30, and the Temple Songster Brigade will assist at the evening services Sunday evening.

CANOE OWNERS ASK FOR A BOOM AT LOWER LOCK'S

CITY SOLICITOR WILL REPORT ON CITY'S LIABILITY.

The Legal Committee at their meeting last night considered the request of Mr. John Watt and a number of canoeists that the city furnish a boom which will be placed at the locks, and it is thought will overcome the danger of making the portage from the Little Lake to the lower waters. The Government had refused a similar request. The matter was referred to the city solicitor to report on.

LADY DROPPED DEAD

The following despatch was received over the wire this morning:—"From Meredith, N.H.—Dorothy Bryant, of Peterboro dropped dead here this morning. Her relatives reside in Ontario."

Every enquiry possible was made without any information being secured that would lead to the identification of the deceased.

FOR CONVALESCENTS.

Peterborough May Get Hospital for Care of Soldiers.

A number of local men who know the advantages that Peterborough possesses in the way of good locations for a convalescent hospital took the matter up with Capt. Burnham before he recently left for Ottawa, and one of them received the following letter from him this morning dealing with the matter:

M Dear Sir: At last I have been able to run down this convalescent hospital business. I saw Sir James Lougheed himself, and this is his pronouncement: The commission has given up or is giving up as fast as it can the small hospital and will consider only a building holding not less than two hundred beds with further quarters for administration purposes, and ample grounds. They will pay a moderate rental. They will not consider purchase, but will erect huts, etc., if they thing them necessary. When you find anything like this he will send an officer immediately to report. If I were you I would have a chat with the Mayor about it, and if necessary the Council.

Yours faithfully,
J. H. BURNHAM.

AT THE PUBLIC LIBRARY

Dr. Anderson Delivered Interesting Lecture on Malta.

Dr. George Anderson delivered a lecture at the Public Library last night under the auspices of the various chapters of the I. O. D. E. on "Malta, the Halfway House of the British Empire." Regent Mrs. R. R. Hall of the Otonabee Chapter presided, and the regents of the other chapters had seats on the platform.

Dr. Anderson, who, with his wife, spent a winter in Malta, gave an interesting history of that island since it came into the possession of the British in 1815.

The doctor will conclude his labors in Peterborough tonight with an illustrated lecture on the British Navy, in All Saints' Church. He has been successful in his canvass for funds for the Royal Naval Institute of Canada, on whose behalf he has labored.

Committee Settles Down to Business

INDUSTRIAL AND LABOR COMMITTEE HOLD FIRST SESSION.

The first meeting of the Industrial and Labor Committee of the Greater Peterboro Association was held last night in the City Council Chambers at 8 o'clock. The enthusiasm displayed and work accomplished last evening augurs well for the creation of such a committee. Their main objects will be to give every assistance to the Manufacturers' Committee of the City Council in securing new industries, not only in an advisory capacity, but in the most practical manner possible. From a labor standpoint they will do everything possible to make conditions pleasant for newcomers who come to the city to join our factory forces.

The members present were W. R. Breyfogle, chairman; W. H. Bradburn, J. J. Hartley, Jos. Begley, Edgar Worth, E. H. D. Hall, C. L. Hay, E. B. Fowler, G. O. Cameron, secretary. The absentees: W. H. Denham, A. A. McIntyre, and W. G. Morrow, who are in Chicago with a delegation to interview the Quaker Oats Company. Mr. Ivor Brock was out of the city.

SGT. DUNCAN MACNEIL OF THE CANADIANS

Says Dr. Cassell's Tablets Cured His Dyspepsia Completely.

Sergeant Duncan MacNeil, of the Canadian Expeditionary Force, writing from Europe (his home address is 114 Pleasant St., Halifax, N.S.) says: "For six years I suffered from frequent attacks of dyspepsia, often being in bed for days at a time. When the war broke out I joined the Expeditionary Force and came to England. I had not been long there, however, when my old trouble returned and I had to go to hospital. While in hospital a friend told me of Dr. Cassell's Tablets, and I decided to try them. The first box brought such pronounced relief that I continued the treatment. To make a long story short, a complete cure was effected."

A free sample of Dr. Cassell's Tablets will be sent to you on receipt of 5 cents for mailing and packing. Address: Harold F. Ritchie & Co., Ltd., 10, McCaul St., Toronto.

Dr. Cassell's Tablets are the surest home remedy for Dyspepsia, Kidney Trouble, Sleeplessness, Anaemia, Nervous Ailments, Nerve Paralysis Palpitation, and Weakness in Children. Specially valuable for nursing mothers and during the critical periods of life. Sold by druggists and storekeepers throughout Canada. Prices: One tube, 50 cents; six tubes for the price of five. Beware of imitations said to contain hypophosphites. The composition of Dr. Cassell's Tablets is known only to the proprietors, and no imitation can ever be the same.

Y.M.C.A. ENTERTAINMENTS ALWAYS SURE OF AUDIENCE

Association's Work is Appreciated by Men at Front as Shown by Letter From Soldier.

In a letter received by a friend in the city from Signaller Harry Hastie, formerly of Keene and Peterboro, who went to the front from Montreal with the Grenadier Guards, he speaks most appreciatively of the work of the Y. M. C. A. is doing at the front. In addition he give quite a little interesting information about Peterboro boys. In part his letter is as follows:

"It is not always convenient to find a nice place to write in over here. Lately I have been writing my letters while on duty during the night, when there is little doing. Since I wrote last I have taken a four weeks' course in visual signalling. This was held in a small town some distance behind the line and it proved a very enjoyable change to trench life. I gained somewhat in flesh while there, so the change must have agreed with me.

While I was there I met several old friends. On New Year's day met my uncle again. His battalion was in the next town having a few weeks' rest, so I had several long talks with him. Going along the street one day I met Will Hamilton. He was in a hurry, as he was on duty, so he did not have much time to talk. Horace Coon was on the same course as I, so we were together quite frequntly during th four weeks. Since then I have met two of th old Y.M.C.A. boys, who were also in Mr McCarroll's Bible Class in George Street Church. I met both in the same town on the same day, so when I proposed meeting after supper, and going out to some place of amusement, both favored a Y.M.C.A. concert, which was on for the evening. There were movies in the town as well as a boxing contest, but their choice was the concert, so to the concert we went.

"The Y.M.C.A. certainly has a great influence over the members after they leave home. It was quite easy to pick these boys out among their comrades as Y.M.C.A. boys; something which I cannot describe about their bearing shows this up. I also met two 'Couchiching 1914' friends in the persons of Captain Sharpe and Captain Forgie. Probably you have met these two men. Capt. Sharpe was formery boys' work secretary, West End Branch Y.M.C.A., Toronto, and Capt. Forgie was boys' work secretary, National Council, Y.M.C.A.'s. They are both engaged in the work here among the soldiers. I also was introduced to Capt. Archibald, who is in charge of the physical work here. He told me that they are getting Douglas Loomis into the physical work here this coming summer. Have spoken to Capt. Pearson, of Ottawa, Capt. Clarke, of Revelstoke, B.C., and one of two other Y.M.C.A. captains.

"Whenever I find a Y.M.C.A. hut or tent I always make enquiries as to who is in charge of that particular section, and quite frequently find some one I know, or have heard of. These officers are carrying on a splendid work here. Just put up a notice, 'Concert at Y.M.C.A. hut to-night,' and you are certain of a full house. These huts all have a canteen, where hot tea, coffee, or cocoa, can be obtained; also varied tinned goods as well as little necesities the soldier needs, at small cost. I am writing this in a dugout about 50 yards from the front line, and I am less than five minutes' walk from a Y.M.C.A. canteen, so the work is carried on as far forward as possible. Will close this as my shift is just over, and another fellow wants to write some letters.

Yours very sincerely,
H. HASTIE."

Military Badges.

The following memorandum was issued by the Minister of Militia:

"As a number of inquiries have appeared from time to time with reference to badges for discharged soldiers and men who have applied for service and been rejected for various reasons, in which it has been intimated that these badges were to be issued or sold by private organizations or concerns, it is considered desirable to point out that an order-in-Council has been prepared and will shortly be promulgated dealing with this whole subject. This order will provide for the free issue of official Government badges to all who are entitled to such by reason of being honorably discharged soldiers, or having been rejected for or exempted from service with the forces. The order will also provide that no persons other than those to whom badges have been duly issued shall wear any such badge, and it will be illegal to manufacture, sell, purchase or wear any other badges purporting to be for such purposes as provided for in the order-in-Council. Heavy penalties will be provided for infringements of the order."

Cost of Education in B. C.

The total enrolment in all the colleges and schools of British Columbia in 1916 was 64,570, according to the annual report of the Superintendent of Education just compiled and printed for the Provincial Government. The report shows that the expenditure for education proper was $1,452,999.99, added to which there were outlays of $138,322.44 by the Department of Works for the construction of new schoolhouses, furniture, repairs, etc., the aggregate cost to the Government having been $1,591,322.43. But the cost of education was considerably greater when account is taken of the expenditures made by incorporated cities, rural municipalities, and other school districts which added a total of $1,625,927.53, making the grand total cost of education in British Columbia last year $3,216,-249.96.

FIGHTING ILLICIT TRADE.

Anecdotes Told of Life in Mounted Police.

Canada's Mounted Police has been famous for more than forty years. "Mounted Police Life in Canada," the new book written by Captain R. Burton Deane, covers over thirty years of that period. Its record has been that of mingled romance and tragedy, of heroic adventure and sacrificing service. It was the only direct instrument of law and responsible for its enforcement throughout a territory larger than some empires. To-day, when law and the liquor traffic come in conflict so often and so widely, it may interest many people to get a glimpse of similar conflict in earlier times.

"No history of Mounted Police work would be worth its salt unless it could give some instances of the manner in which the law prohibiting illicit liquor was enforced in the early days."

So writes Captain Deane and proceeds:

"During the first half of the year 1889 we paid particular attention to the unlawful importation of the poison that had been in the habit of coming into the country from Montana. There was no railway in that section connecting the two countries, and the liquor must, perforce, travel by wagon or by pack-horse; yet, for a man who understood how to carry it on, the illicit trade was the most profitable business in the country. The stuff itself was known as 'Forty Rod,' 'Red-Eye,' 'Rot-Gut,' and other similarly expressive names, and it was invariably of overproof strength, so that it might be doctored by the retail vendor. In most cases it was little other than colored alcohol.

"In December, 1888, Staff-Sergeant Ross received information that about 100 gallons of this stuff was 'cached' on the prairie a few miles south of Lethbridge, and after diligent search, found them. He was unable at the moment to provide transport for more than thirty gallons, which he brought into barracks, and being assured that if he left the balance where it was he would see it again no more, he broke up the rest of the kegs and let the liquor run out on the prairie. It was a provision of the law that seized liquor could be so disposed of. We were never able to prove ownership, so the other thirty gallons went the same way, killing the weeds upon a barrack road.

"Sergeant A. E. Macdonell, of Milk River detachment, about fourteen miles from the international boundary, was quite well aware that an old-time whisky smuggler named Tom Percel, had a cargo in the proximity of the line, on the Montana side, which he was intending to run in whenever opportunity might offer. The 4th of July, American Independence Day, was approaching, and it could hardly be celebrated in gala fashion without a little stimulant, so on the evening of the 2nd Tom decided to make his venture. At seven o'clock that evening Sergeant Macdonell started out on patrol, came across a fresh wagon track, followed it up, and overtook Parcel, who had six five-gallon kegs of fire-water in his wagon. Macdonell escorted the outfit to Lethbridge, where Percel paid $100 fine, and where his wagon, horses, and harness were seized, confiscated and sold by the Customs Department."

Mistress—Good heavens, Jane, why is this bucket hanging on the gas bracket? Jane—Well, mum, you told me this morning the gas was leaking, and to save the carpet I hung up the pail to catch it.—London Answers.

Easy Conscience.

Fuzzby—Yes, she's a nice girl, but if you marry her in the hope that she'll one day come into a fortune won't your conscience trouble you? Sportlove—Oh, no! Not if she really gets the money!

SAVE YOUR IRISH CROCHET.

This Lace Is Coming Into Vogue Again With Spring.

Have you heard the news? Irish crochet is coming back into favor for all sorts of things—lingerie blouses, neckwear and even frock trimming. It isn't used exactly as it used to be, but any one possessing one of those lovely large, round Dutch collars or a set of collar and cuffs is fortunate in that she can turn the collar and cuffs into something entirely different without cutting the lace.

For chemise tops and nightgown yokes the Irish crochet is indeed lovely. Two of those old time "choker" collars could be utilized to set in the back and the front of either garment. If you do not possess such things as choker collars watch the little lace shops, which deal in such articles. You may be able to strike a bargain.

A round collar can be set in as a round yoke in a nightgown, with cuffs to match as finishes for the short kimono sleeves. Sometimes cuffs can be used as shoulder straps on a chemise, with the round collar set in as a motif.

On blouses the Irish lace collar can be used in a bolero effect, for a vest, revers, bib or little coatee, depending entirely on the cut and shape.

On frocks the uses of Irish lace are legion. On such fabrics as linens, organdies and voiles for spring and summer wear Irish collars can be used to outline deep pockets, in bib effects, to define panels and apron fronts, to edge deeper collars and in the same ways as they are used on blouses.

If you have some fine piece of this once popular lace stored away get it out and start to bleach it in the frost so that you will have it all fresh and ready to use when spring sewing starts in.

New Blouses.

Some of the latest blouses are singularly soft and graceful. A few fashioned from black net over white are made with a few perpendicular tucks, the sleeves full to the wrist, with a frill falling over the hand. Even the crepe de chine blouses are, many of them, made with a pointed piece falling from the wristband over the hand, the blouse itself opening in a V form at the neck, the edge with an open hemstitch about an inch wide. Brown is a fashionable blouse color, and brown chiffon tucked and worn over gold net is altogether charming. Vivid coloring, even in the embroideries, is not now the first fashion. The soft silk ones are wrought in dull shades, but are all the more effective for their subdued hues.

Hush! A Garter Purse.

If you are addicted to the bad habit of carrying your valuables and money with you wherever you go you should provide yourself with one of the new garter purses. They are made of two pockets, one large for jewels the other small for money, and both attached to straps to buckle tightly around the leg below the knee. They come in all shades of satin.

A Delightful Combination.

Speaking of satin slip over blouses, what do you think of this costume? It is a slip over blouse of dark blue satin smocked in the shoulders with white silk and showing a novel collar and cuffs of white satin. It is worn with a box pleated white flannel skirt. Sounds stunning, doesn't it?

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

GROCERS WIN FROM DE LAVAL

At the Water street alleys last night the Grocers won two out of three games from the De Laval in a City League fixture. Some good bowling was put up. Ross of the Grocers was high single for his team, rolling 192, with a total for three games of 519. Outram followed close with 504. Barrett of the De Laval rolled the best game of the night, having high single of 20, also high three games with 533.

Next game, Thursday night, West Ends vs. the C. G. E.

BARLEY IN THE WEST

Crop to Which Western Farmers Should Give More Attention

There is hardly any crop which the West can produce more easily and successfully than barley. The average yield over a period of many years has not been large owing to the conditions under which it has been grown, but wherever barley has been given definite and careful cultivation, yields of 50 to 65 bushels per acre are comparatively common. Even at the low prices which have prevailed in recent years, yields such as these would mean a very profitable return per acre. There is every reason to believe that the general price of barley will be higher for some years to come in spite of the fact that there is less of it being used for malting purposes. It is not the high prices paid for fancy barley that would make it an attractive crop to the farmers of Western Canada so much as the demand for it for both bread and feed in countries other than our own. Britain has not only the same need for barley that she had before the war, but a greater need and there is no reason why Canada should not supply that need. Britain likes barley-fed bacon, prefers it to American corn-fed. Canada has the hogs, or can raise them with ease and can raise the barley to feed them with equal ease, so that either as a crop to feed or a grain to export barley is well worth considering. Instead of scrambling to put in wheat on half prepared ground, why not reduce the wheat acreage, give a greater preparation to the land and seed an increased area of barley, using the best and cleanest seed obtainable?—Winnipeg Free Press.

LEFT. LINDSAY YESTERDAY FOR TRIP OVERSEAS

DRAFT OF 522nd BATTALION JOINS WITH THE 235th AT KINGSTON.

Yesterday morning a draft from the 252nd Battalion, Lindsay, consisting of about 50 men, left for Kingston, where they will be attached to the 253rd Battalion for overseas service. The draft was in command of Capt. Nicholson.

The 253rd Battalion is better known as the Queen's University Highlanders, and the organization is expected to leave for overseas during the next twelve hours. Sergt. A. L. Campbell, of Lindsay, is attached to the battalion.

BONAR LAW'S SON MAY BE KILLED

(Canadian Press Despatch)

LONDON, April 24.—Lieut. C. J. Law, of the King's Own Scottish Borderers, second son of Bonar Law, Chancellor of the Exchequor, is reported wounded in Palestine, and missing. Mr. Law has four sons, the eldest son, who is with the flying corps, was wounded last year.

THREE LOCAL MEN

GORDON MATTHEWS SAFE.

Mr. T. F. Matthews received a cablegram this morning informing him that his son, Lieut. Gordon S. Matthews, with the Trench Mortar Battery, and who was at Vimy Ridge, is safe.

BATTERY SEEKS RECRUITS.

The Cobourg Heavy Battery, with headquarters at Cobourg, and the only heavy battery west of Montreal, is now recruiting its eighth draft, the seventh draft having left for overseas on Thursday, April 5th. The drafts from this battery proceed overseas as soon as recruited to a strength of fifty men, to reinforce the Canadian heavy and siege artillery at the front. While the last draft left only a short time ago, there are already men on the strength of the present draft. The fact of the drafts getting overseas so quickly, together with the interesting nature of the heavy artillery branch of the service, attracts the very best class of men, and particularly appeals to those anxious to get into the active part of the game without delay.

The previous drafts have included among their gunners many qualified officers who resigned their commissions to take advantage of this opportunity, and the personnel of all drafts recruited has been excellent. An interesting feature of the seventy men who compose that draft is that all but two were under 30 years of age and unmarried.

Any man desirous of securing further information with regard to the "Heavies" can do so by applying to Major J. McKinnon, O. C., Cobourg, Ont., or to Gunner D. J. McLeod, who is in the city for a few days and who can be seen at the Oriental Hotel.

There are five Peterborough boys in the Battery already: W. R. McFee, C. A. Hollowell, D. J. McLeod, Frank Barrie and Jas. Turnbull.

Lawrence Soden, Vincent Miller and Cecil Tackery, all of Peterborough, who joined the battery some time ago, left for overseas last week.

WAR WORKERS' BETTER LOT

How the war has improved the conditions of children in the poorest districts of London by giving their parents plenty of employment is strikingly shown in a report of the West Ham Education Authority. The statement gives the number of needy children fed at the borough's school dining centres and at restaurants. For the periods from June 10 to September 16, 1916, a record of meals given to the little ones was as follows: 1914, breakfasts, 73,837, dinners, 83,466; 1915: breakfasts, 27,648; dinners, 32,286; 1916, breakfasts, 17,035; dinners, 21,854.

Decoration of Heroes of Maurepas—Impressive Scene

Gerald Campbell of the London Daily Mail writes in part: Everything and everyone was curiously silent. Except for the whirring of a solitary aeroplane overhead, and one or two sharp words of command from the officers, there was hardly a sound, till suddenly the band struck up a spirited drum and bugle march, and then the "Marchons, Marchons!" of the "Marseillaise," and the general came. There was none of the ordinary pomp of a military ceremony in time of peace. He was in undress uniform and on foot, and accompanied by only two officers.

Walking rather heavily but astonishingly quickly for a man of his build, the generalissimo went straight up to the right flank of the line and then along it to the far end, without a word or a gesture except once to salute the regimental flag at the centre of the central battalion. Still all this time, and until the general had finally left the ground, there was always the same unbroken, deathly silence.

Even when he pinned the medals on the breasts of the handful of men drawn up in front of the three battalions, and when he decorated the flag of the regiment with the Croix de Guerre—the proud distinction won at Maurepas—there was not a sound. General, people, and soldiers, they were too near war and death for the ordinary noisy demonstrations of life.

Light Frock in Crepe

Charming frocks are fashioned in georgette crepe, and those developed in flesh color are particularly lovely. Imagine a flesh-colored frock so designed as to show the latest draped silhouette and daintily embroidered in flesh color. With suitable hat and appropriate button boots, this type of frock proves ideal. The pompadour design shown in the parasol is particularly attractive.

When Peeling Onions

When you are peeling onions, see that your head is on a level with the vegetables, or even lower, and your eyes will never water. When you have finished put both knife and your hands beneath the cold water tap, and let the water run over them freely for a few seconds. If you touch them with warm water first, the smell will linger, but cold water takes it right away.

ALIENS OF ARMY AGE

2,700 in One London District and Making Money

At the Bethnal Green Tribunal Mr. J. Cole said that there were in the district 2,700 aliens of military age who were not serving in the army. While our men had been fighting, these men had enjoyed years of absolute safety and had reaped additional benefits in trade and business, while doing absolutely nothing for the benefit of the country. He was convinced from what he had heard that the wives and mothers of fighting men in the district would take the matter out of the hands of law and order and cause trouble if something was not done. Mr. O'Grady said that day by day foreign names were appearing over shops formerly occupied by Englishmen now at the front. Mr. T. Brooks said that the local music halls were crowded nightly by young aliens of military age.

Civil Mobilization

Gustav Herve wrote in La Victoire (Paris): Opponents of civil mobilisation are horrified at the idea of imitating Germany. It is folly to expect that we can maintain a great army indefinitely, with all its necessary supplies, and at the same time continue to produce luxuries and over-eat ourselves, and enjoy taxis, theatres, cinemas, and jewels as usual.

How many telephone users have given thought to the study of what might be called "telephone courtesy"? There are various phases of it, and many of them are important. Do you ever speak impatiently to the "hello-girls" at the central? Perhaps you were at fault yourself, after all. Did you ever, on finding you had given or had received the wrong number, snap out something not real nice to the other party? Did you ever tell your assistant to call up someone, then let him wait until you had finished a conversation or a letter, regardless of the value of his time? Of course you never swear through the telephone—that is a misdemeanor, and would bring you into court; yet it has been done, for the man who is low-minded enough to be habitually profane is just as apt to so express himself at the phone as elsewhere. The telephone is becoming a home and business institution, so that telephone courtesy is as important as table manners, and should be as generally observed.

People of Thorold were not a little ... when the ... Natural Ga...

The above editorial from the Thorold Post is worthy the notice of every telephone user.

Telephone Courtesy--

A CORDIAL, kindly manner and a cheerful, smiling voice—everywhere people are awakening to the value of these in telephoning.

Not that anyone ever meant to be rude or discourteous. Many of us were just thoughtless, forgetting how sensitive the telephone is, reflecting our every mood.

And in addition to telephone courtesy, it is very helpful to speak distinctly and directly into the mouthpiece of the telephone, with the lips about half an inch from its rim.

And then, of course, we should always make sure of the number by consulting the directory before calling.

OBITUARY

MRS. GEORGE CROUTER.

Minnie Brock, beloved wife of Private George Crouter, who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, passed peacefully away this morning shortly after 11 o'clock. Only yesterday word was received from Pte. Crouter that he would be home in two weeks. Two daughters, Misses Pearl and Rose, also survive her. Her three brothers, Ptes. James, Albert and Sidney Brock, are overseas with the 59th Battalion.

The funeral will be held on Thursday afternoon at 2:30 to the Little Lake Cemetery. Funeral services will be conducted by Rev. Mr. Snyder and Adjt. McElhiney.

FUNERAL OF LATE GEO. AHEARN

The funeral of the late George Ahearn took place this morning from the family residence, Downie street, to St. Peter's Cathedral, where high mass was sung by Rev. Father Phelan. Rev. Father McHugh took the service at the cemetery. The members of Moulders' Union No. 191 turned out sixty strong under Marshals Messrs. J. Londerville and J. Weyer.

The bearers were Messrs. A. Whatley, B. Humbers, D. Cassidy, D. Gleason, D. Burk, and E. Blair.

The other societies of which deceased was a members and which were represented at the services were the T. A. S., the C. M. B. A and the A. O. H.

Floral tributes were sent by the employes of the Peterborough Lock Co., the Peterborough Metal Products Co., and the tool department of the C. G. E.

MRS. THOMAS JAMIESON.

The death occurred at 9 o'clock last night at the residence of her daughter, Mrs John Keenan, 382 Stewart street, of Mrs. Thomas Jamieson. The deceased, whose maiden name was Isabella Heaslip, was born in County Cavan, Ireland, on July 22nd, 1831. She came to Canada when a year old, the family settling in Hope township. She was married in 1850 to Thomas Jamieson, who predeceased her six years. Twelve children came to bless this union, of whom six are living.

The late Mrs Jamieson had seventeen grandchildren and nineteen great-grandchildren. Those left to mourn her loss are four daughters and two sons: Mrs. John Keenan, city; Mrs. P. Tennyson, Otonabee; Mrs. John Mein, Picton, and Mrs. James Craig, Toronto. The sons are Matthews, this city, and Robert of O'Donnell, Ont.

The funeral will take place Wednesday at 3 p.m. to the Little Lake Cemetery. Services will be conducted by Rev. Canon Cornish.

REMAINS LAID AT REST

honorably and efficiently filled for a period now approaching ten years, we, the undersigned members of the Cargary Bar, desire to express our sincere regret that your connection with the profession is about to be severed.

"The assistance you have afforded us, as also your unfailing courtesy in the discharge of your official duties, has been greatly appreciated by us, and will not be readily forgotten.

"We ask you to accept this expression of the high esteem and regard in which we hold you, and trust that in your future life you may attain that prosperity and happiness that you so well merit."

Active in Civic Work

During this time the City of Calgary was fast becoming an important centre, and Mr. Rogers took an active interest in all matters pertaining to the welfare of the city. Among other developments was the formation of the fire department, of which he was the first volunteer chief. The development of the city in time required a paid brigade, and Mr. Rogers retired from active work of the brigade. When he decided to leave Calgary, the following address was presented to him:—

"The members of the Calgary Fire Brigade, learning of your intending departure from the city, and realizing that your doing so will mena the loss of a good friend, desire in some way to convey their best wishes to you, and also to express their appreciation of your numberless efforts in their behalf during the many years of your connection officially and otherwise with their organization.

"It would be useless to attempt to recognize your services as they deserve, or to properly eulogize the friendship and practical sympathy which you have always given the brigade, but we would ask your acceptance of this purse as slight evidence of the fact that we have for years looked to you as the father of our organization."

In Business in Toronto

After leaving Calgary he came east to Toronto Junction, where he again started in the hardware business, and was appointed president of the Retail Merchants' Association of Toronto. After six years he sold out his hardware business, and was appointed Inspector of Prisons and Public Charities for the Province of Ontario. His previous experience in business was just the training required for such a position. He had to purchase everything necessary for all the public institutions, and when it is considered that the inmates of these institutions number up in the thousands it may be seen that this was a work of some magnitude.

His thorough grasp of the duties of his office and his kindly sympathetic nature, together with a strict sense of duty, made him an ideal officer to fill such an onerous position. His untiring efforts to fulfil the duties of his office, and also his efforts to hold the position for one of his subordinates while the official was incapacitated for a year, gradually began to tell on his health, and at last he was forced to take a rest, which he had scarcely done for the whole term of his office, but it was too late, as his health was undermined and for the last year or more he has suffered the ill effects of over work.

His Family Ties

He was twice married. His first wife was Lottie M. Clark, of Winnipeg, by whom he had two children, Miss Bessie Rogers, of Estevan, Sask., and the late Captain Allan Rogers, of the King George's Own Pioneers of India, who was killed in action August, 1915, at the charge of Sulva Bay, at the Dardanelles. His second wife was Emily M. Pellatt, of Toronto, by whom he has one daughter, Miss Rita Rogers, who is at home.

Mr. Rogers was fond of all kinds of sports, and was well known as a cricketer. He always took a great interest in church work work, and was appointed lay reader at St. John's Church, West Toronto, and at St. Michael's and All Angels' Church, Toronto.

He was an active Freemason, and one of his papers on Masonry was of such merit that a special copy of it was prepared by Victoria Lodge, and was presented to the then Prince of Wales (later King Edward) who was Grand Master of all Masons. In acknowledging the receipt of this paper the Prince of Wales' Secretary was instructed to say how highly pleased the Prince was with the paper, and sent him a large autograph photograph of himself in the regalia of Grand Master.

Like other members of the family he served his time in the 57th Battalion.

GERMAN ATTACK GROWS WEAKER

BRITISH TROOPS ARE RESTING REFRESHED IN GARDENS AND WHEAT FIELDS OF HOLY LAND

After a Year in Sandy Desert a Glimpse of Palestine Seemed Like View of Paradise to Wearied Army---New Era Opens in History of the East.

(By Associated Press.)

With the British Forces in Palestine, April 24.—It is over two months since the British troops entered El Arish, which geographically and historically is the gate of Palestine, and a continuation of the advance has now put them firmly on the soil of the Holy Land.

Progress from the sands of the desert to the sown land was gradual and marked by three separate stages. The first ended at El-burg, bringing the troops to the region of grass. After a year of yellow sand the green vistas were soothing and refreshing to the eyes, especially with the relief afforded by the tamarisk trees rising between the sand dunes.

The second stage was from El-burg to Sheik-Zoweld, marking a transition from green meadows to the land of barley fields. Sheik-Zoweld is a mud village, but boasts a fruitful orchard with a cactus hedge such as surrounds every place of fruitfulness in Palestine.

The third stage of the transition was from Sheik-Zoweld to Rafa, and this marked the entry into the country of wheat. Grass was no longer found in patches, but stretching away in undulating plains like the downs of Sussex and Hampshire in England. With the passing of Rafa the British army began the English occupation of Palestine and opened a new era in the history of the East.

CANON DAVIDSON AT BAPAUME

Col. D. Walker received a letter this morning from Major J. C. Davidson stating that he had recently visited the evacuated city of Bapaume, as well as other parts of the recovered line. Major Davidson was well at the time of writing.

FROM "SOMEWHERE."

Pte. Horace Urquhart received a letter from Pte. Bob Pilling, who crossed with the 39th and is now on duty in France. The letter is as follows:

April 1st, 1917.

Hello, Horace:

Just a few lines to let you know I received your letter O. K. and it was sure a surprise for me to hear that you have been over here, done your bit, and back in Canada again. We are sure having some rank weather now, between sleet and snow; but I guess you know what that is. We had the time of our lives at Christmas. The officers could not seem to do enough for us, and we had everything from turkey to cigars and candies—in fact, everything. I have been on a course for ten weeks and had a fine time. I'm repair man now. I only answer the 5:30 a.m. parade and am excused from the others in order to do my work. Have been wheeler and a little bit of every thing since I joined up. Am getting fat on the job. I weigh 154 pounds now. Thanks for the tip about my personal clothes. But I have little left now, as nearly everything is worn out. Remember me to all,

Your friend,
BOB PILLING.

American Liner Sank Hun Sub.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, April 25. — Capt. Rice of the American SS. Mongolia, which has arrived at a British port, told the Associated Press today that the Mongolia had fired the first gun of the war for the United States and sunk a German submarine, which, Capt. Rice said, was about to attack the liner in British waters on April 19th. He declared that there was absolutely no doubt that the U-boat was hit, and that there was every reason to believe it was destroyed.

Auto Show Opens 2 p.m. Thursday

The various committees having in charge arrangements for the Auto Show that opens in the Armories tomorrow held a meeting last night and settled the final details.

It was decided to have the formal opening Thurday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Mayor Duffus will be master of ceremonies, assisted by Col. D. Walker, by whose courtesy the use of the Armories has been secured. The show will be open tomorrow evening and on Friday from 2 p.m. On Saturday it will be open from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m.

Mr. St. Onge, the bicycle expert, who will have charge of the bicycle exhibit of Mr. C. R. Banks at the show, is expected to get up a parade of wheelmen as an attraction during the exhibition.

The drawing for prizes will begin Thursday and Messrs. T. F. Matthews and W. R. Breyfogle will draw the tickets that are to decide the prize winners, Thursday night.

The prizes to be distributed on the opening day are a Goodyear tire, a lap rug donated by Mr. T. F. Matthews, and a set of chains donated by the McKinnon Chain Co. of St. Catharines.

Friday the prizes are a Dominion tire donated by the company of that name at Kitchener, set of chains by the Dominion Chain Co. at Niagara Falls, and an electric flashlight donated by Grant & Thorpe.

Saturday's prizes are a Dunlop tire, an electric cigar-lighter donated by Mr. E. G. Patterson, and a set of legalite lenses from Hislop Bros., Toronto.

The Armories have been appropriately and lavishly decorated by Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons.

The parade of autos will be the first spectacle of the kind ever witnessed in Peterborough and should afford one of the attractions of the season.

CITY OFFICIALS ARRANGE SATISFACTORY TERMS WITH THE QUAKER OATS COMPANY

Mayor Duffus and Two Other Members of Deputation Arrive Home From Chicago---Firm Insists on no Uureasonable Conditions to Rebuild.

Mayor Duffus and Messrs. W. G. Morrow and G. N. Gordon arrived home from Chicago yesterday where they had a very successful conference with the heads of the Quaker Oats Co.. Ald. Weir and McIntyre, who were part of the deputation, proceeded to Milwaukee to inspect the sewage disposal plant, of which it is proposed to build a miniature edition here

Mayor Duffus and the party met the president of the Quaker Oats Co. Mr. Robert Stewart, Mr. John Stewart, and other officials of the firm re the difficulties that confronted the city in acceding to the wishes of the company in the re-building of their plant in Peterboro.. Mr. Stewart was pleased that the city officials had come to him without delay, and consented to the city eliminating from the agreement the purchase of any land for the extension of the company's property.

Complete Bridge in 1919

The difficulty as regards the right of way under the overhead bridge was overcome very easily. The city gained several points that will mean a saving to the municipality of several thousand dollars. The company are satisfied to have both bridges completed in 1919 and not next year as first intended. The agreement as drawn up, and which will be approved of by the council before being sent to Chicago for the signature of the company, contains all the features that the Committee of the Whole agreed that should be in to protect the interests of the citizens.

The bylaw will be prepared at once in accordance with the terms of the agreement, and will be voted on at as early a date as possible.

At a conclusion of the meting the Peterboro deputation were the guests of Mr. Stewart at the University Club.

Fight Around Knoll on Which Houses Are Perched Exceeds in Intensity Any Struggle Since Conflict Began---Available Forces of Germans Exhausted and Attack Slackens.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BRITISH FRONT IN FRANCE, April 25. — The town of Monchy le Preux, which lies about five miles east of Arras, will stand out in history as one of the bloodiest spots of the world war. Fighting northeast and south of this little Artois village perched on a high knoll, has exceeded in intensity any of the individual struggles of the Somme. Efforts of the Germans to retake the village evidently have subsided on account of the sheer exhaustion of their available forces.

3,029 PRISONERS SINCE MONDAY.

LONDON, April 25. — (Official Statement.) — "In the area east of the Savrincourt wood during the night we captured the hamlet of Bilhem, northeast of Trescault village. Fighting took place early this morning along our front between the Cobeul and Scarpe Rivers. Further progress has been made by us, and the ground gained has been secured. The number of prisoners captured by us since Monday morning it 3,029, including fifty-six officers.

RUSSIANS FLEE FROM CAPITAL.

LONDON, April 25. — A Daily Express despatch from Petrograd reports an exodus from the Russian capital, generally attributed to the fear of a German advance against the city. One permit office on Tuesday was besieged by eight hundred people. Seats on trains for Moscow must be booked several days ahead.

GERMANS DIE IN WIRE ENTANGLEMENTS.

PARIS, April 25. — Ground was gained last night in the Champagne, the war office announces. The German attack in the neighborhood of Hurtebise was repulsed. Germans made several futile attempts to raid the French trenches near Tahure and Maisons de Champagne, leaving many dead in the wire entanglements.

ADMINISTRATION RESIGNS.

AMSTERDAM, April 25. — A telegram from Luxemburg says the administration has placed its resignation in the hands of the Grand Duchess. The action was based on the ground that the government no longer enjoys the confidence of the people and that neither producers nor consumers were doing their duty.

GERMANS ARE DESPERATE.

LONDON, April 25.—Telegraphing from British army headquarters in France today, Reuter's correspondent says. The Scarpe valley continues to be the centre of fierce fighting now progressing along our front from Lens to St. Quentin, and we have gained substantial successes. Yesterday afternoon we attacked with considerable forces beyond Monchy and cleared various troubles on the points of the enemy. The Germans continued to mass in the Sart and Vert woods, but throughout yesterday and last night our batteries maintained a searching fire, and it is certain that these smoking places are strewn with enemy dead.

No fighting has proved more costly to the Germane in proportion to the numbers in action than have the battles of the past three days. The relentless manner in which they have flung their troops against our positions since Monday suggests that they are desperately anxious to check our advance between Lens and Vimy Ridge, an advance that is directly frontal upon Douai. The morale of the Germans is becoming distinctly worse, notwithstanding that they fight doggedly. The best that a sergeant, pirsoner of the first guards, could say for his division was that the men were not quite so demoralized as were the men of another corps which he mentioned.

CAPT. BURNHAM URGED TO PLEAD FOR LIFE OF BOY

Labor Men Protest Against Hanging of 16 Year Old Youth Convicted of Murder in Manitoba.

Capt. Burnham, M.P., has been asked to use his influence with Premier Borden and Minister of Justice Doherty to prevent the execution of the 16-year-old boy Spain, who has been sentenced to death in Manitoba for a double murder. The Captain has already declared in the House that a boy of that age was too young to realize the enormity of his offence and that capital punishment should not be resorted to in his case.

The boy referred to was an inmate of the Barnardo Home and his father is now fighting with the British army in France

Miss Rose Henderson, the well-known social reformer in Montreal, called the matter to the attention of local labor men when she sent the following telegram to G. L. Myland secretary of the Typographical Conference of Ontario and a delegate to the last Dominion Trades Congress, to which Miss Henderson also was a delegate. She wired:

"Determined effort is being made to execute sixteen-year-old boy Spain. In the interests of childhood and humanity I urge you to pass strong resolution in your trades council demanding crown clemency and favoring the Bickerdike bill for the abolition of capital punishment. Telegraph the resolution at once to the Premier at Ottawa."

Mr. Myland sent the following lettergram to Capt. Burnham at Ottawa last night:

"Peterborough labor men demand crown clemency in case of boy Spain. Take this matter up with the Prime Minister, Minister of Justice, or the Cabinet and reiterate Labor's protest."

At the next meeting of the Trades Council this matter and the Bickerdike bill will be discussed.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 25, 1917

HAROLD HILL'S LAST LETTER.

CAPT. W. H. HILL yesterday received a letter that was written by his son, the late Capt. Harold Hill, on the 29th of March, a few days before he lost his life on the battlefield. The missive is a peculiarly sad one when received under such circumstances, but will be doubly prized by the family and friends of the fallen hero, as almost a word spoken from the grave. It is especially significant as showing one characteristic that always distinguished Harold Hill—a disposition to look on the bright side of everything and to dwell on the virtues rather than on the failings of his fellows. The letter was written in reply to one sent by Mr. Hill asking his son concerning the reports that Canadian and other colonial troops were misbehaving themselves while on leave in London. The young man replied as follows:

> My dear Pater:
>
> I am afraid I am not keeping up my weekly letters, as of yore, but I surely try to keep in touch as much as possible. Received three letters from you just lately. Your reports about the work of Canadians in London is true to some extent, but the fact that it lays special emphasis on the work of colonials is easily explained. The English and Scotch Tommies have their homes to go to when on leave. Ours, however, have no such place, and hence London, which appears to be the centre of all activity, becomes the scene of attraction for these men. Here they are more or less observed by the military authorities and newspaper men, and if anything out of the ordinary does occur they are able to give more attention than would otherwise happen if the men were scattered over the country.
>
> Again, these men have been enduring a tremendous amount of hardships for many months. Is it not natural that they would relax when they do get the opportunity? Then the extremes come in, but, after all, in proportion to the numbers who go on leave, the percentage of men who exceed the limit is certainly very small. I do not mean to infer that the above is a defence for these actions, but a good many people misunderstand the circumstances, and it is not quite fair to the men.
>
> The boots are very fine, easy to walk in, waterproof, and kept my feet in good shape, which is essential around here. I have had a thicker sole put on them as it tends to strengthen them.
>
> Today I received a letter from Doug. Hammond. He is still in the hospital, but expects to return to us by April 20th. I hope he does, for he is a very fine chap and it is nice to have someone around from home.
>
> News of Aimee's wedding just came in, and was so glad to hear everything was O.K. I hope my little gift will arrive in good order.
>
> Things are booming along quite merrily at present. We "strafe" the Bosche every day, and he "strafes" back. We are, however, at it all the time and so he suffers the most. Occasionally one does commence to feel slightly sorry for him, but then he does such rotten things that all this passes away at once.
>
> Ketcheson has been sent back to England. He will not return to the front again, I do not think, for he got it very badly. I am very glad for his sake at least that he won't get back.
>
> I suppose Spring is coming along nicely by this time and the old car will be running about again. I will take you for some very thrilling rides, father, when I get back, just to make up for lost time.
>
> Best of wishes.
>
> Affectionately your son,
> HAROLD.

Whatever misconduct the colonial troops may have at any time been guilty of, those who know Harold Hill are convinced that he had no part in it, but that anything of the kind would be repulsive to one of his nature. And yet, with the true spirit of charity, he seeks not to apologize for, but to palliate to some extent, the weaknesses of others.

The truly brave man always recognizes heroism in his adversaries. The posthumous letter from the young man expresses sympathy for the misguided enemy who eventually took his life.

Whatever may be said of the barbarity of the German soldier and of the scandals he has written into the annals of civilized warfare, his bravery is beyond question, and it is this virtue that has made the war the gruelling conflict that it is. Men arrayed against them add nothing to the lustre of their own achievements when they deprecate the foe they have struggled with for the past two years.

Thinking good of all men is an indication of a great nature, and dwelling on human virtues rather than weaknesses was what made the late Harold Hill the true man that he was in every sense.

MR. COWAN AND WEALTH.

THERE IS THE TRUE academic ring in the arguments advanced by Mr. H. B. Cowan in his communication published in The Review yesterday in reply to a recent editorial in these columns advising people to deal with their home merchants. Mr. Cowan's logic is that of the college professor, but his views will not stand the acid test of actual practice, but would blow up like the sophistries of John Stuart Mills and other political economists, whose writings are no longer regarded as standard text books by practical statesmen.

We still maintain that the man who sends $5 to a mail order house in Toronto reduces the wealth of his own city by just that amount. We use the term "wealth" in its modern sense, of course, when we make the statement. In theory, money may not be wealth, but in prosaic everyday affairs it certainly makes a rather desirable substitute.

A man may have $1000 in cash and nothing else that he can call his own in all the wide world. Mr. Cowan, let us suppose, ownes cows, horses and pigs valued by the assessor at the same figure. The man with the cash is just as well off in the eye of the law or any other optic as Mr. Cowan himself is. The property value of the latter's possessions may fluctuate, and so may the money that the other has in his pocket or in the bank.

Mr. Cowan truly says that the arguments advanced by The Review sound so plausible that they receive wide acceptance. They have been tested and provd, both by individuals, nations and municipalities. It strikes us that Mr. Cowan weakens his own argument when he says that the only use of money is as a medium of exchange and that it has been invented in order to facilitate the transaction of business.

That being the case we confess our inability to understand how he can dispute the claim that sending money out of a community tends to cripple the commerce carried on at home. On this point The Review and Mr. Cowan are not really so far apart after all.

Referring to the illustration used by The Review, Mr. Cowan says the original patron of a mail order house, the man who sent the only $5 in circulation in his own village to an outside firm and so bankrupted his native place, had he sent away a pair of boots worth $4.75, and received sugar of the same value in return, he would have worked no economic mischief. If the boots sent out had been the only pair in the village, worn by the residents in turn on their individual dress occasions, would the man who had made away with them and so condemned his neighbors to go barefooted for the rest of their days be regarded as a public benefactor?

"Foolish restrictions on trade," remarks Mr. Cowan, "always work out injuriously instead of beneficially." All depends on what is meant by foolish. We take it that Mr. Cowan would regard all restrictions as such and refuse to make any distinction. Trade restrictions, as generally understood, have made nations commercially great. Canada floundered helplessly in the slough of industrial depression until trade resrictions were employed to work the country's rescue. The United States leads all the nations in the world in manufactures, and in that country the restrictions that Mr. Cowan brands as foolish have been pushed to the limit.

Suppose every mail order house was required by law to pay a duty of ten per cent. ad valorem upon all goods expressed, freighted or mailed to Peterborough, the cost of such articles would not increase in this city. The competition among the merchants here would prevent that. But, in order to carry on business, the mail order man would be obliged to reduce his prices by at least ten per cent., for the traffic would not bear the duty charges. The local consumers would be just as well off, the dealers very much better, and the community would enjoy a new era of prosperity. Of course, such a condition will never arise, but the illustration is used to demonstrate that all trade restrictions are not lacking in economic wisdom.

A Peterborough man may own a building which he leases to a merchant. He does not patronize that merchant, but sends his money to Toronto. The first day of the month comes round and the tenant defaults in the matter of his rent. The owner may wonder why times are hard with the latter, why the value of his building as an income earner falls off, but the lesson is obvious.

The farmer who has produce to sell brings it to Peterborough and finds a ready market for cash. He would not do so if every wage-earner in the city was spending his money in Toronto.

FARMERS FAVORED AGAIN.

UNDER THE TAX SCHEME in the budget brought down on Tuesday by Finance Minister White the farmers escape special taxation while the manufacturers are hit heavily. The farmers are pleased, no doubt, whatever may be the feeling of the others. The Government, as usual, has placed the burden on the broadest shoulders.

AS UNCLE SAM SEES US.

THE BOSTON HERALD is another leading American newspaper that holds this country up as an example to the United States in the preparations for and the conduct of the war. It says:

"Canada has found itself in the past two years and a half. It has been through the fire of a test such as few dependencies have ever had to face, and it is coming out of the fire not only welded closer to the British Empire, but of empire strength itself. It has set an example and has had experiences that are very likely to prove of much value to us on this side of the border in the months ahead.

"Remember that to do things on the scale that Canada has been doing them since the summer of 1914, the United States would raise and train and equip an army of 5,000,000 men in a little over two years and ship 4,000,000 of them across the Atlantic. It would raise and spend no less than $12,000,000,000 for war purposes. Yet when the warcloud burst over the world Canada was fully as unprepared as we have been. Its army, which has grown to 400,000 soldiers, was smaller than the militia of Massachusetts, and its resources and industries, now splendidly mobilized and efficiently organized for the great work in hand, were on the most peaceful kind of a peace basis.

"Small wonder that our patriotic gatherings listen with much respect and with deep interest to Canadian speakers. One thing is certain, the Canada of the future is not to be looked on with anything resembling the superior air that we have habitually assumed on this side of the border. The peace that has made it unnecessary to build a fort along the 3,000 miles of border will continue, but it is not going to be the peace of the condescending kindness of a big brother to a helpless youngster. An American only belittles himself if he fails to recognize and applaud the great things that Canada has done in this world crisis."

It matters little to this country, after all, if an occasional American fails to recognize what Canada has done in the war, but it does matter that hundreds of Canadian politicians, backed up by a section of the press, have not only failed to appreciate, but have persistently belittled their nation's share in the conflict.

CONSCRIPTING WEALTH.

THE CRY HAS BEEN set up that there should be no conscription of manhood without conscription of wealth. What has the Government been doing in the latter regard for the past year? The budget speech of Finance Minister White, delivered in the House yesterday, shows that $12,500,000 was derived from the tax on war profits.

This certainly looks like the form of conscription insisted upon by certain classes.

EVERY MOVE OF TANK IS VERY REASSURING

"Willies," as Soldiers Call Them, Seen From a New Angle—"Gentle and Wise"

I spent a grey afternoon in the company of those strangest of all the strange children of the year—the Tanks, or, as their human brethren over here call them, the Willies, writes Wilson Young. Among all the machine people who swarm over France and wander in companies on her roads and fields, a race by themselves—motor lorries, caterpillars, tractors, travelling workshops, motor kitchens, and tanks—the tanks are easily lords, being larger, heavier, cleverer, naughtier, more formidable, and more intelligent than anything else. Like everyone else who has met them I fell in love with their lumbering and yet ingratiating ways. They wandered about their playing ground like elephants; and infants in time though they be, seemed to belong to that ageless company of immense things that are informed with the wisdom of the ages.

Inspire Confidence

A group of little French children stood gaping at them absorbed as in the pages of a story book that had come true. And a peasant, heavy footed with the mire of the field, watching one rolling past said to me: "Je crois qu'il y a quelque chose de bon pour nous la; j'ai confiance en ca!" (I fancy there's something good for us there. I've confidence in thoke).

"J'ai confiance en ca"—that is above all the feeling with which the Willie inspires the beholder. One can understand the almost superstitious reverence with which the Tommy regards him. He believes that the Willies can do anything, and a little more. This, be it said, is not quite fair to the Willies. There are many things that they cannot do. They cannot sit up and beg. They are no use as transport vehicles. They will not fetch and carry. You cannot go joy-riding in them or take them out for an early morning spin to whip up the blood. They are very poor craft in which to navigate deep waters, and they cannot fly.

An Easy Grace

Their requirements in space, material, and time are considerable; but two things they can do—they can proceed and they can fight. When a Willie is ordered to "proceed" anywhere, he proceeds with an inevitability and comprehensiveness that are entirely satisfactory. You simply have to lay him, by compass, like a gun on his objective, and he proceeds there, slowly, uncomfortably, expensively, and unquietly—but surely. And this afternoon, when I was watching him crossing shell craters, going over trenches, and through mud that would hopelessly have bogged any other sort of vehicle, I began to see why he is so beloved of his young trainers and keepers. He is so very invulnerable and so very efficient. He is gentle, withal, and his movements have an easy grace that, to me, at any rate, come as a surprise.

DEMOCRATIC PRINCE

Credit for the splendid successes of the gallant Serb allies in the Balkans is due to the brilliant leadership of their Regent, the Crown Prince Alexander. He has been described as the most democratic ruler in Europe, and this fact naturally makes him extremely popular among his peasant soldiers. His Royal Highness is devoted to his troops, and when on active service insisted on partaking of the same fare as his soldiers. During the evacuation of the Serbian army from Durazzo, after the terrible retreat across the Albanian mountains, Prince Alexander, although badly wounded, refused to leave the quay side until every Serbian soldier had embarked on the transports.

WOUNDED IN LONDON

How Ambulances Meet Trains and Make Men Comfortable

The entire ambulance transport of the London district is in the hands of the London Ambulance Column, a body of volunteers, and this not only includes meeting the trains from the front, but also removing patients from the various hospitals and taking them for special treatment, as well as running them to the various specialist hospitals outside the London district proper. When a train is expected a selection of cars and ambulances from those on the books is made, so that there shall be enough—but no more than enough—vehicles to meet the train and deal with the stated number of cases.

As soon as the decision is made the owners of cars have to be rung up, the cars brought round to headquarters to receive pillows and blankets and sisters, and then they make their way to the station, arriving half an hour before the train is due.

The stretchers are lined up on the platform, so that the wounded can be handled as gently and expeditiously as possible. Surgical hampers, with everything inside which will be required in emergencies, accompany the column. The number of calls per day average seven, and the usual number of patients handled is about 200. Each patient receives individual handling in transport, and each ambulance carries a nurse, who does all she can for the sufferers to make them comfortable.

Kut Country in Nutshell

"A man said to me that for nine months he had not seen a woman, tree, or stone—an accurate description of the country," says Lieutenant-Colonel Godfrey Collins, M.P., in a letter from Mesopotamia.

People give more freely in cold weather than in hot.—Lord Knutsford.

Rev. R. J. Campbell: In time of war we applaud our soldiers as heroes and in time of peace neglect and despise them.

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review: I am sorry indeed to have to cross swords with Mr. Peck, but since he has thrown down the gauntlet—though ill-advisedly—I accept the challenge in self-defense. I do not see why he should be surprised at your criticism on Saturday and overlook that of Thursday's issue, which apparently must also have been inspired by a statement from an officer of the board.

My argument with the board was that the matron of the shelter could not legally refuse to take in any neglected child sent or brought there on the authority of the agent. My predecessor in office, I understand, followed the same procedure as I, so that the point raised should hardly be a novel one to the board. With regard to the specific case referred to in your editorial, Mr. Peck's explanation is misleading.

The child was not taken by me; it did not come from a comfortable home, because it had none, and it was not returned to such home by me. The facts of this case are of too sad and sordid a nature to be exploited before the public, unless it is absolutely necessary; but I might state that arrangements were being made for the child to be made a ward of the society at the request of the mother. The commital papers were made out, and the case would have been before the magistrate for a hearing the day following the admission to the shelter had it been admitted.

The child was homeless, it needed care and attention, and had I acted otherwise than I did I should have been false to my trust, false to my conscience, and false to my religion and my God.

Yours truly,
C. A. G. SPENCE

WORDS OF WISDOM

Endeavor to be patient in bearing with defects and infirmities in others: because thou also hast many things which others must bear with.

If thou canst not make thyself such as thou wouldst, how canst thou expect to have another according to thy liking?

We would fain have others perfect, and yet we amend not our own defects.

We would have others strictly corrected, but will not be corrected ourselves.

The large liberty of others displeases us, and yet we would not be denied anything we ask for.

We wish others to be bound down by laws, and we suffer ourselves to be in no sort restrained.

Thus it is clear how seldom we weigh our neighbors as we weigh ourselves—Thomas à Kempis.

Lemon Shortcake

Make cake as for strawberry shortcake and pour over the two layers the following sauce: One large cup of sugar, one-half cup of butter, one egg, all the juice and half the grated rind of one lemon, one teaspoon of nutmeg, and three tablespoons of boiling water. Cream the butter and sugar and beat in the egg whipped light, the lemon and the nutmeg. Beat hard for ten minutes and add the boiling water a few drops at a time. Put in a double boiler and boil until thick.

Preserved Plums

If you want your fruit to look nice take 2 pounds of sugar for every 3 pounds of plums. Wash the plums and drain. Put sugar on a slow fire in preserving kettle with as much water as it will melt and let simmer slowly. Prick each plum with a needle and place in cans in boiler of cold water, pour over syrup and cook until the skins break and you feel they are thoroughly heated. As they settle add more syrup, seal while hot.

Bananas en Casserole

Take six bananas, peel them and cut in half lengthwise. Lay in a casserole and sprinkle over three tablespoons of sugar into which has been mixed one quarter of a teaspoon ground cloves and a pinch of salt, a tablespoon of lemon juice and bake half an hour.

Hominy Griddle Cakes

Use one pint of warm boiled hominy. Add one pint of milk, one pint of flour. Beat two or three eggs and stir into the batter with a little salt. Fry as other griddle cakes.

First Aid to Burns

The first application to a burn should be sweet oil, or if that be not at hand use cream of tartar, and then send for a doctor if it is severe.

The white spots which hot dishes often leave on tables and other wooden surfaces can be removed by applying a mixture composed of equal parts of alcohol, olive oil and pure cider vinegar. Shake well before using. Rub well with a woolen cloth and polish with another soft woolen cloth.

To Clean Knives

Cleaning knives on a knife board or in a machine helps to wear them out. The best way is to dip a cork in knife powder, and rub the knife blade with it firmly and evenly. If the knives are very stained rub them first in just the same way, with a piece of raw potato.

Broiled Tomatoes

Wipe dry and cut in half. Dip in cracker crumbs, then in beaten egg and again in the crumbs. Butter the broiler and broil from six to seven minutes.

Fighting-Writing Irishman

James O'Kelly, M.P. for North Roscommon, Ireland, for thirty years, who died during the Great War aged 73, had an interesting career. He was at one time an officer in the French army, which he quitted soon after the fall of Paris. In 1870 he entered journalism, and became the editor of the New York Herald. He afterwards proceeded to the war in Cuba as a newspaper correspondent, and was taken prisoner. Six years later he took part in the United States expedition against the Sioux chief, Sitting Bull. He went to the Soudan for the London Daily News.

Railroadman Did His Bit

"These men are doing almost as good service for their country as the men who are fighting in France," said Mr. Ingleby Oddie at an inquest on a L. and S.W. Railway man, who was killed while crossing the lines at Waterloo.

Lauder's Will Power.

Harry Lauder's reappearance at the Shaftesbury in London in "Three Cheers" was a triumph of will-power.

Not by the flicker of an eyelash did he betray the storm of grief that has shaken him since he learned that his only son had fallen in battle. He sang his songs and carried through his business magnificently, and only those behind the scenes knew how much he is still suffering from the shock of bereavement.

His great song, "The Laddies Who Fought and Won," was a tremendous test of his fortitude, for nearly every line reminded him and the audience of one laddie who fought and will never come home. Women wept, and tears trickled down the bronzed cheeks of many men in khaki. It was a scene of intense emotion.

At the end the audience, full of admiration for his stoicism as well as of enthusiasm for his art, cheered him to the echo, rising and waving hats and handkerchiefs.

When the curtain fell Lauder made a sincere little speech.

"I thank you all," he said, "for the great sympathy you have shown in our sore trial. I came here tonight because over 200 people depend on me for their breakfast; and I know my soldier son would have said to me, 'Do your duty.'

"I see before me many soldiers, and I say to them and to all of you that the great sacrifices that have been made shall not be made without victory."

British Shell Factories.

There are to-day in Great Britain, says Sydney Brooks in an article in the National Service Magazine, more than 4,500 firms that before the war knew nothing of munitions and never dreamed of making them, and that are now doing nothing else. About 100 colossal Government plants have been built. One-third of these factories are national shell factories for the production of light and medium shell, organized and managed by local boards of directors. Of the remainder, 12 are national projectile factories manufacturing heavy shell, 16 are national filling factories and stations for loading gun and trench mortar ammunition and grenades, 2 are special fuse factories, 22 are explosive factories, and others are engaged in the production of cartridge cases, small arms ammunition, gauges and tools. I have called them colossal. The 12 heavy shell factories cover an area of more than 200 acres; the 16 filling factories and stations, with more than 2,000 buildings, cover 2,400 acres.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

Sleepy Time Story Concerning a Very Vain Little Bird.

HOW MISFORTUNE CAME TO IT

Member of a Large Family Became Proud Because It Thought Itself Smart—A Fateful Jump In the Barnyard—Pride Is Humbled.

Why, it is nearly dark, said Uncle Ben to little Ned and Polly Ann. I believe I will tell you a story about

THE SMART CHICKEN.

Once on a time there was a nice family of chickens living in a nice chicken yard in a charming town, and the chickens belonged to a dear little girl named Milly.

Milly was very fond of the chickens. She had given all of them nice names. I can't remember all the names, but there were Flossie and Fluffie and Tipple and Topple and many others.

One of the others was Smokie. He was given that name because he looked so much like the gray smoke that came out of the kitchen chimney.

Smokie was really quite a pretty little chicken, and Milly gave him a great deal of petting. Perhaps that turned his head. He became a very vain little chicken. If Milly came out to the chicken yard and did not notice him he was much displeased.

So to make sure she would notice him Smokie, when his little wings would bear him, hopped up on the roof of one of the colony houses. When that didn't attract Milly's attention Smokie would flutter up on the fence.

"You'd best be careful," Mother Hen said, for Smokie had a reckless way of fluttering down from his perch.

Smokie tossed his little head. He thought he was quite able to take care of himself.

One day Milly came out to the chicken yard with a big pan of yellow looking stuff. She set it down on the ground and called the chicks to her.

Smokie must have been taking a nap on the fence, for he hadn't noticed her come in.

When she called: "Chick, chick, chick! Come, chick, chick, chick!" he turned and almost tumbled off the fence. Then he made a dive and landed right in the midst of the pan of yellow stuff.

It was cornmeal mush, which Milly had brought out nice and warm.

Smokie landed right in the middle of it, and the more he tried to get out the more trouble he had, for it was very sticky.

Milly picked him out with mush in his wings and in his feathers.

"Oh, dear! Now you'll have to have a bath!" cried Milly.

So she took him into the house and washed him in warm water, and Smokie felt so queer and had to sit in the basket by the fire until he was dry. The next time Smokie will watch where he jumps.

Riddle.

Nine times my value is not a cent, be sure.
Yet he who owns me certainly is not poor.
I give to all their daily bread; and though I'm in a race
And driven by wind and water, yet I never leave my place.
Answer.—A mill.

WOMAN AVOIDS OPERATION

Medicine Which Made Surgeon's Work Unnecessary.

Astoria, N. Y.—"For two years I was feeling ill and took all kinds of tonics. I was getting worse everyday. I had chills, my head would ache, I was always tired. I could not walk straight because of the pain in my back and I had pains in my stomach. I went to a doctor and he said I must go under an operation, but I did not go. I read in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and told my husband about it. I said 'I know nothing will help me but I will try this.' I found myself improving from the very first bottle, and in two weeks time I was able to sit down and eat a hearty breakfast with my husband, which I had not done for two years. I am now in the best of health and did not have the operation."—Mrs. JOHN A. KOENIG, 502 Flushing Avenue, Astoria, N. Y.

Every one dreads the surgeon's knife and the operating table. Sometimes nothing else will do; but many times doctors say they are necessary when they are not. Letter after letter comes to the Pinkham Laboratory, telling how operations were advised and were not performed; or, if performed, did no good, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was used and good health followed.

If you want advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass.

GAVE A HOSPITAL

An American Born Woman of Conspicuous Achievement.

ATTENDS FRIEND AND FOE.

Daughter of Peran Stevens of Boston Married an English Nobleman and Founded a Hospital That Did Remarkable Service In Servia.

The Austro-Hungarian government has made public a high official tribute to the services rendered in Servia by Lady Paget and her hospital. It is one of the rare occasions in this great war in which one belligerent nation has said a kind word, even in the name of humanity, about the subject of an enemy nation.

Lady Paget's hospital work in Servia is well known to Americans, for she labored in direct co-operation with the American Red Cross. Says the report:

"Even under the Servian regime it was thanks to Lady Paget's mission among our prisoners that the epidemic of typhus did not have more victims. In her hospital she continually nursed 70 per cent of our soldiers. Those who recovered were well nourished and given clean linen and shoes before they were sent to the prison camp. The attendants in her hospital she recruited entirely out of our soldiers, who were well fed and housed. She always gave them clean linen, good clothes and good shoes. Lady Paget repeatedly visited our prison camp and did all she could to induce the Servians to be humane in their treatment of our people. The lady herself was the soul of the mission.

LADY PAGET.

"As a result of Lady Paget's friendly treatment of the Austro-Hungarian prisoners she became the victim of suspicion in England and had to justify herself in a London meeting. There she declared—for we have read the speech which she made there—that she would continue her activity and if the standpoint that she took was not acceptable she would give up her post as the leader of this mission."

Lady Paget is American born, the daughter of Paran Stevens, at one time owner of the Tremont House in Boston. Her husband is General Sir Arthur H. Paget. Lady Paget's benefactions have been remarkable. During the Boer war she equipped a hospital ship and called it the Maine. She made a great collection of furniture of the period of James I. for the Jamestown exposition. She has been extremely popular in British society, particularly in the reign of Edward VII.

Clever American Woman Who Has Always Proved Warm Friend of Allies

MOST Canadians are familiar with the brilliant novels and short stories of Mrs. Edith Wharton. She has given the world several intimate studies of the life of the smart set of her own country, written in an English that is diamond like in its incisive purity and with an insight into character that has established her as one of the leading literary women of her own land. It is not generally known, however, that Mrs. Wharton has done a great deal of work for the Allies since the outbreak of the war. Even before the Americans entered the struggle, she was never neutral in thought, and in addition to writing about the cause of embattled democracy, she also did a great deal of practical work.

In the month of November, 1914, the "American Hostels for Refugees" were founded by Mrs. Wharton and a group of American friends in Paris to provide lodgings and a restaurant for the Belgians and French streaming in from burning villages and bombarded towns. These people were destitute, starving, helpless, and in need of immediate aid. The work developed into an organization which cares permanently for over 4,000 refugees, chiefly French, from the invaded regions.

There are six centres for the work. One house has a restaurant where 500 meals a day are served, at a charge of ten centimes a meal, and an "ouvroir" where about fifty women are employed under a dressmaker, with a day nursery, infant school, library, and recreation room. Another centre is a rest house for women and children requiring rest and careful feeding. Young mothers are received here after the birth of their children, and children whose mothers are in hospitals. Sixty meals a day are served here, with a special diet for invalids. Another centre contains a clothing depot, which has distributed nearly 100,000 garments, including suits of strong working clothes for the men placed in factories, layettes, and boots.

MRS. EDITH WHARTON

Such is the work of the "American Hostels for Refugees." The present cost of maintaining all the branches of this well-organized charity is about five thousand dollars a month.

Mrs. Wharton has also established "American Convalescent Homes for Refugees." Many refugees come broken in health, with chronic bronchitis and incipient tuberculosis and even severer maladies. Seventy-one beds are provided. There is also a house where thirty children suffering from tuberculosis of the bone and of the glands are being cared for. Four thousand dollars a month should be provided at once for this work.

At the request of the Belgian Government Mrs. Wharton has founded the "Children of Flanders Rescue Committee." The bombardment of Furnes, Ypres, Poperinghe, and the villages along the Yser drove the inhabitants south. The Belgian Government asked Mrs. Wharton if she could receive sixty children at forty-eight hours' notice. The answer was "yes," and a home established. Soon after the Belgian Government asked Mrs. Wharton to receive five or six hundred children. Houses were at once established, and these houses are under the management of the Flemish Sisters, who brought the children from the cellars of village homes, from lonely farmhouses, in two cases from the arms of the father, killed by a fragment of shell. Lace schools, sewing and dressmaking classes, agriculture and gardening are carried on. Seven hundred and thirty-five children are cared for. The monthly expense is 8,000 francs.

One of the most important charities, in which Mrs. Wharton is interested, is that for "French Tuberculous War Victims," in direct connection with the Health Department of the French Ministry of War. Nearly 100,000 tuberculous soldiers have already been sent back from the French front. They must be shown how to get well and receive the chance to get well. One hospital is already in operation and three large sanatoria are nearing completion, with 100 beds each. The object is not only to cure the sufferers, but to teach them a trade, enabling them to earn their living in the country. Tuberculous soldiers are coming daily to the offices of this charity in ever increasing numbers, asking to be taken in.

"Then I suppose you have often helped mob the umpire?"

"Well, I tried it once. I'd read the funny papers and thought it was easy and customary, but two months in the hospital and one in jail changed my mind."—Kansas City Times.

An Irregular Proceeding.

"I'm afraid that man was never cut out for a high financier," said Mr. Dustin Stax reflectively.

"You wouldn't condemn him simply because he makes one big losing?"

"No. But this was all his own money."—Washington Star.

AUTO PARADE THURSDAY NIGHT

The following is the formation and line of travel of the Motor Show Automobile Parade which is being conducted on Thursday night under the auspices of the Motor Association:

All cars come into Water street at 7 p.m. from Brock street, turn south on Water street, and form in two lines, one on each side of the sreet. These two lines will extend down Water street and west on Charlotte street as far as George street. Motors should form thimselves into these two lines before the parade starts. Then the two band trucks will be located at the proper position in the parade, and the line will start in single file ta 7:30. Chief of Police Thompson will supervise the starting of the parade.

The route will be west on Charlotte to Park, north to Hunter, east to George, south to the C. P. R. Turn at the C. P. R., going into the yard and around the garden block, coming out to George, and turn to the north/ going up the right side of the street. This will double the parade and give the participants a chance to view the others. The parade will pass on up George street to Antrim street, east on Antrim to Water, north to Smith, west to George, south to London, west to Aylmer, and south to McDonnel.

At McDonnel and Aylmer streets the head car will turn east on McDonnell, the second car continuing down Aylmer, the third car going east on McDonnel, and the fourth car going down Aylmer, and so on. This will divide the parade into two divisions. The one going east on McDonnel will turn south on George to Murray, then east until the head reaches Aylmer, when this line will close up next to the right-hand curb, stop, and unload. The line going down Aylmer will turn east on the right-hand side of Murray, north on George, and west on McDonnel until the head reaches Aylmer, then close up on the right-hand curb, stop and unload. This will leave the two lines of cars all parked on both sides of McDonnel, George and Murray streets, and will avoid confusion. The bands should both turn from Aylmer into McDonnel and pass around George and Murray after the parade stops, so as to run the band cars up opposite the entrance to the Armories, so that the bands can play there while the cars are unloading. Chief Thompson has promised ample police protection to the cars. Both the 57th Regimant Band and the Salvation Army Band will take part in the parade.

Kindly decorate your cars a little, if possible, but come anyway, without decorations, if necessary. Of course, the more decorations in the way of flags and bunting, the greater the success of the parade. Every car owner should get out with his car. This is a public parade. The Motor Association is only trying to boost it along, but the co-operation of every car owner is desired t make this a great event. We should have at least three hundred cars in this line.

Mr. T. F. Matthews, chairman of the Red Cross Committee, will head the parade, with Mr. E. G. Patterson's car second. These two cars will divide at Aylmer and McDonnel streets, leading the two divisions around the Armories as outlined above.

Three trucks for transporting the bands are being donated by the Canadian General Electric Company, through Mr. Patterson, one truck is being provided by Mr. G. A. Gillespie, and the Peterborough Utilities truck secured by Mr. H. O. Fiske.

ACTIVITIES AT Y.M.C.A.

This (Wednesday) evening, a very important meeting for the boys will be held in the Y. M. C. A., the object being to organize a boys' garden club. Every boy who has a backyard garden should be present at this meeting as it is the intention of the Y. M. C. A. to give valuable prizes for the best backyard gardens. It would be well for parents to encourage their boys to join this club, as lectures will be given the boys on how to plant and cultivate their gardens, by expert gardeners.

Mr. Walter Oke offers the prize of a gold watch in a competition among boys, and to encourage the planting and bringing forward of a crop of potatoes. The competition will be open to twelve boys or youths not older than 16 years. Must be amateurs. Mr. Oke will supply the seed, giving one peck to each of the contestants. Who will be the first twelve boys to get in on this big offer? This offer is made to all boys of the city whether members of the Y. M. C. A. or not. For information apply to the Y. M. C. A.

Boys' Swimming Campaign, April 30th to May 5th. This will be an opportunity for boys who are unable to swim to learn the art correctly. Parents would do well to see that their boys take advantage of this campaign.

Czarevitch Alexis Is Very Pathetic Figure In Romanoff Downfall

WHENEVER a dynasty, no matter how corrupt it may have been, is driven from the throne of a country, there is always a certain amount of glamor left clinging around the younger generation of the royal house. Portugal was perhaps an exception, and it is certain that no one would try to make a hero of the degenerate Crown Prince of Germany if it should ever happen that the Teutons were to rise against the War Lords. It will be remembered, however, that the son of Louis XVI. of France has been made a popular figure in mystery and romance. He was too young to have done anything to win execration, and the world came to sympathize with his sufferings. When the people of England drove out the Stuarts and established religious and political freedom in the land, romance still clung around the Pretender. Bonnie Prince Charlie is beloved now by Whig and Liberal as well as Tory and Jacobite. It seems probably that the little Czarevitch of Russia, the Prince Alexis, will also become a sympathetic figure, even though no one in the world seems anxious to see him ascend the throne of the Romanoffs.

There is more pity than hate felt towards Czar Nicholas II., who has just left the Russian throne. There was nothing sinister about him, but he will be remembered as a weakling who meant well and failed because of a reactionary wife. The Teutonic Czarina will be remembered in history as the villainess of the piece. She never grew to love the country ruled by her husband. She had no natural feelings of pride in the land that was to acknowledge her boy as its "Little Father." She was willing to sacrifice all for the Germans, to be treacherous and even to countenance the murder of Russian troops so long as it served the end of the Kaiser. There was a saying in Petrograd that "When the Russians won the Czar laughed and when the Germans won the Czarina laughed." Nicholas found that he could not fight against the reactionaries. Weak and superstitious, he went steadily to his doom, but he made one last effort to save the throne for the Czarevitch. He wanted to leave his mighty empire one-sixth of the earth's surface, and its population of 160,000,000 souls in trust for the boy. Even that plan failed. The revolution had gone too far.

PRINCE ALEXIS AND MOTHER

It is said, however, that little Alexis would never have ascended the Russian throne. The princeling is twelve years of age, a handsome boy but very delicate. His ill health is the result of an attack made upon him when he was a mere infant by some fanatics who were bound to end the Romanoff Dynasty. It was given out at the time that he had been wounded in the thigh. The nature of the wound was never stated, but as the prince has remained ailing ever since, the impression has gained strength that he would never be able to face a man's duties at the head of a great Empire. Now this delicate little fellow is left to face the world as a humble citizen of Russia. Later on there may be darker days for his house. It is said that the revolutionary party has in its possession documents that would establish the guilt of the pro-German party if they were ever called to face a charge of treason against the State. Such trials might cause a reign of terror, and it is impossible to foretell as yet what maelstroms of vengeance may yet draw the little lad into their vortex.

How Kaffirs Smoke.

The natives of South Africa are inveterate smokers, but some of them indulge in the habit in a distinctly queer fashion. The natives of Harrismith, in the Orange Free State, smoke in the following novel manner. A "pipe" is made by thrusting two sticks into the ground so as to meet at an angle; when they are withdrawn two tunnels are left behind. A hollow reed is stuck in one hole, and the tobacco placed in the other and lighted. Before beginning operations, the native fills his mouth with water, drawing in the smoke with a gurgling sound and blowing out the water and smoke through a second reed. It seems a mighty poor way of smoking to a white man, but the Kaffirs are very fond of it.

UNION SERVICE OF PRAYER

The union prayer service for all the Christian people of Peterborough will be held in Trinity Methodist Church this evening at 8 o'clock. This meeting has been arranged by the Ministerial Association and is one of the series to be held monthly during the duration of the war. It is hoped that the religious zeal and patriotic interest of our people will be evidenced by a very large attendance a hite service. The usual midweek meetings of a numbr of the congregations have been withdrawn in order to enable the citizens to attend the union service.

CITY STILL LOOKING FOR ASSISTANT FIRE CHIEF

Fire Water and Light Committee Dispose of Big Budget of Business---Auto for Chief Howard.

The Fire and Light Committee met last evening and cleaned its file of a lot of matters that have been held in abeyance for some weeks. There were present Mayor Duffus Ald. Dobbin (chairman), Smith Worth, Taylor, and Duncan

Mr. T. H. G. Denne, on behalf of the Little Lake Cemetery Co. asked that a strong incandescent light be placed on a cement pole in the plot at the entrance to the cemetery on Crescent Street. On the motion of Mayor Duffus and Ald. Smith the request was granted.

Report Wanted

After considering several requests for better lighting the Utilities Commission will be asked to report on the following: The arc lamp at the corner of Stewart and Simcoe St. be placed on the pole; incandescent lights on Parnell, Alfred, and Chamberlain Sts.; better lighting on Sherbrook Street between George and Aylmer, and on Aylmer Street between Wolfe and Dalhousie Streets.

Lights Ordered In

The following lights were ordered in or changed: A light on Driscoll Terrace to be placed on the second pole north of Hunter Street.

The light on Roger Street in front of Ald. Smith's residence to be placed farther south, as the lights at this point are too close together.

The light in front of the Calcutt residence on Robinson Street to be moved to one pole further west.

A light to be placed at the top of the hill on McFarlane Street.

The chairman and Ald. Smith will supervise the placing of these lamps.

New Hydrants

The Peterboro Utilities Commission asked the committee to recommend new hydrants to be placed on George Street between France and Princess streets, one on Parnell Street, and one at Prince and Aylmer streets. It was decided to leave this with the Chairman, Ald. Taylor and Saunders, and the Fire Chief with power to act.

Magnetite Lamps

Mr. H. O. Fiske, superintendent of the Utilities Commission recommended the placing of magnetite lamps at the following places: Aylmer and McDonell Aylmer and Brock, and Aylmer and Murray streets, and the Committee saw the necessity of them and ordered them placed.

Assistant Fire Chief

The committee decided to advertise further for applications for the position of assistant fire chief. Toronto and other papers will be given an ad. if the Chairman and City Clerk think advisable.

The Fire Chief's Auto

Chairman Dobbin reported that he had been up to Lindsay, and examined the body proposed for the Fire Chief's auto, and was very favorably impressed with it. The car will be capable of carrying two extra men in an emergency, in addition to the small chemical engines and the Pulmotor.

The ordering of the body and the chassis was left in the hands of the Chairman with power to close the deal. The Committee want the car here as soon as possible.

The new car will cost about $700.00 when it arrives here.

The matter of placing a street lamp at the corner of Reid Street and Victoria Avenue, as requested by Walter Peters and others was left with the Chairman, with power to act. The request of the same petitioners for improved street car service in the west end was referred to the Railway Committee.

"A splendid response for recruits is vitally necessary in order that the full strength of our Dominion shall be thrown into the struggle with the least possible delay".

SIR ROBERT BORDEN,
Premier.

CANADA

"It is the desire of the men overseas as well as their British comrades in arms and of the Imperial Government that we should send overseas at once troops now in Canada enlisted for overseas service".

SIR EDWARD KEMP,
Minister of Militia and Defence.

You Are Needed To Release Troops for Overseas

Canada can send well trained men to France to the aid of our gallant victors of Vimy Ridge, if the Militia regiments are brought up to strength and ready to defend the Dominion in case of emergency.

He Does His Best, Who Does His Duty.

Sir Robert Borden says: "Now is the most critical period of the war". What more patriotic duty can a man do—who through force of circumstances could not enlist for Overseas Service—than join the

CANADIAN HOME DEFENCE FORCE

The term of enlistment, training, clothing and equipment are the same as for overseas service. Pay the same as that for Militia on active service. Separation allowances for married men.

The call comes to men between 18 and 45 and physically fit to join the Home Defence Force.

Distinguished Visitors Attend Funeral of the late E. R. Rogers.

Among those from outside points who attended the funeral of the late Edwin R. Rogers in this city yesterday were Wor. Bros. J. G. Munson and W. E. Birrell, representing Victoria Lodge, No. 474, Toronto, and Wor. Bro. S. H. Bradford, representing Anpbe Lodge, 304, of the same city. Supt. Downie of the Orillia Asylum, Mr. Haley of Orillia, and Supt. English, of the Hamilton Asylum, were also in attendance. Supt. Robinson of London sent word that he was unable to attend.

LOCAL MAN IS HELD FOR TRIAL

A local man was committed for trial by Police Magistrate Dumble morning on a charge of embezzlement preferred by the Canadian Swift Co. The young man was a former employe of the firm, and in the latter part of January notified the company that he was short in his accounts to the extent of $674.41. The specific charge under which he was arrested was of not remitting $63.65, an account collected from the Boorman Co., of this city.

Mr. L. A. Larson, secretary-treas. of the Swift Co., gave evidence as to the monies collected by the accused, and which it is alleged were not remitted to the head office in Toronto. The defendant had been in the employ of the company for about four years.

Mr. Jos. Wearing appeared for the accused, and Crown Attorney Hatton prosecuted.

The case will come up before Judge Huycke shortly, as the prisoner did not plead or elect how he would be tried.

MR. BALFOUR IS PLEASED WITH HIS RECEPTION

WASHINGTON, April 25.—The Right Hon. A. J. Balfour today gave an interview to a circle of newspaper correspondents, expressing his deep gratitude for the warmth of his reception, and his conviction that America's service in the war could not be exaggerated. He said the Allied Governments would not think of asking the United to depart from its traditional policies, or enter into any formal alliance. No treaty could increase our unbounded confidence that the United States having come into the war will see it through to the great end we all hope for, he said.

How Women Get on Voters's List

CAN WAIVE THEIR RIGHTS IN FAVOR OF HUSBANDS.

City assessors are being instructed in the new duties which have been imposed upon them by the Act giving votes to women. In the past, where a woman owned property, her husband got the vote. He may still get the vote instead of her, but can do do so only by her waiving her right.

Where the wife owns the house in which the family reside, the wife will get a vote as owner and the husband as tenant. Where the house is rented, the vote goes to the person who has the lease, whether the husband or wife.

A Frenchman is the inventor of celluloid memorandum tag to be snapped over the face of a watch, where it is sure to be seen.

Points From the Budget Speech

No tariff changes will be made

No income tax will be imposed.

Taxation on war profits will remain as it is where such profits do not exceed 15 per cent. Upon profits over 15 per cent. and not exceeding 20 per cent. the tax is increased from one-quarter to one-half, and from one-quarter to three-quarters on profits exceeding 20 per cent.

The new law applies to first accounting period after December 31st, 1916.

Foreign trade of Canada for the year ended March 31st, 1917, totalled $2,043,000,000.

New domestic loan will be floated next fall.

Surplus of current receipts over ordinary and capital expenditures, including interest on public debt and pensions, is $60,000,000.

Canada's total war outlay to date is about $600,000,000.

CANADA'S WAR DEBT IS NOW OVER $900,000,000

May Reach Thirteen Hundred Millions Before End of Year---Sir Thomas White Delivers Budget Speech in House.

OTTAWA, April 25. — Sir Thomas White delivered the Budget speech Tuesday afternoon. He gave the figures of the total revenue for the year ending March 31st as $232,000,000, compared with $130,000,000 for the first year of the war. The customs receipts were $134,000,000; excise, $24,000,000, and the business profits tax, $12,500,000.

The expenditure was $173,000,000 outside of war expenditure, leaving $60,000,000 for the payment of principal on the war expenditure. The national debt has increased since the beginning of the war from $336,000,000 to over $900,000,000. By the end of the current year Sir Thomas said it might reach $1,300,000,000.

ON THE FRENCH FRONT.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, April 24. — Artillery was very active last night in the vicinity of Hurtebise, in the Foulon valley, and near the Craonne, says today's official announcement. French patrols took prisoners. Two German attacks during the night were repulsed. In the Champagne there was grenade fighting.

FIGHTING IN DEEP SNOW.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, April 24. On the Russo-Galician front there have been rifle firing, scouting and aerial operations, says today's official statement. On the Roumanian front there was more animated rifle firing in the reginos east of Meste, Canesce and Paksigund. In the mountains the snow is two and a half feet deep. On the Caucasian front rifle firing and reconnoitering operations occurred.

ALL COUNTER-ATTACKS FAIL.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, April 24. — Severe fighting continued yesterday evening and at intervals during the night on the whole front from Croisilles to the north of Gavrelle. The enemy constantly repeated his unsuccessful counter-attacks with great determination and regardless of losses. Positions gained by us yesterday and already reported have been maintained. Further progress has been maintained. Further progress has been made east of Monchyle Preux and in the neighborhood of Roeux. A particularly violent counter-attack delivered by the enemy early this morning against the village of Gavrelle was successfully beaten off.

AT THE MOODY INSTITUTE.

One of the Graduates Was Miss Sara A. Wilson of This City.

Among the forty-two men and women graduating at the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago, April 19th, was Sara A. Wilson, of Peterborough, formerly of Belfast, Ireland, who has completed the two years' course in Bible Doctrine, Gospel Music and Practical Methods of Christian Work. The graduating program consisted of the class exercises in the forenoon, the reception to the graduates in the afternoon, and the public meeting at night, at which an address was delivered by Rev. Robt. M. Russell, D.D., LL.D. The diplomas were presented to the graduates by Rev. James M. Gray, D.D., Dean of the Institute. The attendance of resident students at the Institute during the past term has been the largest in its history, viz., 448 men and 331 women. The regular summer term open April 26th and includes a special summer course in evangelistic singing and playing, extending from June 7th to August 8th.

IMPROVE YOURSELF.

The happiness of your life and its part and rank in earth or in heaven depend on the way you pass your days now. They are not to be sad days; far from that. The first duty of young people is to be delighted and delightful, but they are to be in the deepest sense solemn days. Now, therefore, see that no day passes in which you do not make yourself a somewhat better creature.—Ruskin.

Light of the Future.

Professor Ulric Dahlgren of Princeton university predicts that the time will come when the luciferous substance of chemical composition carried by fireflies, certain fish and other animals will be used for illuminating houses and other purposes. He believes that this will come about when the nature and proportions of the chemical constituents of these substances are discovered and says they will give a light having an efficiency of 90 per cent instead of the 15 per cent produced by lights now in use.

Thoughtless Daughter—What in the wide world made you change your mind, ma?

"I have often asked myself that since."

A Strategical Move.

Mrs. Close—I'm writing to ask the Browns to meet the Joneses here at dinner and to the Joneses to meet the Browns. We owe them both, you know. Close—But I've heard that they've just quarreled and don't speak. Mrs. Close—I know. They'll refuse, and we won't have to give a dinner party at all.

No Laughing Matter.

"Dubwaite impresses me as being a man who takes life too seriously."

"Well, I must say I don't blame him much."

"Has he a private sorrow?"

"Three private sorrows. He's buying a house, a grand piano and a motorcar on the installment plan."

Safety First.

The tramp had scaled the fence about four inches ahead of the bulldog.

"What are you doing around here anyway?" asked the woman who had loosed the dog.

"Madam," said the tramp, with great dignity, "I was a-goin' to ask for somethin' to eat, but all I now ask is that you will feed that there dog."—Ladies' Home Journal.

FOR THE CHILDREN.

How to Make Raffia Dolls on Stormy Days.

If you have been making raffia baskets or picture frames save some of the leftover pieces of raffia for the children. They can make a whole family of dolls from them.

For a good sized father or mother doll the strips should be about fourteen inches long and plain colored. Just in the center tie them with a colored bit of raffia. The number of the strips you use will depend upon how fat you want your doll.

Next double the raffia over exactly in two and tie again about an inch from the top. Now you have the doll's head. Tie again at the waist and cut the skirt off evenly at the bottom if it is to be a lady doll.

If it is a man separate the raffia at the waist and tie his trousers at the bottoms.

For arms put a few strands of raffia through the body and tie at the wrist and shoulder. Your raffia must be long enough for both arms.

The children of the raffia family will be made the same way, but smaller.

Silver Lace and Pale Blue Silk.

Silver lace and pale blue silk is an effective combination for the debutante, and it is carried out in one model in flounces of silver lace over a skirt of faint blue soiree silk, and underneath is a second skirt of silver cloth. The blue soiree silk bodice is trimmed with bands of silver ribbon and flesh pink tulle in a single airy layer, giving the debutante touch at the shoulder, for the young girl does not wear an entirely sleeveless bodice. Pale pink roses shading to orchid tone are caught against girdle and skirt hem.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

MENSTRUATION PREPARATION.

THE FOLLOWING REMARKS concerning an important natural function of women is published by Dr. Effie Lobdell in The Chicago Tribune. Their value, if the suggestions are carried out, will be so great that no apology is offered for their publication.

Functioning Without Discomfort.

About three years ago I chanced to pick up a copy of the magazine, "Physical Culture," and read an article written by a business woman who claimed to have trained herself into health befitting her duties, and out of the physical infirmatives so common to women in all phases of life during their most efficient years.

These infirmities are so common as to be accepted as a traditional necessity. They are used as one of the most common arguments showing why women can never compete wholly with men in [illegible]k or business, and therefore can never be estimated by the same wa[illegible]ary scale.

I decided to work out a plan I could recommend to any woman patients to carry through these physical phases with the least possible evidence to others and discomfort to themselves. In the three years of observation I am able to state that with the intelli[illegible]t woman who will co-operate with me I have had astounding results.

My observations cover the girls and women employed in stores and factories, the office women in positions where the tension on nerves is more marked because of greater responsibilities, and the women in professional life or in business for themselves where the nerve tension is greater still.

The greatest number incapacitated by the simple function, menstruation, is among the girls of large stores and factories where the manifestations of dysmenorrhoea become almost epidemic at times. This shows the large element of "letting go" which enters into it. I am told that the same thing happens in high schools, especially where elaborate preparations are made for their care.

I would not discount the necessity nor value of the modern accommodation made for the girls in up-to-date schools and factories and stores, but I believe the girls are doing an unconscious injustice to themselves and to all the sex by letting the weak side of their physical life play so prominent a part in their occupation.

This is exactly where and when the first training in personal hygiene of the woman should begin. Institutions might find it less expensive to make this a part of their regime, even by using a kind of disciplinary demand for health or a premium for health. Their present arrangement founded on leniency is not wise or economical.

Dr. Kristine Mann of New York, writing for the American Journal of Public Health, May 1916, under the title "The Health of Department Store Women in New York," states that of 100 saleswomen, average age 25, examined by her as to symptoms, 40 per cent. had menstrual troubles." (I believe a younger set would yield even a higher percentage.) The total number who would be benefited by medical advice was 89 per cent., yet only four per cent. were under a doctor's care.

The office woman has more need of concealing her feelings, as her position is raised to more of an equality with her fellow male workers. Personal hygiene is more carefully observed by her accordingly, and she trains herself to regulate personal feelings to the background. Nurses in the hospitals and on private duty train themselves to pass through menstruation with little deviation from the usual in duty. It is almost an unknown thing for a nurse to be put to bed for dysmenorrhoea although they are the most strenuous of all workers, having long hours, walking many miles a day while on duty, and with great responsibility through it all. They are careful that no special attention shall be directed to them at menstrual time. About the only difference in their daily routine is that they use their period off duty for rest instead of for recreation.

The professional woman and the woman in business for herself has a definite value for her time and talent. Her emotions and personal feelings she subjugates to her ambitions and her self-discipline. She refuses to let a physical disadvantage check or limit her. She is the first to voluntarily find out her true state of health, and then train herself accordingly.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

MUSHROOM CATSUP

Use freshly gathered mushrooms of a large variety. Wipe but do not wash them. Break in pieces and put in layers in an earthenware crock with salt sprinkled between the layers. Let stand four days. Then mash fine and to each quart add ½ teaspoonful black pepper. Boil for two hours in the crock with a pan of water under it. Strain through cheesecloth without squeezing, and to each pint of the strained liquid add ¼ ounce allspice, 1 teaspoon green ginger root cut up fine and 1 teaspoon cloves. Boil 15 minutes in the crock with a pan of water under it after adding the spices, and then allow it to cool and settle. Pour into sterilized jars, being careful to keep back the settlings. Put on rubbers and tops and partially tighten tops. Sterilize 1 hour, tighten tops and store.

Tomato Soup

Take two pounds of tomatoes, a quart of weak stock, an ounce of crushed tapioca, two ounces of fat bacon or ham, half an onion, and seasoning. Place the stock in a saucepan, and when it has boiled sprinkle in the crushed tapioca. Boil until the tapioca is quite clear. Fry the bacon or ham in a frying pan or saucepan, then chop up the onion and fry it in the bacon fat. Cut the tomatoes in slices, add to the onions, and simmer gently until everything is tender. The mixture should then be put through a sieve. Add the sieved mixture to the stock, then re-[illegible] adding as much seasoning as is necessary.

QUEEN MARIE OF ROUMANIA was married to King Ferdinand in 1893, and was then the Princess Marie of Edinburgh, the daughter of Alfred I., Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, Prince of Great Britain and Ireland. Her Majesty is noted for her great beauty and her kindness of heart, she being the popular idol of her people. Ever since the entry of Roumania into the war Queen Marie has devoted herself to Red Cross work and the general care of the wounded.

TESTING WOUNDED FOR RETURN TO TRENCHES

Doctors May Make Mistakes But Not With Aid of New Instruments —Nerve Tests Unique

It is the cases that refuse to get well in hospital that come to the Grand Palais at Paris—a real court of miracles. Turn to the card index and you will be astonished at the results obtained; apparently hopeless cases sent back to the firing line, as good as the next man, and others restored to civilian life, very little the worse for wear. That is better than leaving them to rot in the gutter or to drag out an ineffectual existence as pensioners of the State.

Some go back to the trenches when they would be better away, because they lack nerve control. The instruments in use at the Grand Palais find that out too. D'Arsonval's chronometer is harnessed to this delicate work. An electric needle draws on a smoked cylinder the measure of one's emotivity. At a given moment, a revolver shot is fired or a magnesium light flashed. If the victim starts, his line quavers. His breathing graph is desperately jagged, his "trembling" is pronounced, his vasomotory system disturbed.

Nerves and the Airman

It is possible for a nervous man to be a good aviator—there are such cases—but the better his nerve control the better he will generally be. And it is a fact that the Gynemers and Leefe Robinsons are extremely calm. The instrument is of use in determining the right material for the air, but it has another purpose: of preventing the apparently cured man from being given the wrong sort of work.

Makes No Mistakes

Men who have been trepanned are often ostensibly sound. Doctors certify them as good for the "service arme." The instrument does not make such a mistake; it records their high impressionability; it warns the authorities that they will break down at a critical moment. There have been some lamentable cases of brave men who have found their nerves suddenly gone. Their preliminary encounter with the battery of the Grand Palais would have shown their inability to face the other battery on the field.

COLONEL'S DELUSION

It was shown at the inquest that Colonel Nicolay Beliakoff, of the Russian army, on a military mission to England, shot himself because he thought he was dying from tuberculosis. This, Dr. Spilsbury said, was a delusion. He was found dead in his sleeping berth in a train from Scotland, where he had successfully carried out work connected with his mission. Lieutenant Boris Anrep, of the Russian Government Committee in London, said that when he went to Scotland the colonel left a curious document, stating what was to be done to complete his work and telling his assistant where his papers were. It showed that he desired to leave his work in perfect order.

WOMEN-COOKS IN ARMY

Englishwomen Need More Than a Domestic Science Diploma

There are women who have been in the British army for many months; they wear khaki; they are rationed; and they live in hutments with their unit. They look upon it as "a good life." They are officered by women, and promotion is from the ranks. "Sergeant Fat" was a private until she showed particular aptitude in clarifying the enormous quantities of fat which have to be melted down in the cookhouse.

The women's captain herself—Miss Thompson in private life—was head cook [illegible] many months. An old sergeant taught her her job, although she has a domestic science certificate. Cooking for the army is a slightly different thing to a demonstration lesson to a dozen ladies. One of the head cooks laughs now and says: "When I go home and start making a pudding I am afraid I shall be putting 75 pounds of rice on to boil!"

Sixty-six women of the Women's Legion cook for 4,000 soldiers in one particular camp. Altogether there are some 2,000 women army cooks. In one of three kitchens the following were the quantities for a day's dinner: 600 pounds stew; 1,000 pounds roast beef; 200 pounds beans; 7½ cwt. potatoes; 300 pounds suet pudding; 50 pounds of sago and 15 gallons of milk.

THE GREAT TANK IDEA

Questions as to the Original Inventor Are Evaded

At a meeting of Parliament those who sought information about tanks found that Mr. Lloyd George had little to tell. "They have been a very considerable success, and I think they will render still more invaluable services," he contented himself with saying. If it was desired to know to whom the credit for the "tanks" was due, one or two names would have to be mentioned. There were great Admiralty experts whose services had been very valuable. In the designing of the machine the chief naval constructor of the Admiralty had probably the greatest share. He must mention, too, Sir Maurice Hankey, the secretary of the War Committee, to whom they were very considerably indebted for the first suggestion that something of this kind should be tried. But the suggestions would never have fructified had it not been for Mr. Churchill, then First Lord of the Admiralty, who set up a committee to carry the suggestions into effect and put the whole of his energy and strength into materializing the hopes of those who had been looking forward to a machine of this kind.

Reply to Hymn of Hate

A writer in the London Chronicle says [illegible] of us have heard of the Hymn of Hate, and of how the British and French troops quickly learned it, and then astonished the Germans by yelling it triumphantly back to them across the waste land between. At a well known and popular seaside resort the band was asked as a favor to play it to the audience, who were curious to know what it was like. The band did so, and at the end a notice was put up bearing the words, "Our reply." Everybody, naturally enough, got ready to stand up, expecting to hear the national anthem, but were much astonished and amused when the band began to play softly and tenderly, "Two Lovely Black Eyes!"

Pickled Red Cabbage

Slice up the cabbage fine and place it in a colander, sprinkle each layer with common salt. Let the strips drain for two days, then put them in a jar and cover with boiling vinegar. If a spice is used it must be put in with the vinegar in the proportion of one ounce of white pepper and one half ounce of allspice to the quart.

Oatmeal Biscuits

Mix together two cupfuls of cooked oatmeal, two tablespoonfuls of melted dripping, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, one tablespoonful of sugar and one teaspoonful of baking powder, and sufficient flour to make stiff enough to roll, roll out very thin, cut into biscuits, bake one side on a hot greased griddle and toast other side, spread

WILLIAMS—PARCELS

At the Parsonage of the Trinity Church this morning, the Rev. Dr. Wilson united in marriage Miss Phoebe Ephlene Parcels, daughter of Mr. Charles Parcels, of Norwood, and Mr. Lorne Williams, of Wooler. They were attended by Miss Grace Anderson, of Round Lake, and Mr. Lambert Whaley, of Trenton. Mr and Mrs. Williams left by motor on a honeymoon to Toronto and other points.

BEST—WADE

A very pretty wedding took place at St. Peter's Cathedral this morning, when his Lordship Bishop O'-Brien united in marriage Mrs. Frances McDonald Wade and Mr. Thos. James Best, of Lindsay. The bride was given away by her brother, Mr. T. McDonald, of Toronto.

After an extended honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Best will reside at 569 Gilmour Street.

Mrs. J. R. Stratton has returned from the South, where she spent the winter, and is now spending a few days with her niece, Mrs. Harris Ardiel, Toronto.

Mr. J. O'Connor is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. F. O'Connor, Durham Street, Lindsay.

Mrs. Edward Wand and children, Burnham street, are visiting friends in Toronto.

The regular monthly meeting of the 57th Chapter I.O.D.E. will be held tomorrow afternoon at three o'clock in the Y.W.C.A. All the members are asked to be present to meet their former regent, Mrs. Clegg, who has just returned from overseas.

The 57th Chapter I.O.D.E. are withdrawing their tea at the tearoom owing to the motor show.

Mrs. Guy Whittaker, who has just returned from overseas, is back in Peterboro, and is stopping with her father, Mr. W. H. Moore, London Street.

Rare Concert at St. Paul's

The Adanac Quartette of Toronto sung themselves into the hearts of the large audience which greeted them at St. Paul's Church last night, with their opening number a superb rendition of the popular hymn, "Lead, Kindly Light." This was followed up in response to a hearty recall by the singing of "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and the bond between the singers and their hearers was stronger than ever.

The concert was another of those admirable musical performances for which the thanks of the public are due Mr. John Allan, the efficient organist of St. Paul's. The program was a long one and was doubled by the insistence of the audience in the matter of recalling the different artists. Miss Dorothy Allan, as usual, maintained her own and the musical reputation of the city at the high standard for which both are celebrated, and the members of the church choir in their various selections simply excelled themselves. All in all it was a rare musical treat, and Mr. Allan is to be congratulated not only upon the success but upon the attendance and the measure of appreciation which was extended by those present.

The visiting quartette varied the program with lighter numbers that appealed to the younger members of the audience. Mr. Ruthven Macdonald's "Soliloquy on an Old Shoe" was a quaint piece of philosophy from a man who hears music in brooks and finds the texts for sermons in the "old red sandstone" or the rugged mountain. Another of the more pleasing features of the program was his reminiscences of "That Old Sweetheart of Mine." "Little Black Lamb," sung by the quartette, was a tender and charming plantation melody.

Mr. Albert Downing, Mr. Arthur Blight and Mr. James E. Fiddes, the other members of the quartette, all sang solos, and each was accorded a flattering reception by the audience. The program was as follows:

God Save the King.

Lead, Kindly Light—Adanac Quartette.

Nearer, My God, to Thee—Adanac Quartette.

The Sorows of Death (from Hymn of Praise)—Mr. Albert Downing.

I Feel Thy Angel Spirit—Miss Dorothy Allan and Mr. Macdonald.

The City Choir—Adanac Quartette.

Evening and Morning—Part song —St. Paul's Choir.

Why Shakes the Earth—Recit and Aria (from Palestine)—Mr. Arthur Blight.

Soliloquy on an Old Shoe (musical monologue)—Mr. Macdonald.

What from Vengeance (from Lucia de Lammermoor)—Adanac Quartette.

Judith—Recit. and Aria—Miss Dorothy Allan.

Send Out Thy Light—Mr. Macdonald.

Break, Break, Break on Thy Cold Grey Stones O Sea (Part song)—St. Paul's Choir.

The Moon Hath Raised Her Lamp Above (from The Lily of Killarney) duet—Messrs. Downing and Blight.

Beyond the Dawn—Mr. James E. Fiddes.

The Rosary—Adanac Quartette.

Rule, Britannia—Choir and Quartette.

Stage Director Adams Pleased at Outlook.

Stanley Adams arrived on Monday night to commence his duties as stage director for Mr. Gliddon for the coming performances of "Pinafore," which is being given on May 15 and 16 in the Opera House.

Mr. Adams expressed himself as delighted with the talent, both in the chorus and principals, and predicts an excellent production. As he says, "It is a great pleasure to find people willing and anxious to do well. There is no reason, if all continue to work hard, why 'H.M.S. Pinafore' should not rank high in comparison with all previous local performances."

Mr. Adams returned to Toronto this morning, and will be back from time to time.

SUBMARINES MAY CAUSE FAMINE

CANADIAN CASUALTIES TO DATE NUMBER 8,733

Ottawa Record Office Behind in Work---Three Local Men Reported Wounded.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, April 26. — Lists of Canadian casualties continue to come in to the record office in great numbers, though fortunately the preponderating percentage is of wounded, and a majority of the latter are slight cases. The latest list of 355 names, issued at today at noon, brings the total announced since Easter Sunday to 8733 of all ranks. It is understood that owing to the great influx of names the casualty office is far behind in the war and that the names issued today date back a week in the receipts at headquarters here.

LOCAL MEN WOUNDED.

PTE. JOHN JINKS, BROWNTON
PTE. WILLIAM SCARRETT.
PTE. JAMES P. CULLEN, SMITH

The casualty list today contains the names of only two Peterborough soldiers. The list is not nearly as large as it has been for the previous week.

Private William Scarrett, Infantry, is reported wounded. Just what battalion he was attached to at the time of his being wounded is not known.

Was Missing, Now Wounded.

Private John Jinks, a member of the 93rd Battalion, who was previously thought to be missing, is now reported wounded and is in one of the base hospitals in France. His wife lives in Brownton.

247TH IN TRAINING.

The 247th Battalion, which was recently merged with the 235th, has left for an eastern training point. At Ottawa, yesterday, an enthusiastic send-off was given the unit on its departure.

Commanded by Lieut.-Col. Scobell, with Major J. C. Dunlop second in command, the battalion presented a splendid appearance as it marched along the street, which was crowded with a noon hour throng. Headed by the splendid battalion band, the men marched evenly, followed by many friends and relatives, for there are a number of district men in the regiment. Though the full strength of the battalion is only a little upwards of 600 men, it is a splendid looking regiment, and quite the equal of any raised in the division.

There was no great attempt made by the officers to keep the men strictly in order.. Every once in a while the lines would be pierced by someone breaking in to take up the march with the soldiers. These were largely women, for the soldier lads made themselves great favorites with the ladies during their short stay.

WAR IN BRIEF

German destroyers bombarded Dunkirk, but fled when attacked by allied patrols. One French destroyer was sunk.

Sir Douglas Haig reports many thousand German dead lie on the battle field now occupied by the British.

General Maude captured eight hundred Turks Saturday and Sunday, and fifteen guns.

Submarines sank forty British vessels of over sixteen hundred tons in a week, the largest yet published

BRITISH WILL GIVE ENEMY WORST BEATING THAT AN ARMY HAS EVER RECEIVED

Hottest Battle Fought Yet in Arras Region Said to be Impending---Germans Have Sacrificed Reserves Without Gaining One Objective Point.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, April 26.—A cable to The Sun from London says: Worse battles than any yet fought in the Arras region are impending in the immediate future. This statement is heard from many reliable sources today, when the question arises whether the British have reached the climax of their artillery work.

Field Marshal Haig's plans apparently are developing excellently, and he is forcing Von Hindenburg to do just exactly what the British anticipated. They knew he would wait until he thought the Allies had reached the highest point of efficiency and then throw in enormous masses of reserves to catch them on the down grade.

Reports indicate that the Germans already have used two-thirds of their reserve forces without gaining a single objective. At this rate their force will be spent in futile counter-attacks before the Allies meet the mightiest force of their arms. The British have already a wide front on which to deploy, and this soon will be extended.

There is not a single officer in London who believes that affairs on the Arras front will take a dramatic course, but all are assured that the British are going to give the enemy the worst hammering ever delivered to an army.

HUMAN BREASTS AS PARAPETS.

LONDON, April 26. — Telegraphing today from British headquarters in France, Reuter's correspondent says: The Germans are still hurrying up fresh reserves to press their counter-attacks. They are fighting a great delaying battle, although not now standing upon any well-prepared system of defences, and can only hope to check our advance by using up great masses of troops, whose breasts have taken the place of parapets. This policy must result in greatly accelerating the process of exhaustion, and if continued long the situation will resolve itself into a simple problem of which side can longest maintain its deadly pace. Prisoners declare that the German army is now being drained at a rate which brings collapse within measureable distance.

GERMANS AGAIN REPULSED.

LONDON, April 26. — Early last night the enemy again endeavored to attack our new positions in the neighborhood of Gavrelle. His advancing troops were caught by our artillery barrage and completely repulsed. Elsewhere there was nothing of special importance.

TERRIFIC FIGHTING ON FRENCH FRONT.

PARIS, April 26. — Terrific fighting continued during the night on the front of the French offensive. The Germans renewed their counter-attacks on the high ground near Chemin-des-Dames, but gained no success, the war office reports. An attack in great force east of Cerny was repulsed with heavy losses for the Germans.

THOUSANDS OF DEAD GERMANS.

Gen. Maurice said the Germans had drawn on their strategic reserve and rought up great new forces in an attempted onslaught, but the British machine was working without a hitch. The German losses had been terrific and thousands were lying dead in front of the British line. In eighteen days of the Arras battle the British casualties had been less than half what they were in the corresponding period of the Somme offensive, while the number of prisoners and guns was much greater.

HUN STILL SMOOTH OF SPEECH.

BERLIN, April 26. — (Army Headquarters Statement.) — "On Crown Prince Rupprecht's front the enemy exerted himself yesterday only to local attacks near Arras. South of the Scarpe his attacking waves stormed our positions three times. They had to withdraw each time, and an artillery battle still continues with considerable violence in some sectors. At Gavrelle our position is now situated on the astern boundary of the village."

MAYOR DUFFUS OPENS THE FIRST AUTO SHOW HELD IN PETERBORO

Ladies of Red Cross and Members of Committee Present at Ceremonies---Armories Gay With Flags and Bunting and Filled With Exhibits.

Peterborough's first Motor Show was formally opened this afternoon by His Worship Mayor Duffus in the presence of the ladies of the Red Cross Society, the gentlemen of the committee and a number of interested spectators.

The Armories have been very gaily decorated for the show, bunting and flags, singly and in strings, being hung in every vacant spot on the walls. It is hard to imagine the transformation that has been worked, and the committee deserve the greatest praise for their efforts.

Down through the drill hall signs are hung showing where each exhibitor is to be found as well as the different makes of cars, tires and accessories.

Red Cross in Evidence.

The centre booths have been arranged for the benefit of the sale of Red Cross articles and for the display of goods that go with the automobile trade.

The first booth is a flower booth, where the ladies have on sale all kinds of floral decorations, carnations, roses, sweet peas, violets, daffodills, all donated to them by the Peterborough Floral Co., A. Blade & Son and Jordan Bros., to be disposed of for the benefit of the society's funds.

A candy parlor is also to be found at which all kinds of sweet-meats are sold by young ladies, and in another place a refreshment booth is plentifully supplied with all the different beverages that will help to satisfy the want of the thirsty citizen.

THE BOOTHS.

The one booth that is of especial attraction is the one where you take a chance. Here is displayed all the articles that have been given to the Red Cross to be raffled off, comprising tires, chains, lenses, auto lamps, rugs and other things.

The other booths are occupied by C. R. Banks with a display of Michelin Tires, J. J. Turner & Sons with a display of Auto Rugs, Flags and other auto accessories. The Warne Drug Co. have a show of Thermos Bottles and other nifty articles for the autoist. Grant and Thorpe have a very nice exhibit of batteries and an assortment of electrical goods necessary for the convenience of the motor owner.

The Kingan Hardware Co and the Racine Tire Co. also have their goods oin view. The Roy Studio are very strong believers in the satisfaction of carrying a camera with you on your auto trip, and show a fine display of enlargements.

THE EXHIBITORS.

There are over thirty cars on exhibition and they are of the latest models of al makes, and some of them were turned out especially for the Greater Peterborough Auto Show.

The Duffus Garage, the local agents of the Ford Co., have one of each style of their cars on view. They are polished right up to the minute and are very pretty.

Mr. C. R. Banks has five of the different models and styles of the Overland to show the intending purchaser.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie has an exhibit of Studebaker and Maxwell cars.

Cranfield Bros. have the Grey-Dort and the Chalmers on exhibition.

Messrs. A. Brown & Co. have a large display of McLaughlins and they have not missed a style in their selection.

The Grant Six is also shown by Mr. J. Pulkinghorn.

The Manning Garage have the Dodge and the Chevrolet to show intending auto owners. A Baby Grand Chevrolet is expected this evening.

THE FORD.

Hundreds made direct to booths No. 22-25, north section, where Jos. J. Duffus is exhibiting a full line of the Ford beautiful models. These attractive, sturdy, speedy and economical cars are attracting concentrated attention while courteous salesmen explain the many enviable point of excellence which have made their use universally popular from to Atlantic to the Pacific. In purchasing a Ford car one adds to one's bank balance besides securing the acme of quality in the way of commercial and recreative quality.

ARTILLERY SUPERIORITY ACCOUNTS FOR SUCCESS AT ARRAS.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, April 26. — The outstanding feature of the second phase of the battle of Arras is the definite establishment of superiority in artillery by the British, and it is due to this superiority that they have been able to maintain a successful offensive, said Major-Gen. Maurice, chief director of military operations at the war office, in his weekly statement today.

EXPERIENCE.

One of the biggest assets in fitting glasses is experience, because you rarely find two prescriptions the same or two faces with the same measurements. Dr. Lacey has had a wide experience in fitting glasses. He can suit your vision and also fit the glasses so that you will look good in them. See Him and See Better. 410 George Street.

SAILORS IN HAND TO HAND FIGHTS LIKE NAVAL HEROES IN DAYS OF WOODEN SHIPS

Six German War-Craft Are Rammed and Torpedoed by Two British Destroyers---Spirit of British Admirable and Casualties Light Considering the Engagement.

LONDON, April 25.—Two British destroyers on patrol duty in the English Channel off Dover on the night of April 30 came upon a flotilla of six German destroyers, and then ensued an encounter which will live long in the history of naval engagements German destroyers were torpedoed and rammed; every gun aboard the combatants was working, sweeping the decks and tearing gaps in the sides of the opposing craft. There was the locking together of a British and German destroyer, and the men fought furiously in a hand-to-hand battle.

Fights With Revolver

German seamen of a rammed destroyer climbed aboard one of the British boats, and a midshipman fought them back with an automatic revolver. They were killed or driven again into the sea by British Jackies who came to the midshipman's aid.

The British destroyers were the Swift and the Broke, and, although they had received many wounds, they returned to port. The story of the engagement, compiled from the accounts of officers and men, has been made public in the form of an official report. It is an exciting and graphic story of a boarding encounter with cutlasses and bayonets, recalling the days when wooden warships came together and the men fought on the decks.

Wheelman's Heroism

The British casualties are set down as comparatively slight, and the spirit of the wounded is illustrated by the conduct of the Broke's helmsmen, Seaman William Rowles, who, though hit four times by shell fragments, remained at the wheel throughout the action, and finally only betrayed the fact that he was wounded by reporting to his captain, "I'm going off now, sir," and fainted.

A number of the wounded only presented themselves in the sick bay the following day, one stoker giving the surgeon the ingenuous excuse: "I was too busy, sir, cleaning up the rubbish on the stokers' mess deck."

The destroyer Broke was under command in the naval battle of Commander Edward R. G. R. Evans, who was second in command of Scott's Antarctic expedition.

SUB. MENACE IS STILL A FACTOR

LARGEST NUMBER OF BRITISH SHIPS YET REPORTED LOST.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, April 26.—The weekly statement of vessels sunk as made public this evening shows that forty vessels of over 1,600 tons each were sent to the bottom by mines or submarines.

The statement reads:

"Weekly shiping returns: Arrivals, 2,586; sailings 2,621.

"Sinkings by mine or submarine, over 1,600 tons, forty, including two sunk in the week ending April 15; under 1,600 tons, fifteen, including one sunk in the week ending April 15.

"Vessels unsuccessfully attacked, 27, including one attacked the week ending April 8.

"Fishing vessels sunk, nine, including one sunk the week ending April 15."

Biggest Losses Yet

The above report shows the greatest number of merchant vessels reported sunk by mine or submarine in both categories—1,6000 tons and over, and under 1,600 tons—made public by the British Government since it has issued its weekly statement of shipping losses.

"PINCHED" AT PICTON.

Omemee Man Arrested for Assault Committed on His Uncle.

High County Constable Conquergood, of Victoria County, left for Picton yesterday, having received word that the Walter McQuade, who is charged with assaulting a relative last week, was under arrest in that town. The accused, it appears, after committing the offence, went to Toronto, and then to Belleville, remaining there a short time before going to Picton.

SUBMARINE A BAR TO VICTORY

LONDON, April 26. — Sir Albert Stanley, president of the Board of Trade, said at a meeting of business men today: "We have not yet found a way of dealing with the submarine so as to remove the danger of their being an enormously important factor in determining the outcome of the war. The effect of the submarine upon the existence of the British Empire is simply this: We cannot continue to bring into this country all the supplies and materials required for our existence for the continuance of the war."

MOLDER OF BROCKVILLE COMMITS MURDER WHILE INSANE.

BROCKVILLE, April 26—Returning to their home, Miss Kathleen Clarke, a stenographer, and her brother, found their father and mother both dead in the house. The body of the mother was found in the cellar with a shotgun wound in the right side of her back, and the father upstairs with a shotgun wound in his heart.

The woman was fully clothed, and had evidently been about her household duties when shot from behind by her demented husband, who, when found, was only partly clad, and had evidently manipulated the trigger with his feet

Attention, Auto Owners

Every auto owner should be on hand at the Market Square tonight at 7 o'clock prepared to take part in the motor parade to the Armories. This notice is given, as some of the auto owners thought that the parade was limited to the members of the Motor League. Every auto that can be got out will be welcomed to the bunch, particularly if it is decorated with a few flags of any kind. Get there early as the parade will start at 7:30 sharp.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, APRIL 26, 1917

LIEUT.-COL. JOHNSTON.

LIEUT.-COL. T. J. JOHNSTON, who has returned from Europe, says he regrets that he was unable to do more in the war. The Colonel, however, should be in a position to rest easily on the honors he has won. He is known all over the district as the most popular commander of them all, and no one has more friends among the enlisted men than he. The Colonel's military reputation, too, has been firmly established. His fame will rest chiefly upon the fact that he raised a battalion here in the face of difficulties that never for a moment dismayed him, and that he led to Europe one of the finest units ever offered in the service of the Empire.

SPEND YOUR MONEY AT HOME.

A GENTLEMAN employed in a city position required some supplies for his office, and in excessive economic zeal set out to ascertain where these could be purchased to the best advantage. After perusing the pages of various mail order catalogues he ascertained that one of these institutions could undersell the local dealer by something like thirty cents on a small order or as much as was purchased at any one time for his use.

The stickler for economy brought the matter up with his superiors and recommended that the order for supplies be sent to Toronto. He was overruled for two good and sufficient reasons. In the first place the saving so highly prized by the man with the catalogues was regarded as inconsequential. In the second place, patronizing a Toronto firm would not help pay the taxes in Peterborough, and it was out of such taxes that the price of the supplies had to be taken. The goods were purchased at home.

How can a man who sends outside for what he wants assume to speak on behalf of a Greater Peterborough? He is as inconsistent as was the hero of a meeting of the Retail Merchants' Association in this city some few years ago. No merchant spoke louder or more frequently than he. At the close of the meeting someone proposed three cheers for Peterborough and these were heartily given. In the fulness of his civic enthusiasm our hero threw his hat wildly into the air regardless of expense. Another gentleman rescued the piece of headgear and, returning it to the owner, happened to notice that the label inside bore the name of a mail order house in Toronto. Our hero was not more dumbfounded than the others were surprised. The meeting may not have broken up in confusion, but the man with the alien head cover certainly left in that condition.

The more we ponder over Mr. H. B. Cowan's argument in The Review the other day the more we marvel at his logic. Accept his line of thought, and the man who deals with the mail order house is the true civic patriot because he alone adds to the wealth of the city. He sends out money, which is not wealth, and brings in something that is. Mr. Spenlow's bushel of wheat and the price of it was little if any less perplexing than the position taken by Mr. Cowan.

IN SELF-DEFENCE.

THE RIGHT OF ONE MAN to take the life of another in order to preserve his own has always been recognized in human enactments and set forth in Divine law. The fact must be established that the man so acting in his own behalf had every reason to believe that his life was in danger before he resorted to extreme measures to protect it.

This principle or legal maxim is one of the stock arguments of those who favor the retention of capital punishment. Society must be protected from the murderer, and to save its own existence must put all such out of the way. Surely society or the state is not threatened by the acts of a single individual, and is able to protect itself by adopting measures less harsh.

A grown man attacked by a boy armed with a snowball or a bean-shooter may be annoyed, but it can hardly be claimed that his life is actually in danger. No matter what the inclination may be to play the role of Cain, adequate provocation is lacking. The boy can be suppressed and disposed of, made to see the error of his ways, reformed completely, perhaps, by some method short of shedding his blood. If his victim did take his life, the law would hardly uphold his procedure.

The illustration cited above represents, too, the individual homicide and the State. The latter is too big and powerful to set up the plea that it is in any real danger by reason of the acts of one lone offender. It is necessary as well as advisable for the State to protect itself, but surely this can be done without resorting to extreme measures. What right has the State, whose authority is delegated to it by the individual, to take human life, any more than the latter has to avenge himself of his adversaries in the same way? There is certainly no warrant for such a line of conduct found in the teachings of the Nazarene, upon Whose precepts all human legislation is supposed to be based.

A boy of sixteen, brought up in the slums of London, neglected, and surrounded with every form of vice, until he no doubt came to regard viciousness as the normal condition of humanity, was transplanted to new surroundings in Manitoba. The shifting of the scene was not sufficient to effect a change in a nature calloused by a youth spent in such environments as he had known. He committed a double murder under circumstances that at once stamped him as a moral and mental degenerate, showing no more regret than one of the lower animals would do after such a deed of violence.

The boy is to be hanged, despite his years. Society takes the cheapest method of getting him out of the way. The powerful State confesses itself unable to handle a boy of sixteen short of breaking his neck. A grown man who acted as the State does in this case would not only be laughed at but held to strict accountability.

One of the objections to capital punishment is that it tends to breed in the community a class of individuals only a shade less reprehensible than the murderer himself. The marvel is not so much that the State, cold-blooded as it is, should decide to hang this boy, but that it should be able to find a man willing for a trifling monetary consideration to place the noose around the neck of the youth and spring the trap under his feet.

Mr. Bickerdike, the member of Parliament who year after year works so earnestly for the abolition of the death penalty is not an idle enthusiast or a sickly sentimentalist. He has taken up a work in the interests of humanity, on behalf of the State rather than on that of the offender, because when a man is hanged he believes that the darker reproach rests upon the former. Mr. Bickerdike bases his arguments upon the teachings of Christ. The only foundation his opponents are able to find for their arguments are precepts that were superseded by the new dispensation.

MORE AID FROM CANADA.

WHEN THE WAR broke out, the call was for men, and Canada responded. Then the need for munitions arose and the Canadian manufacturers, encouraged by the Government, took up a line of work that was entirely new to them, and on a scale that spoke volumes for their enterprise and for the financial resources of the country.

And now the cry is for ships. "Ships, ships and still more ships are the present great need," declared Mr. Lloyd George the other day. Again Canada hears the call and comes once more to the rescue. The Government, it is announced, is behind a big shipbuilding program for Canada, and this will go far toward helping to defeat the German submarine danger by providing carriers for the commerce of the Empire.

The Government of this country has heard every call, has faced every new and trying task thrust upon it by the war. Its resourcefulness in a new and strenuous situation has attracted the attention of the Imperial authorities and of all the other powers in the civilized world. It is the small-bore politician, the narrow-visioned partisan press, who poison the atmosphere with their biased criticism.

THEY REFUSED PEERAGES

A London paper gives the following: Of the famous men who have refused peerages, Gladstone is the most notable instance of modern times. Thomas Carlyle refused the G.C.B. with his usual irreverence, remarking that if he accepted people would inevitably describe it as the Grand Cap and Bells. Of Fox the story is told that, on someone bringing him word that the King was anxious to make him a peer, he remarked, despairingly, "Great heavens! has it come to that?" One of the most interesting of refusals was that which came from Lord Melbourne when Queen Victoria offered him the Garter, one of the most distinguished orders in the power of the British Sovereign to confer. Melbourne was, of course, Queen Victoria's first Prime Minister, when the Queen was quite a young girl, and between the two there existed a picturesque relationship, somewhat like that of father and daughter. He was, however, ever respectful and, if frank, none the less precise. So, in declining the Garter, he wrote: "The expense of the blue ribbon amounts to $5,000, and there has been, of late years, no period at which it would not have been seriously inconvenient for me to lay down such a sum."

MARVELLOUS FACTS

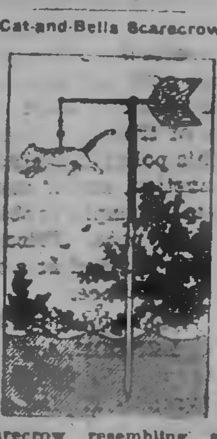
Just Try to Picture What a Billion Means

If a railway train, proceeding at the rate of a mile a minute, had been, at the dawn of the Christian era, started around the earth on a straight track, its object being to run 1,000,000,000 miles without stop, it would have been necessary for that train to circle the earth 40,000 times and it would not have come to the end of its journey until nearly New Year's eve, 1822—sixteen centuries after Christ was born. During its frantic flight it would have seen the Savior live and die; Rome rise, flourish, and decay; Britain discovered and vanquished by the Roman legions, and London and Paris built. It would have proceeded on its journey throughout the dark ages. It would have witnessed the birth of Columbus, the discovery of America and have a couple of hundred years yet to continue.

In the ordinary box of matches there are fifty sticks. If a consignment of 1,000,000,000 were ordered from the manufacturer the boxes in which they were packed would make a pile 158 miles in height. Packed in freight cars, they would fill twelve to the roofs. To box them alone, not to take into consideration the labor making and labelling the boxes, 1,000 girls would be kept busy a month, working in eight-hour shifts.

On the entire surface of the earth there are but a comparatively few more than 1,000,000,000 human beings. Yet science assures us that for untold ages they have been increasing with steady regularity.

Cat-and-Bells Scarecrow



A scarecrow resembling a living animal is often more effective than other devices, and the cat and bells arrangement shown in the sketch was found especially so. The hide of a cat was stretched over a hollow frame and suspended by a cord from a large weather vane. Several bells were attached to the cord, and when the vane shifts in the wind, the movement of the hide and the rattling of the bells combine to frighten the birds.—Popular Mechanics.

POWER OF HORSES

Interesting Tests to Determine Pulling Power

A correspondent writes: Interesting tests were made some time ago to determine the respective pulling powers of horses, men, and elephants. Two horses, weighing 1,600 pounds each, together pulled 3,750 pounds, or 550 pounds more than their combined weight. One elephant, weighing 12,000 pounds, pulled 8,750 pounds, or 3,250 pounds less than its weight. Fifty men, aggregating 7,500 pounds in weight, pulled 8,750 pounds, or just as much as the single elephant; but, like the horses, they pulled more than their own weight.

Costly Fur Garment

A London paper writes: The most beautiful and also the most costly single fur garment in existence, is a sable cape belonging to the ex-Czarina of Russia. It is nearly black, and it took eleven years to collect the skins of which it is made, each of them exactly matching all the others. The cost of the skins alone, procured singly, was about $60,000, and the value of the finished garment has been put by experts as high as $150,000. It is guarded continuously by a sentry.

Judges at $25,000 a Year

Judges of His Majesty's Court of Justice earn their salaries of $25,000 a year each with shorter hours of labor than probably any other class of professional men in the world. Here is an approximate estimate of the number of days in the year that a High Court sits and is idle: Christmas holidays, 21 days; Easter holidays, 13 days; Whitsun holidays, 10 days; Long Vacation, 73 days; Sundays (besides above), 80 days; judges sit 214 days: total 365 days.

WHY DO WE CRITICIZE?

Leaders of Women Must Cultivate Tolerant Spirit

A woman writes: No human being has a right to judge another. We all have our lives to live, and we cannot always tell even if we can boast of being experts in character analysis "hit the mark" and say of a certain woman that she "lacks that beauty of face that comes from an active and intelligent brain."

No good can be derived from personal criticism. It is a pity—one great pity that women do criticise one another so severely and that Canadian women are taking this weapon, which will surely tend more towards breaking down a nation than of building it up. Just so long as our women do this thing, then just so far will Canada be lacking in a "good, strong, solid body of public spirit."

If the women of Canada who wish to be leaders of women, could only realize that it is not by a wholesale denunciation of the average woman's brains that they are going to attract women to higher ideals, but by hearty acknowledgment of what women have done and are doing, and by a persuasion backed by kind thoughts—these alone will woo men and women alike to noble deeds.

NO RATES FOR AMBASSADOR

In permitting Mr. Gerard, the late American Ambassador, to quit Germany without being obliged to have his luggage overhauled by the customs officers, the authorities there were merely following the time-honored precedent in such cases. There are many similar privileges pertaining to these highly-placed personages. For instance, no ambassador can be legally compelled to pay rates or taxes in the country to which he is accredited. In 1909, the now notorious Bethmann Hollweg, then German Ambassador in London, took a nice little riverside residence at Walton-on-Thames, where he used to spend his week-ends. The rate collector sent in his claim in due course, but Bethmann-Hollweg declined to pay, and the Treasury to whom the Walton authorities appealed, upheld him in his refusal. Similarly, an ambassador cannot be sued for debt, nor can he be legally arrested for any crime whatsoever, and this privilege extends also to all his servants. In 1908, Mr. Plowden, sitting at Marylebone Police Court, felt himself obliged to discharge a footman charged with a criminal offence on his pleading that he was an ambassador's servant.

On June 8, 1912, Harry V. Radford, noted Arctic explorer, and his companion, Charles Street, were speared to death by a band of Killinomist Eskimos near Bathurst Inlet. An Eskimo woman slit Radford's throat. Beyt's first patrol spent two years in vain after awful hardships, sailing from Halifax into Hudson Bay and getting as far as 200 miles north of Baker Lake, but finding no trace of the band. As they were returning, a second patrol of equal size was fitting out at Regina to take up the fourth and fifth years of the search.

SHIPS AND BUILDING

Basic Industries Hard Hit by Workers' Indulgences

A correspondent of the London Daily Mail wrote from Glasgow as follows: I find the delays to ships through desertions and drunkenness far more serious on the Clyde than on the Mersey. The loss of time at the docks and in shipbuilding yards is equally bad through men having too many facilities for drinking. Captain of important ships complain daily of men failing to join up, and when they do join they are often so much under the influence of drink that they are incapable of performing their duties. In some cases the captains have had to go down the river with hardly a sober man on board and the engineers have had to stoke the fires themselves. Even ships chartered by the Admiralty are frequently delayed through seamen deserting, and nearly all the desertions are due to drink.

"It is the same in the shipbuilding yards. Riveters working in a squad are disorganized by one man being off. The heavy loss of time in some of the shipbuilding yards can only be accounted for by drink, as it mostly occurs in the mornings. One firm declare that their men lost over 70,000 hours during a month.

The system of paying for overtime is bad. It encourages a man to stay out all the morning, and then, starting after dinner, he tries to make up by working after the regulation stopping time, when he gets paid his time and a half. The employers all agree that drink is the cause of lost time keeping, and there is a strong feeling among Glasgow shipbuilders and the naval authorities in favor of some form of prohibition. The majority would be satisfied if the sale of spirits could be stopped. The rest of the evil here is whisky, and too often whisky of bad quality.

Major Curry, son of Mr. J. Walter Curry, formerly Crown Attorney, in Toronto, and formerly a resident of Millbrook, was killed in action.

Mr. Joseph Armstrong was a visitor to Bethany, on Thursday.

Private Hearst, of the 136th Batt., has been wounded. He worked for Mr. H. C. Argue before enlisting. Other Millbrook and Cavan boys who have been wounded recently are Lieut. Lawrence Carveth, Pte. Chas. Thacker, Pte. Sandy Sisson, Andy Jardine, and Norman Oliver.

Mr. William Mullen was a visitor to Toronto last week.

Mrs. Nugent attended the funeral of her nephew, the late Roy Jenkins, of Woodstock, last week.

Mr. Fred Smith was a visitor to Peterboro on Wednesday.

Miss Anderson, of Baillieboro, was in town on Tuesday.

Mr. Charles Ivory, of Omemee, was in town on Saturday.

THE LATE MR. JOHN BYERS.

The death of Mr. John Byers, which took place on Tuesday, April 17th, 1917, removes one of Millbrook's highly respected citizens.

Deceased was born in Ballyduff. He leaves to mourn his loss his wife, one son, John J. Byers, and two sisters, Mr. J. Morton (of Pontypool) and Mrs. George Kennedy (of Cavan). One daughter, Mrs. William Howard, pre-deceased him several years.

The funeral from the family residence, West Street, on Thursday, April 19th, was largely attended. Rev. Dr. Lee conducted the services at the house and grave. The pallbearers were Messrs. A. T. Armstrong, R. Deyell, T. Leith, J. Todd, H. Hunter, and G. Wallace.

Mr. J. McBride has received a telegram stating that his son-in-law, Mr Stone, had been killed. No particulars are to hand of how his death took place, but it is supposed that he was in a wreck on the railroad, as he was an engineer. He was engineer for sixteen years, and was never before in an accident. It is but eleven months since he married Miss Cassie McBride. To her and other bereaved we extend sincere sympathy. His remains are being brought to Cobourg, where his people reside, for interment.

The Late Roy Jenkins.

The death took place on April 20 at Woodstock of Roy Jenkins, son of Mr. T. B. Jenkins, formerly of Millbrook. Roy had many friends here as well as in Woodstock. He was an active member of the Y. M. C. A and the Methodist Church. He was a member of King Solomon Lodge, A. F. and A. M. He was born in Millbrook thirty years ago, and went to Woodstock fifteen years ago. Besides his parents, two brothers and three sisters survive him, namely: Charles of Detroit, Harold, at home; Mrs. McCracken, Alberta; Miss Jeanie, school teacher, Chatham, and Miss Addie, who has been teaching at Eastwood, to all of whom we join Millbrook and Cavan friends in extending sincere condolences.

The funeral took place to the Methodist Cemetery under Masonic auspices and was largely attended. Rev. Dr. Crews conducted the services. There were many beautiful floral tributes.

FELT LIKE A NEW PERSON

After Taking Only One Box Of "Fruit-a-tives"

EAST SHIP HARBOUR, N. S.

"It is with great pleasure that I write to tell you of the wonderful benefits I have received from taking "Fruit-a-tives". For years, I was a dreadful sufferer from Constipation and Headaches, and I was miserable in every way. Nothing in the way of medicines seemed to help me. Then I finally tried "Fruit-a-tives" and the effect was splendid. After taking one box, I feel like a new person, to have relief from those sickening Headaches".

HASTINGS

(Special Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, April 25. — The death at Beatty, Sask., of Mrs. Robinson McRae (nee Leffie Lobb) at the age of forty years, is reported. Mrs. McRae was a one-time resident of Hastings, having spent her girlhood days here. Much sympathy is expressed for her husband and child, also the father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. T. Lobb.

Congratulations are being showered upon Mr. Archie Thomson, son of Rev. D. A. and Mrs. Thomson, town, on the occasion of his graduating with honors from Knox College, Toronto, and also in winning two scholarships amounting to $95.

At a recent meeting of the town council a largely signed petition was presented to the town fathers asking them to furnish all-night electric light service for the entire year. This was granted.

A large number of people are confined to their homes suffering from a form of spring la grippe.

Rev. D. A. Thomson went to Warkworth on Thursday to attend the ordination and induction of Rev. Russel McGillivray, B.A., B.D., formerly of Hamilton, Ont. The reverend gentleman is a young man of great promise and high hopes are entertained for a successful pastorate.

A severe electric storm passed over this district on Friday night, followed by cooler weather.

Mrs. (Rev.) Douglas Dickson (nee Madge Buck) has received official notice that her husband died of wounds on or about April 16. Mrs. Dickson is the youngest daughter of Mr. Jas. Buck and was married scarcely three years ago. A little daughter of tender age is left never to know the lavish caresses of a fond father. The sympathy of the community goes out to the bereaved ones.

The many friends here of Mr. Matt. Breckenridge extend sincere sympathy to him on the death in action of his son Max, who was well and favorably known here.

Mr. Ed. Barrigan, who has been engaged with the Hastings Tanning Co. for some time, has severed connection with the firm and accepted a position in a munitions factory at Peterborough.

Mrs. Sarah Carter spent a few days during the week with Peterborough friends.

Miss Agnes Hormiston visited in Warkworth during the week.

Mrs. V. Gorman visited in Peterborough last week.

Evangelist Kathleen Morton of Toronto has been renewing acquaintances here the guest of Miss Carrie Doxsee.

Miss Jessie Wilson was in Peterborough for a short visit during the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Fowlds were in Toronto for a few days last week.

Mrs. Buchanan of Trent Bridge called here on Monday.

Mr. Winter Runnels of Toronto spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Runnels.

Mrs Stewart of Toronto is moving her household effects here for the summer months. She, with her daughter, will occupy Mr. S. Stickles' house, recently vacated by Mr. and Mrs. D. Fife.

Rev. Mr. Clare of Warsaw was in town on Tuesday the guest of Rev. J. Snell.

The maple sugar season is finished and the farmers have begun seeding operations.

Mr. W. Atkinson and little son of Peterborough spent Saturday with Mrs. S. Carter, town.

Mrs. John Mitchell of Oak Hill has been visiting her mother, Mrs. Hugh Collins, for a few days.

Mr. Malcolm Baker has been confined to his bed through illness.

Mrs. A. Anderson is visiting Lindsay friends.

Miss Blanche Pearce of Norwood has returned home after a short visit with Mrs. Walter Fowlds.

Mr. H. Lambert has purchased a new car.

Mr. Ed. Lynch is installing a gasoline pump on his premises.

Mrs. C. Scriver is spending a few days with friends in Peterborough.

Mr. Fred. Burridge of Peterborough was in town on Tuesday.

OMEMEE

(Special Correspondence.)

OMEMEE, April 25. — Miss "Connie" McLaughlin of Toronto is the guest of Miss Gladys Downe.

Lieut. Bishop of the 252nd Batt'n, Lindsay, was in the village Saturday evening bidding his many friends good-bye. He left Lindsay Monday morning with a draft for overseas.

Pte. R. Jones and Pte. Peters of the 252nd Batt'n, we understand, have been transferred to Kingston.

Mr. and Mrs. P. Parsons were visitors to Peterborough on Monday.

The degrees in Arts and Science awarded by Queen's University have been announced. Five students have secured the degree of M.A., eighty that of B.A., and twenty-four the degree of B.Sc. Among those awarded the degree of B.A. are Morgan O'Neil of Omemee and R. M. McMullen of Dunsford.

Omemee is justly proud of her many brave boys who have gone to fight. Among those wounded in the recent hard fighting are: Corp. Harold Cunningham; Privates Fred Cornell, Fred Burchall, and Pte. Earl VanStone of Reaboro, who spent the winter of 1916 in Omemee with B Co. of the 109th. The citizens wish them a speedy recovery.

Mr. Dave Magee, the genial expressman, has sold his business to his brother, Mr. James Magee, of Orillia. Mr. and Mrs. Magee and family leave in about two weeks for their new home in Saskatchewan.

Mr. Ashley of the Hydro-Electric Co., was in Omemee this week inspecting the hydro poles purchased by the village.

Miss Gwendolin James, daughter of the rector, Rev. Mr. James, leaves on Monday for Toronto, where she will join five young ladies of Havergal college, who have volunteered for service on a fruit farm near Toronto.

"DOMINION" Chain Tread Tires

are the most efficient anti-skids in their price-class, and take second place only to DOMINION "Nobby" Treads. The gripping suction of their cup-shaped links gives remarkable traction and power to resist side slips even on the most treacherous surfaces.

Like ALL "DOMINION" Tires, Chain Treads have the mileage built right into them, as well as guaranteed.

DOMINION PLAIN TREAD Tires—the basis of all DOMINION Tire value—are serviceable and economical for ordinary driving where the going is good.

"DOMINION" TREADS, costing but little more than the plain, are dependable anti-skids and have more rubber where the wear comes.

DOMINION "NOBBY" TREADS are "the aristocrats of the road". Their extra heavy construction, and the big, burly knobs of the tread, make them 90% puncture proof. They are the tires for hardest service, on heaviest cars.

For every kind of road and service there is a particular DOMINION Tire that is the best to buy. This has been conclusively proved the country over and the great majority of Canadian Motorists agree that

WIVES REPLACE HUSBANDS

Milwaukee Firm Will Give Soldier's Wife His Position

Novel indeed is the suggestion that has been made by a patriotic Milwaukee salesman to the hosiery firm which he represents.

"In view of my past military experience I have applied for a commission in the first military force to be sent abroad. In event I cannot qualify, I intend to go as a private.

"As my mother and wife are dependent upon me, would you consider my wife for my position? She is an unusually good saleswoman, and could take care of my territory as well as I, with a little posting from me as to the best way of making the territory and other matters regarding the business. I could then go with a clear conscience that my own were being cared for."

The company has agreed to appoint the wife to his position.

At The Motor Show

(By H. W. KIPP.)

My wife said to me: "Go, buy us a car.
  I'm tired of the street cars and walking's too slow;
We've travelled through life together so far,
  And the joys of an auto we never did know."

So I answered friend wife: "What car will I get?
  There's nothing of autos that I really know."
She winked at me, and said: "I will bet
  You can make up your mind at the big motor show."

Forthwith to the auto show I repaired;
  The cars, all aglitter with polish and shine,
Glistened and glimmered until I despaired
  Of being able to say: "That one for mine."

I asked a good fellow: "How much for this bird?"
  He chewed on his gum and shifted his cud
"Of twelve thousand dollars I ask just a third."
  Twelve thousand stars, and I fell with a thud.

I was grabbed by the coat and held by the neck,
  Dizzy and dazed, and waving my hand;
Another slick gent, with a diamond, by Heck!
  Says: "Come, let me show you an Overland."

Then a good fellow, who pitied my plight,
  And realized what a hole I was in,
Fixed on me an eye that was bright,
  And murmured, "Can't I sell you a McLaughlin?"

"Not so sudden," says I to this well-wishing sport,
  "There are others around that look good to me.
There's the Chevrolet, Willys, the Dodge, and Gray-Dort,
  The Studebaker, Grant, and husky Packard."

I came to a place where they sold motorbikes;
  The Indian was the name it was called;
It was red, and it sure did look beautiful—
  With a motor like that, one could never be stalled.

The question arose: a six or a four,
  An eight or electric, or velvety twelve,
  In my poor, misty brain I sure had to delve.

I am usually sober, and have a clear brain,
  And head work, I thought, was always my forte;
But where my "bean" was there was only a pain,
  So I reached for my hip and took a good snort.

That Cadillac sure was a classy to see,
  The Grant and the Chalmers, the Mitchell as well;
  Then turning around I saw a Maxwell.

This brought me back to earth with a thud;
  The price was a serious item, you know.
The Chevrolet, Saxon, the Metz, and the "Stud,"
  And 'way over there I saw a Briscoe.

My brain was a halo of gear shifts and springs,
  Heat treated, full floating, gold plated chassis;
Timken rear axles and "do funny" things;
  I was groggy and felt I had ball-bearing knees.

My condition was critical and plain to the eye,
  When sudden to me through the crowd there bored,
With a beam in his eye, said a smart-looking guy,
  "Come on, here you are, let me give you a FORD."

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

JUST LIKE GETTING A BRAN NEW CAR

With the new car there is a contented feeling of satisfaction with everything. It is "off with the old, on with the new."

In the same way, when Dr. Fowler fits defective eyes with his "PEBLO" Glasses, the old condition of being compelled to see by straining the eyes is gone, and you have perfectly renewed vision, and using the eyes becomes a pleasure.

Consult Dr. Fowler. No Charge.

RESTORE THE NATURAL SIGHT

Remarkable Trip of 1500 Miles by Briscoe Car

FROM SAN ANTONIO TO CHATTANOOGA WITHOUT A REPAIR.

Word of a remarkable drive of 1,500 miles in a Briscoe 4-24 Roadster has just been received by the Briscoe factory. Mr. H. M. Bennet, of San Antonio, Texas, drove from that city to Chatanooga without having to make a change or repair a tire, and one of the Chatanooga dealers who examined the car after the trip reports the tires still in good condition and show little wear.

Mr. Bennet claims that he averaged over 31 miles to the gallon of gasoline, and had no adjustments to make, adding only gasoline and oil as the occasion required.

It is needless to say that Mr. Bennet is a strong booster for the Briscoe car, which is on exhibition at the motor show.

If you are suffering from dyspepsia, indigestion or sour stomach you should try a mixture of Sanol Pepsin and Iridia.

This is said to be the formula of Dr. Banta's famous prescription which gave him a world-wide reputation.

These powders are sold in Peterborough at Lynch's Drug Store, 161 Hunter Street.

"NOBLE BLOND BEASTS"

Reversion to Worse Than Savagery Boasted by Germans

How many people who use the term "the blond beast" to describe the Teutonic butcher can say offhand in what connection and by whom it was first used? The question was raised in a well known London club, and the erudite Member told his hearers to look in "The Genealogy of Morals," by the German philosopher Nietzsche. Due search led to the discovery of the passage in which this truthfully descriptive epithet first appeared.

When the Germans discard the last traces of superficial civilization "they revert," says Nietzsche, "to the beast of prey's innocence of conscience, and become rejoicing monsters, who perhaps go on their way, after a hideous sequence of murder, conflagration, violation, torture, with as much gaiety and equanimity as if they had merely taken part in some student gambols . . . Deep in the nature of all these noble races there lurks unmistakably the beast of prey, the blonde beast, lustfully roving in search of booty and victory. From time to time the beast demands an outlet, an escape, a return to the wilderness . . . That the lambs should bear a grudge against the great birds of prey is in no way surprising; but that is no reason why we should blame the great birds of prey for picking up the little lambs."

Peach Pie

Line pie plate with crust and fill with canned peaches, putting them in as closely as possible with the hollowed side up. Fill each one with sugar, a bit of butter and a few drops of lemon juice. Put cross strips of crust across top and bake in hot oven. Serve with cream.

Ginger Ale Salad

Dissolve two teaspoons of gelatin, in two tablespoons of water. Add eight tablespoons of boiling water, two tablespoons of lemon juice, a cup of ginger ale, and a quarter of a cup of chopped sweet peppers. Turn into small moulds and serve on lettuce with a boiled dressing.

Tongue Fritters

Cut slices of cold tongue a little thicker than you would to serve cold. Spread each piece with Worcestershire sauce and hot mashed potato. Roll in flour dip in beaten egg, again in flour and fry in deep fat.

An Old Hot Water Bag

Do not discard an old hot water bag that has begun to leak. Keep a crock of clean sand in the house, and when needed heat it in the oven and fill the bag with it. The heat will be well retained.

Blackened Kettles

To remove the black from the outside of kettles soak them for a few hours in a solution of lye, then scrape and wash well.

SHIPPING AND DRINKING

Risk of Sailing Short-handed Discussed by an Officer

Lieutenant T. W. Moore, R.N.R., secretary of the Imperial Merchant Service Guild, states: "For nearly twenty-five years we have agitated in vain for effective measures of discipline. Through over-indulgence in strong drink it has very commonly been the case that well over half the men who have signed articles have failed to turn up and any sort of quite inefficient substitutes known as 'pierhead jumpers' have been engaged to take their places. Ships with cargoes of immense value, especially at this critical time, may be well out to sea before their crews become really sober. True, the Defence of the Realm Act provides for failures to join, but in most cases, owing to the lack of effective and prompt measures, the delinquents go scot-free.

"I am not an extreme prohibitionist, but I concur in stricter limitations, particularly on the gigantic 'home bottle' business and also the sale of pernicious spirits. Crews should be compelled to join, say, forty-eight hours before the vessel sails. Severe penalties should be visited on those not doing so, and in any case there would then be some assurance that all-hands would be sober on putting to sea.

"Our transport officers could tell an amazing story. I believe that some time ago the Admiralty had under serious consideration the adoption of the Naval Discipline Act in respect of all merchant vessels, but I think they abandoned the idea owing to the attitude of the men's leaders. But surely these leaders, if informed of the tremendous loss the country suffers, would not be averse from disciplinary measures."

AGED 48 AND 41

Appeal by Father From the Front For Son

A soldier stepped briskly forward at Fulham Tribunal and told the chairman, Alderman Royston Evans, that he was seizing the opportunity while home on leave of appealing for his eighteen-year-old son, a clerk, whom he wanted to stay to look after the home and two younger sons. He had three other sons serving. He was a widower and joined the army when the appeal was made in October, 1914.

Alderman Sainsbury: "How old are you?" "Forty-nine next birthday."

"And how old were you when you joined the army?" "Forty-one."

The tribunal smiled, and the chairman said they would give six months' exemption.

Recruits Must "Keep Out"

The Lord Chief Justice of England ruled that a military representative at a military service tribunal had no right to be present while the tribunal was considering its decision in private.

The Campbellford Cheese Board met on Tuesday with the following buyers present: Messrs. Bird, Cook, Thompson, Kerr, and Watkins. There were only 25 cheese boarded and all sold at 25 cents, Mr. Bird getting No's. 7 and 12, Mr. Kerr 9 and 20, Mr. Cook No. 1, and Mr. Thompson No. 23.

Prohibition Results.

With the exception of Parry Sound, which had an almost remarkable increase in "drunks," the city of Hamilton had the worst drunkenness record during 1916 of any city or town in the province, according to statistics compiled at Toronto for the Ontario Government. While Toronto, London, Ottawa, and other cities, Brantford, Woodstock, and Chatham alone excepted showed a reduction in commitments for inebriety, the city of Hamilton wound up the year with 781 commitments or an increase of 267.

Parry Sound had an increase of 437, Brantford 31, Chatham 25, and Woodstock 17. In no other city or town in the province was there an increase of more than three or four drunks.

Toronto reduced her drunks by 278, London by 47, Kingston by 88, Kitchener by 2, St. Thomas 18, Ottawa 104, Guelph 12.

These returns cover the calendar year, and include three and a half months under prohibition. The net result for the cities and towns of the province embracing all jails and lockups, is a total of 5,968 commitments.

Last year's total showed a reduction of 267 commitments, while for the previous year, when early closing went into effect, there was a reduction of 2,600 commitments.

Princess Pat's Interest.

The most interesting event on the Canadian front since the visit of Sir Robert Borden, Prime Minister of Canada, was the reception given to a draft from the Princess Patricia's Regiment. The colors of this famous regiment are at the front, and when drafts arrive they are brought out so that the newly-arrived may salute them with a battalion parade. On the latest occasion Prince Arthur of Connaught attended the ceremony and made a brief speech, in which he referred to the splendid record of the battalion and told of the continued interest of his sister, the Princess Patricia, in it. He said she was greatly desirous of visiting the regiment in the field, and hoped to be able to do so before long.

Hard to Tell.

"You have made a good many nice sales this season," said the manager.

"Thanks."

"You must know when to grasp the psychological moment for closing a transaction."

"Oh, I manage all right with the customers! But what is the psychological moment for striking the boss for a raise?"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

According to Signs.

"Little Johnnie is rather cross this morning," said the doctor, "but then that is a good sign. It shows that he is convalescing."

"According to that," said Johnnie's mother, "my husband must be recovering from a severe illness. There's just no living with that man."—Exchange.

HE SUCCEEDS SMUTS.

An Old African Campaigner Whose Heart is in His Work.

One advantage accruing to us from our far-flung empire, is that we are always able to find exactly the right sort of man for the job when it comes to waging war in a difficult and dangerous country.

General A. R. Hoskins, for example, who succeeds General Smuts in the East African command!

It would be indeed difficult to hit upon a man more eminently suited, both by nature and training, for the conduct of the sort of campaign now being waged in the interior of Germany's last and biggest colony.

He is a scientific soldier. This we know because he has been a General Staff Officer at the Staff College. He is also an old African campaigner, an adept at rough-and-tumble fighting in the bush against natives and native levies.

Born in 1871, General Hoskins joined the Prince of Wales' North Staffordshire Regiment in 1891, and attained to a captaincy nine years later. When the present war broke out he filled the post of Inspector-General of the King's African Rifles, and for his services in this connection he has since been twice mentioned in despatches and received the C. M. G.

Prior to this he saw a lot of stiff campaigning in Somaliland in pursuit of the "Mad Mullah," one of the hardest and most trying of the many "little wars" Britain has been obliged to wage in this part of the world. The foe against whom we were fighting was savage, ruthless, and elusive; the country is a waterless desert, with impenetrable thickets of thorn bush here and there affording ideal lurking places for the enemy when hard pressed.

This was in 1902-3. Long before that date, however, General Hoskins had served his apprenticeship to the art and mystery of desert warfare.

In 1896 he fought, as a subaltern, in the Dongola Expedition under Kitchener whose favorable notice he was lucky enough to secure, with the result that he was given the opportunity of accompanying him in the various stages of the advance up the Nile which culminated in the victory of Omdurman.

This ended the Mahdist Empire, but the Khalifa escaped into Kordofan with a considerable following, and young Hoskins was one of the officers chosen by Kitchener to follow him up and either capture him or kill him.

During these final operations Lieutenant Hoskins, as he then was, commanded the camel corps attached to the flying column which so relentlessly pursued the fallen despot, until eventually, on November 24th, 1899, he was overtaken and brought to bay at a place called Om Debrikat, on the White Nile.

Here the once all-powerful Kalifa, realizing that the game was up and —in the words of Sir Reginald Wingate who commanded—"disdaining surrender," elected to make his last stand, and fell fighting with the bulk of his principal emirs and many hundreds of his misguided followers.

For his share in these long-drawn-out series of operations Hoskins was decorated by the Khedive with the Order of the Medjidie, and he also received the Khedive's Sudan medal with no fewer than nine clasps out of a possible eleven, a unique record. He likewise received the British medal, and his brevet majority.

CHILD'S SEVERE STOMACH TROUBLE
Harriston, Ont., Father says Dr. Cassell's Tablets Saved his Child's Life.

Mr. Corby, Harriston P.O., Ont., writes: "Our little girl was weak from birth, and though we tried doctors' medicine and other things she got no better. She just lay in her cot and cried, and neighbors all said we could not save her. The doctors said she had stomach trouble, and that her chances were small, yet Dr. Cassell's Tablets cured her. They have been worth their weight in gold to us, for we were just giving up hope of saving our little daughter. I don't think there is any other medicine for children like Dr. Cassell's Tablets. Publish this letter if you like. It may help others as the Tablets helped us."

A free sample of Dr. Cassell's Tablets will be sent to you on receipt of five cents for mailing and packing. Address: Harold F. Ritchie & Co., Ltd., 10 McCaul Street, Toronto.

Dr. Cassell's Tablets are the surest home remedy for Dyspepsia, Kidney Trouble, Sleeplessness, Anaemia, Nervous Ailments, Nerve Paralysis, Palpitation, and Weakness in Children. FARM VALUES INCREASE.

Live Stock Also Worth More Than a Year Ago.

A bulletin issued by the Dominion census and statistics office reports on the values of farm land, of farm help, and of farm live stock in 1916, as returned by crop correspondents at the end of January.

For the whole of Canada the average value of farm land held for agricultural purposes, whether improved or unimproved, and including the value of dwelling houses, stables and other farm buildings, is approximately $41 per acre, as compared with $40 last year. The average values by Provinces are as follows: Prince Edward Island, $30; Nova Scotia, $33.06; New Brunswick, $29.04; Quebec, $52; Ontario, $52.05; Manitoba, $32; Saskatchewan, $23; Alberta, $22; British Columbia, $118.05. In the last named province the higher average is due to orcharding and fruit growing.

The average wages paid for farm help during 1916 reached a higher level than in any previous year, for which returns have been collected. For the whole of the Dominion the wages per month during the summer, including board, averaged $43.23 for male, and $22.46 for female help, as compared with $37.10 and $20.20 in 1915. For the year 1916, including board, the wages averaged $397 for males and $228 for females, as compared with $341 and $200 in 1915. The average value of board per month is returned as $17 for males and $13 for females, the corresponding figures of 1915 being $14.57 and $11.45. By provinces the average wages per month for males and females respectively in the summer season, including board, are as follows: Prince Edward Island, $31.35 and $17.81; Nova Scotia, $38.77 and $19.11; New Brunswick, $35.74 and $16.66; Quebec, $40.79 and $19.70; Ontario, $39.41 and $20.58; Manitoba, $48.37 and $26.97; Saskatchewan, $48.55 and $25.66; Alberta, $52.28 and $29.12; British Columbia, $49.86 and $28.66.

The average value of horses in Canada is about the same as a year ago, but milch cows, other cattle, sheep and swine show a substantial increase and return values that are higher than in any year since these records began to be collected in 1909. Horses three years old and over average for Canada $159, as against $160 in 1915, milch cows are $70 as compared with $62, cattle between one year old and three years average $43, against $38, sheep average $10.48, against $7.96, and swine $11.98 per 100 pounds live weight, as against $8.58. The average value of wool attains a record of 37 cents per pound for unwashed and 50 cents per pound for washed wool. Using the numbers of live stock as estimated last June, and the average values now returned, the total value of the farm animals of Canada may be estimated at $798,544,000, as compared with $746,246,000 in 1915, the values of each description being as follows: Horses $374,831,000 as against $370,378,000 in 1915; milch cows $181,813,000 as against $164,224,000; other horned cattle, $170,254,000 as against $151,477,000; sheep, $20,588,000, as against $16,225,000, and swine $51,058,000, as against $43,942,000.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

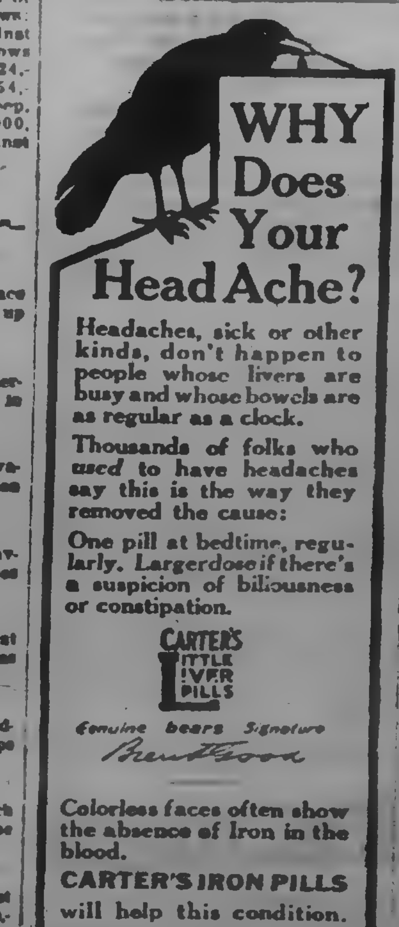
Meringue on pies and puddings often fall because they are applied while the dish is still hot. Always cool a pie or pudding slightly before attempting to add the meringue.

A potted plant makes a very pretty winter centrepiece on the dining table, but if you would keep the plant in a healthy condition it should spend a third of its time in a sunny window.



WHY Does Your Head Ache?

NURSED HER HUSBAND

[illegible] Seeking Divorce Famous Beauty Returned to "Cruel" Hero

Mrs. Hugh Ronald French, daughter of Robert J. Wynne, formerly Postmaster-General of the United States and Consul-General to London figures in a remarkable story of a love renewed by the war. Mrs. French, who as Miss Ida Marcelle Wynne had been reputed to be one of the most beautiful girls in London when her father was Consul-General there, was married to Captain French in 1909. Four years afterwards she obtained a divorce in London on the ground of cruelty. She alleged that her husband was rarely sober except when on duty, and that when he was under the influence of liquor he acted brutally toward her. There was introduced at the trial the name of a Canadian chorus girl.

Captain French, who at the time of the trial was captain of the Seventh Dragoon Guards, made no defence and did not even appear by counsel. In April, 1916, however, when an application was entered in behalf of Mrs. French to make the temporary divorce decree permanent, Captain French opposed it, and on April 4 the court rescinded the decree and declared it of no effect. Captain French then returned to France, where he had been fighting with distinction.

Mrs. French devoted herself to nursing wounded soldiers at a private hospital in Grosvenor Square, London. She was thus engaged two months, when she learned that her husband had been severely wounded and taken to the hospital on Salisbury Plaine. She immediately went there and nursed him back to health. When Captain French bade his wife goodbye, to return to his command at the front, those at the hospital who did not know of the court proceedings would never have believed that so affectionate a couple ever had been parted.

BRITISH FOOD CONTROL

Labor, Seed, and Machinery Carefully Prepared by Government

Says a London report: The Government's plan for the increase of home food production is being carried out on business-like lines. Farmers and others who cultivate land under arrangement with the County War Agricultural Committees will have all their requirements as to labor, seed, and machinery met. The guarantee of the Food Controller and the Board of Agriculture is behind the County Committees in this matter. Supplies of seed oats and potatoes are usually held ready for distribution as soon as the reports from the county committees show the requirements of each district.

Mr S. F. Edge, the motor expert and also a pig breeder, has been invited to join the Food Controller's staff to superintend the supply of agricultural machinery. The Government have taken over the control of maize in the country. Control will be in the hands of the Wheat Commission, who it is expected will shortly assume control of all other forms of corn and also of rice. Lord Devonport, the Food Controller, appointed Mr Hugh Francis Paul to be his commercial secretary, and Mr. David Davies and Mr. [illegible] P. Hughes-Gibb to be his private secretaries.

CURING DOUBLE CHINS

Massage and Bathing Work Well Together, 'tis Said

There are any number of advertised appliances for curing double chins. Some are harmless, most are expensive. The best and least expensive method is to bathe the chin with very hot water and soap, and to massage away the warm moist flesh with the fingers. This massage breaks up the fat particles under the skin, and causes them to scatter. A general reduction diet should be followed at the same time, for the person with a double chin is usually burdened with fat. There are exceptions, of course. Many thin women have double chins because they hold their heads wrong, dropped forward, so the chin sags, and so flesh collects under it, giving the ugly double line. Massage, and a correct carriage to the head will overcome this trouble without a diet.

Fried Green Tomatoes

Cut six large green tomatoes into slices about an eighth of an inch thick. Beat the yolk of an egg with a tablespoonful of cold water. Sprinkle over the tomatoes some salt and pepper, dip them in the egg and then in fine breadcrumbs. Fry in butter, brown thoroughly on both sides, and serve with a gravy made as follows: Rub together one tablespoonful of flour with two tablespoonfuls of butter, and when well creamed, brown in the pan; add a half-pint of boiling milk, stirring constantly until it begins to thicken; then add a saltspoonful of salt and pour over the tomatoes.

Dainty Sandwich

Skin fresh tomatoes by dipping them first into hot water, when the skins will come off easily. Slice them finely and sprinkle the slices with salt. Add one gill of grated horseradish to one gill of mayonnaise dressing. Spread thin slices of buttered bread with the mixture, put the slices of tomato on the mixture. Cover, cut the sandwiches into fancy shapes, and garnish the dish with parsley. This is a sandwich men like.

Strawberry Whip

Rub a quart of strawberries through a fine strainer and add powdered sugar to taste. Beat the whites of three eggs to a very stiff froth and mix immediately with the mashed berries and put in a quick oven. Cook for fifteen or twenty minutes, according to the degree of heat in the oven and serve as soon as baked. A souffle of this kind is always more delicious if baked in a low baking dish.

Sauce For Baked Fish

Butter, one-third cup; flour, three tablespoons; salt, one-half teaspoon; pepper; water, one and one-half cups. Mix one-half of the butter and the flour, salt and seasoning. Pour on the water and stir over the fire until the sauce boils, then add the remaining butter in bits, stirring until it is dissolved.

Brown Bread

One cup each of corn meal, graham flour and bread flour, 2 cups sour milk, ¾ tablespoon soda, 1 teaspoon salt, ¾ cup molasses. Mix meal, flour and salt. Dissolve soda in milk, then add to the rest of the mixture. Put in buttered mold and steam three hours. Can be baked by putting mold in a pan of hot water and in less time

COMMITS NO SIN

The Kingston "Whig" says:—A farmer suggests to a contemparary that the Lord's Day Act be suspended during the greater production period. What is the need? The Archbishop of Canterbury says that the men who are helping the war by greater production are warranted in performing Sunday labor if there is need of it. In other words, he is not committing a sin, Is that not sufficient?

Iron can be made rust-resisting by heating it red hot and brushing it with linseed oil.

As fire hose is drawn from a recently patented wall cabinet it opens a valve that turns on the water.

ROUMANIA'S CAPITAL

The city of Jassy, to which the Roumanian Government and diplomatic corps removed when the Teutons began their victorious advance on Bucharest, is a city of about 150,000 population, and an important trade centre. It is situated in the valley of the Bachul, a tributary of the Pruth, and only a few miles from the latter river, which forms the boundary between Roumania and the Russian province of Bessarabia. This was not Jassy's first experience as a capital, as it was the seat of government of the principality of Moldavia, when the Turks controlled Roumania. From a distance Jassy is an imposing city, and appears to have many times its population, because of the great area covered, due to the fact that most of the houses have large surrounding grounds. In the old Turkish days it was a squalid place, but in the last half century it has more than doubled in population, and has been completely modernized. Jassy is celebrated for its many churches and convents, the metropolitan church of St. Nicholas and the Church of the Three Saints being the most famous of these religious structures.

POTATOES IN HEARSE

Belgian Wit Too Sharp For the Hun —Sometimes

The people of Brussels have not allowed the German occupation to depress them to such an extent that they are unable to enjoy a practical joke at the expense of the invaders. One of their greatest troubles is to supply themselves with potatoes. For the purpose of smuggling a consignment a [illegible] loaded [illegible] that held, not beer, but po[illegible] several journeys were made successfully before the [illegible] was [illegible]. The driver was taken into custody at once, and his employer did not remain long at liberty. His present address is the Prison de St. Gilles.

A still more daring trick proved successful, but only in such a way that it cannot be repeated. A potato merchant conceived the idea of getting his wares to his hungry townsmen by filling with them one of the huge heavily-gilt hearses that are peculiar to Belgium. Horses draped in black drew it, preceded by croque morts in their long mourning capes and three-cornered hats almost to the gates of the cemetery at Ixelles; but perhaps there was a lack of solemnity about the mourners. At all events, the authorities became suspicious, and the driver was called upon to stop while the hearse was opened. Instead of doing this, he whipped up his horses and drove off at full speed, and another load of potatoes was saved from German clutches!

The Other "Blighty"

Mrs. Mitchell, wife of Major Mitchell, director of education at the Polytechnic, is in charge of British prisoners from Germany at the chalets of Seebury, near Lucerne. On her return from short leave of absence the men had erected a triumphal arch at the entrance to the chalets, on which were the words, "Welcome Back to Blighty."

Explosion of Raemaekers

Mr. Louis Raemaekers, the cartoonist, who visited Liverpool and was entertained by the Lord Mayor, said if he had tried to keep silent on the German atrocities he would have exploded.

FAMOUS WOMAN'S LEADER

Mrs. H. J. Tennant, Director of Women's National Service

Mrs. H. J. Tennant, the director of Women's National Service, London, is a woman of almost unique experience and exceptional ability. From the very early age of seventeen, Mrs. Tennant, then Miss May Abraham, has shown an active and remarkably intelligent interest in the affairs of the women workers. As assistant commissioner she was appointed by the Royal Labor Commission to inquire into the women's labor question, in which capacity she travelled over England and her own country, Ireland. So able and valuable were her services that, in 1893, she was delegated by the home office to be the first woman inspector of factories.

Three years later she was made His Majesty's superintending inspector, and she was entrusted with the mission of inquiring into dangerous trades. Since that time Mrs. Tennant's life has been one of extraordinarily wide activities. She formed one of the truck committee, presided over by Lord Shaw, and she sat on the divorce commission.

From the occasion of the outbreak of war in August, 1914, her energies have been turned into countless channels. Perhaps her efforts are best known as treasurer of the central committee of women's employment, which at the beginning of the war was established to assist in keeping together the many trades seriously affected, and as a member of the health of munition workers' committee, under Sir George Newman. Her appointment as director of the women's department of national service, with Miss Violet Markham as her capable assistant, has by no means daunted her spirit, though without question it is a colossal and complicated task of such responsibilities as would have caused many to hesitate to undertake it.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

THOMPSON—MARSHALL

Miss Eleanor Marshall, of Cordova Mines, and Mr. Frank Thompson, of Horwick, were married at Cordova Mines. The bride was very popular in Cordova, and a host of friends wish her every happiness in her new home. The young couple will reside at Horwick.

AVERY—HUGHES

A very pretty wedding took place at the residence of Mr. John Avery, 549 Harvey Street, yesterday afternoon, when the Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D., united in marriage Miss Myrtle Hughes, of Renfrew, and Mr. Daniel Avery, of Toronto. A number of the immediate friends and relatives of the contracting parties were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Avery left on the C.P.R. express for a honeymoon trip to points west, after which they will take up residence in Toronto.

The friends of Lieut. Herb. Elliott, who is in the Isolation Hospital, Lindsay, will be pleased to learn that there is a steady improvement in his condition.

The many friends of Mrs. W. H. Smith, of Lindsay, will be pleased to know that she is doing nicely in the Rose Memorial Hospital, having passed safely through a very serious operation some weeks ago. Dr. Moir, of Peterboro, and Dr. White, of Lindsay, performed the operation.

Mr. J. J. Mullen of Lindsay was in the city today.

Mrs. W. C. Thompson of Toronto is a guest at the Empress.

NEW YORK, April 26.—Sarah Berndardt "has made some progress every day since last Sunday" and her physicians are more hopeful said a bulletin issued from the hospital where she is a patient.

CANADIAN CASUALITIES

Central station was crowded, and the rigid rules usually enforced on such occasions were slightly relaxed and many were allowed through to see the soldiers. There wasn't, of course, the same enthusiastic demonstration given as was accorded to battalions which were raised and trained in Ottawa. Lieut.-Col. Scobell and his officers and men, however, made a splendid impression during their short stay and the warmth of their send-off testified to this esteem. The battalion left shortly after two o'clock for an eastern training point where they will go through another short period of training before proceeding overseas.

LIEUT. ANDREW SCOTT

Referring to Lieut. Scott, who died of wounds, the Campbellford News says: Before enlisting for active service, Lieut. Scott was for many years engaged as a foreman in the Trent Valley Woolen Mills here, and is well and favorably known throughout the community. He took an active interest in clean sports, and for several seasons was secretary-treas. of the Curling and Bowling Association. Lieut. Scott was a Presbyterian in religion, and was a member of the local Masonic Lodge. His sorrowing widow and young son have the sympathy of the entire community in the great loss they sustain in the death of a noble husband and father.

SMITH MAN WOUNDED

Mr. John J. Cullen, of Smith, has received notification that his son, Pte. James Percival Cullen, of the 93rd Batt., had been wounded, and had been admitted to the Second Scottish Hospital, Edinburgh, on April 10th, with a gunshot wound in the neck, and a fracture of the arm. His father had a letter from him on Tuesday and he was then well.

UNION WILL DIVIDE

Such is the Opinion of Veteran Presbyterian Missionary

EDMONTON, Alta., April 25.—The veteran missionary, Rev. Hugh M. Kellar, Calgary, speaking at the Presbyterian Church Association Conference meeting, expressed what he believed would be the outcome of the agitation for church union in Canada. He said: We must be prepared to see the Presbyterian Church divided. The more I have seen and read in the last ten years strengthens my opinion in this matter, and perhaps it will not be a bad thing if this division does come, for it will permit the Presbyterian Church, as it was originally constituted, to continue to be a force in Canadian life, though reduced in extent and membership. I only hope a change can come without fighting and without bitterness. Many of those who leave us go with our blessing, and may we have theirs."

FINE DECORATING.

Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons, who so beautifully decorated the Armories for the show, are being given lots of praise for the splendid manner in which they handled all the arrangements of the booths and hung the flags, bunting, signs, etc.

The Sturgeon Motor Sales have the famous Briscoe autos on exhibition, comprising five cars. This car is made in all styles and finish.

The Ontario Government has a very interesting exhibit of sample road work, which will no doubt attract no little attention from the municipal authorities as well as the motorists.

The Peterboro Auto Association have an office fitted up where applications will be received for membership.

THE TEA ROOM

Visitors to the show are reminded that the ladies of the Red Cross Society have fitted up the Recreation Room into a beautiful tea room, where tea, cakes, coffee, etc., will be served every afternoon and evening. This evening the room will be in charge of Mrs. John Allan, Mrs. Roland Denne, and Mrs. Reg. Turner.

Mr. T. F. Matthews, the president of the society, was busy here and there seeing that everything was in proper shape for the opening.

The Heintzman Co. have a special exhibit of victrolas, which are dispensing music for the entertainment of the visitors.

The Bell Telephone Co. put in a pay station at the old Dental Office for the convenience of the citizens attending the show. The money taken in will go to swell the funds of the Red Cross.

Praise the Ladies

Mayor Duffus praised the ladies for the assured success of Peterboro's first auto show. He was pleased that it was such a success, as it augured well for the commencement of the Greater Peterboro movement. The possibility of the city having a population of 30,000 on its one hundredth anniversary was dwelt on by the Mayor.

Loud applause greeted the announcement that the show was opened.

OBITUARY

MICHAEL POWERS

The funeral of the late Michael Power took place at Lindsay this morning to St. Mary's Church and the Roman Catholic Cemetery.

In his passing the town loses one of its best known citizens, a man of splendid character and one who won the esteem and respect of a wide circle of acquaintances throughout the district.

The deceased, who was in his 68th year, was born in Peterboro. Before coming to Lindsay some thirty-five years ago, he resided in Omemee. For a great many years deceased was employed with the late John Bery, harness maker, and after his death took over the business, which he conducted until his death.

The late Mr. Powers is survived by his sorrowing wife, one daughter, Nettie, of Lindsay, two sons, William, of Pittsburg, and Edward, of Toronto, and five brothers, Messrs. Pierce, of Hastings; T. H., of Chicago; John, of Rochester; Thomas, of Lancaster, N.H.; Edward, Portland, Maine. One sister, Mrs. Twitchell, of New Hampshire, pre-deceased him.

PREMIER BELIEVES SUB. CAMPAIGN IS BEATEN AND VICTORY IS NEAR

Optimistic Speech by Lloyd George Tells of Reverses in Early Stages of War and How Tide Has Turned---Success Achieved With Losses Comparatively Light.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, April 27. — In his speech at the Guildhall today Lloyd George, referring to the early darker days of the war, said:

"Before June, 1915, we lost eighty-four guns and a considerable number of prisoners. Now, thank God, we have a real chance in the fight. Since that date we have captured four hundred guns and lost not one. Of prisoners, we have taken ten to every one captured by the enemy. Victory is coming increasingly nearer. During the first eighteen days of the Arras battle we captured 18,000 men and 230 guns and gained four times as much ground as in the battle of the Somme. This means not only ultimate victory; it means victory is going to be won at much less loss. Our chances are growing as our equipment improves, and the Germans know it. That is the explanation of the despair which has driven them to piracy on the high seas."

Germany's ruthless submarine war, the Premier said, had cost England many ships, but it had brought America into the war, and he was perfectly satisfied with the bargain thus struck. America is now definitely with the Allies to put down this menace once and for all. The best brains of England and America are now concentrated on this problem. No human problem was ever insoluble, but the people of Britain must proceed on the assumption that nothing would be discovered to put it down and employ the necessary economies.

He outlined the steps already taken by which 11,000,000 tons of imports would be cut off, and added that the shipping controller had made arrangements by which Britain would get three times, perhaps four times, as many new ships this year as last.

"I am confident," he added, "that if our present program is carried out, the submarine campaign is beaten."

ARMORIES CROWDED WITH VISITORS TO MOTOR SHOW

Ladies of Red Cross Pleased With Patronage Extended by Citizens---Booths Do Lively Business.

The first day of Peterboro's first motor show has passed, and the Ladies of the Red Cross as well as the managing committee are more than satisfied with results. There has been a good attendance in spite of the unfavorable weather.

The exhibitors are having lots of chances to demonstrate the relative merits of their cars, as there seems to be prospects in plenty.

The ladies in charge of the different booths are doing a thriving business in various lines. The visitor to the show has a slim chance of getting out without being persuaded to wear a rose-bud or a carnation on his way home. Then there are the ladies looking after the drawings for the different articles that have been donated towards the funds of the society. Last night's drawing was vey successful, and this evening, a Dominion Tire, a set of Dominion Chains, and an electric lamp, given by Grant and Thorpe will be the prizes to be drawn for.

The ladies of the refreshment room are kept busy attending to the wants of a great many customers.

The Tea Room

The tea room was well patronized, and the ladies were delighted to have been kept busy. Madames Allan,

CITY NOW IN DANGER OF AN EPIDEMIC OF RABIES

Dog That Bit Two Persons, One of Whom Died Was Suffering From That Disease---Canine Quarantine May be Ordered.

"A mad dog is likely to go anywhere," remarked Health Officer Amys to The Review, and there are dogs enough in the city to infect the entire province with rabies.

A short time ago Eddie Saxby, a young boy, was bitten by a dog, and died. Dr. Amys had the animal shot and sent its head to the health authorities in Toronto, where an analysis revealed the fact that the dog was suffering from hydrophobia. Before the dog had been killed it had bitten its owner, Mr. Cole Barrett, Cedar street, and preventative measures will be taken in his case.

There seems to be a hydrophobia scare general all over the province, and the public are warned to take careful note of their own dogs and those of their neighbors, watching for symptoms of the ailment. Any person bitten can receive the specific required in the treatment free of cost from the health authorities. This medicine is supplied by the Provincial Government, as it has been held that it is not necessary for the victim of a dog bite to attend a Pasteur institute in order to escape the consequences.

The Canine of Luxury.

The dog of a certain rich man in this city, a finely bred and high priced terrier, fared sumptuously every day. It was petted and coddled, wore a blanket in cold weather, but even this care did not protect it from canine ills. It fell sick and was treated by the highest veterinary skill, but all to no purpose. One day it disappeared, and its whereabouts remain a mystery. The suspicion prevails that it, too, may have developed a case of rabies, and if this is so the dog is a menace to the community if still alive.

Dr. Amys has taken the matter up with Mayor Duffus and Chief Thompson, and it may be decided in the interests of public safety to order the quarantine of all dogs in the city until the danger passes.

The matter was regarded as so serious by the health department at Toronto, that Dr. Moynihan, the Dominion veterinary surgeon, came to Peterborough to investigate.

LLOYD GEORGE FOR HOME RULE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, April 27. — In an important speech at the Guildhall today Premier Lloyd George discussed the military situation, the Irish question, and other of the major problems with which the Government is now engaged. The Premier's speech was in acknowledgment of the conferring on him of the freedom of the city of London. Referring to Ireland the Premier said: "We must convert Ireland from a suspicious, surly and dangerous neighbor to a cheerful, loyal comrade. The settlement of the Irish question is essential to the peace of the world and essential to speedy victory in the war. I appeal to the patriotism of all men to sink everything for the one purpose of getting this question out of the way."

Will Form Trade Compact Against the Enemy Nations

Imperal Conference Agrees That Interest of Allies Must be Considered in Post-War Commercial Agreements.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, April 27. — The Imperial Conference, in session in this city for some time and in which all the overseas dominions are represented, Sir Robert Borden appearing for Canada, has finally reached a decision which was announced by Bonar Law in the Commons today.

There is to be at least a measure of preferential trade between the central portion of the empire and the colonies, the produce and manufactures of which are to be admitted on favorable terms.

It is distinctly understood, however, that due regard must be had to the interests of the nations helping the Empire in the conflict with Germany. There must be no discrimination against the Allied Powers, but all must be included in the new trade agreement on the same terms as the overseas dominions. This will apply, of course, to the United States. The decision practically means a preferential trade compact taking in all the nations now arrayed against Germany as well as any that may later come to the aid of the Allies.

Bonar Law announced that there will be no change in the fiscal policy of the Empire so long as the war is in progress. In any event, no duty will be placed on foodstuffs imported into England. Russian and Roumanian wheat will be admitted on the same terms as the grain from Canada, Australia or India.

The Conference, in short, plans to form a trade league against the nations that have upset the affairs of the world in the last three years.

WOMAN AND MAN KILLED WHEN HUN DESTROYERS OPEN FIRE ON RAMSGATE

Land Batteries Beat Back Murderous Craft---Two Lives Lost, Others Injured and Houses Damaged by Enemy's Force---British and French Still Gain on Land.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, April 27. — German destroyers bombarded Ramsgate last night and fired a large number of shells, but were driven off by the land batteries. An official statement by Lord French says the damge and casualties occasioned by the enemy during the bombardment are one man and one woman killed and one man and two women injured. Damage was done to twenty-one dewlling houses and two stables, and one horse was killed. A large number of projectiles fell in the open conutry.

MORE POSITIONS TAKEN.

LONDON, April 27. — Important positions between Roeux and Gavrelle and near Arras have been captured by the British, the war office announced today.

TURKS STILL FALLING BACK.

LONDON, April 27. — There has been a further retirement of the Turks in Mesopotamia for a considerable distance north of Samara, recently captured by the Britsh, General Maude reports. The thirteenth Turkish corps is entrenching in the foothills of the Jebel Hamrin region between the Tigris and Diala, where the British are in touch with it.

SPAIN READY FOR WAR.

PARIS, April 27. — Marquis Prieto declares in an interview that Spain cannot adopt neutrality when its honor and interest are involved, and that the administration is prepared to support the vigorous note regarding submarine warfare sent to Germany by its predecessor.

STRIKE IMMINENT IN GERMANY.

COPENHAGEN, April 27. — All the German newspapers today indicate a deep and widespread apprehension that a revival of last week's strike movement is imminent.

FOE DROP RIFLES AND FLEE.

LONDON, April 27. — The British during the night captured quarries on the eastern outskirts of Hargicourt. The enemy made a minor unsuccessful attack last night against our positions in the neighborhood of Fayet, northwest of St. Quentin. His troops were driven off with loss after sharp fighting, and he left a number of prisoners in our hands.

The enemy fled hurriedly, abandoning rifles and equipment.

Other successful local operations were made by us in the neighborhood of the Arras-Cambraid road and on the spur between Roeux and Gavrelle. Important enemy positions were captured by us at both points.

Northwest of Lens a German raiding party was caught by our machine gun fire and it failed to reach our trenches.

KEEP UP BOMBARDMENT.

LONDON, April 27. — The British troops on the Macedonian front, says an official announcement, have maintained their steady bombardment of the positions of the Central Powers.

SHOT AND SHELL GREATEST IN HISTORY.

LONDON, April 27. — It is announced today that the British expenditure of shells of six-inches and upwards during the first week of the offensive which opened April 9th was nearly twice that of the first week of the Somme offensive last year, while the expenditure of such shells during the second week was six and one-half times that of the second week on the Somme. The expenditure of gun ammunition during the second week of the Arras battle was the greatest ever known in history, it is said.

MANY PERSONS REPORTED KILLED IN EARTHQUAKE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, April 27. Many persons are reported killed in a violent earthquake in Tuscany and Umbria on Thursday morning, according to an Exchange Telegraph Company's despatch from Rome.

DENIES CHARGE; SENT TO JAIL TO AWAIT TRIAL

OMEMEE MAN ARRESTED IN PICTON IS REMANDED.

At Lindsay yesterday County Magistrate Moore remanded to jail Walter McQuade, who, it is alleged, seriously assaulted his uncle in Omemee about two weeks ago.

The prisoner, who had been brought back from Picton, denied the charge, stating that he did not have any trouble in the village since last fall.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, APRIL 27, 1917

THE AUTO PARADE.

WHEN THE CITIZENS of Peterborough set out to do anything of a civic nature, social or otherwise, they invariably score a success just as they did in the auto parade last evening. No finer spectacle of the kind was ever witnessed in Ontario. All the cars were spick and span and the decorations of some of them were certainly above the average. The parade was a splendid advertisement of the wealth and progressive spirit which is sure to make this city the Greater Peterborough planned by its enterprising residents.

CAPT. WIDDIFIELD REVERTS.

OCCASIONALLY the glory of the Canadian military service is brightened by some officer who makes a sacrifice of ambition and position that he may render his country a service. Capt. Widdifield has reverted in rank in order to get to the front. Other Peterborough men who have gone overseas have followed this illustrious example and today may be lying wounded in hospital or stark and white on the battlefield.

To revert in rank means not only giving up a position, but implies a surrender of other privileges in the matter of a pension in the event of disability. The higher the rank, the bigger the allowance from the Government. But the true soldier does not stop to concern himself with monetary considerations. With him, the welfare of the Empire is supreme.

Capt. Widdifield's friends in this city will be proud of the step that he has taken. All will unite in the hope that his life may be spared in the hazardous duties for which he has twice volunteered, and will share the conviction that before the war is over he will in actual service attain a higher rank than the one he so unselfishly surrendered.

The Empire needs men, and shoulder straps won in schools of theory or in training camps are not essential.

HOLE-IN-THE-WALL MEETINGS.

TWO OR THREE times a week, at a moderate estimate, there is in some out-of-the-way place a meeting of so-called temperance workers whose immediate object is to take steps to coerce the Dominion Government into adopting a measure providing for nation-wide prohibition. These meetings are in no sense representative. Some of them are held in rooms which cannot even in an emergency accommodate more than half a dozen persons with anything like comfort.

A census of these present reveals the fact that they are invariably well-known workers in the interests of the Liberal party. Sometimes the presence of a member of the ministerial association lends an air of prestige and neutrality to the gathering.

The object of these discussions is obvious. The political workers are out to embarrass the Government. They realize that an election is pending and that it is possible to prejudice the temperance voters against the party in power by attempting to force the Administration into adopting a course that these workers themselves are surely at least convinced would not be regular. There are certain lawyers identified with the temperance movement in this riding. It will be noticed that none of these cares to risk his professional reputation by taking sides against Minister of Justice Doherty and other legal authorities.

The Ontario Temperance Act is working out satisfactorily. The friends of the measure, even the political workers themselves, agree that to make the Act more rigid would simply tend to defeat the object in view by turning a certain element against it. Why, then, should they insist that the Dominion do what it has been deemed inadvisable for the Province to enact?

The present prohibitory low was adopted without a suspicion of politics. Members of both parties unitel in a petition to the Legislature for war-time prohibition. They got what they asked for by the unanimous action of the representatives in Toronto. It would certainly be unfortunate if the old political controversy is revived at this stage by a set of men who are intent on nothing quite so much as the success of the party to which they belong. A few men cannot assume to represent the sentiments of the temperance people or to dictate the policy to b adopted in this most important of all questions now before the public. Let the people themselves decide. They can be trusted to do so without anything like coercion from a handful of self-seekers who hold conferences in secret.

AN EDITOR'S SUIT OF CLOTHES.

THE EDITOR of the Bowmanville Statesman, being minded to fit himself with spring garb in keeping with his profession, sent to a Toronto mail order house for samples of suits for which you send your measure and are asked to believe that they are manufactured according to the latest models. About twenty-five samples were received, varying in hue from the sombre to the multiplicity of tints that made Joseph's coat famous. The editor would have none of them, and let us hope he has before this been fitted out to his perfect satisfaction by some local dealer who patronizes his advertising columns. Do unto other as you would have others do unto you is as good a rule for the newspaper man as for any other individual.

The samples received from Toronto promised a cheap outfit. This is easily explained. They represented goods that had been, no doubt, rejected by the elect customers in the big city. The cloth that these refused to buy was considered good enough to work off on unsophisticated country editors and other denizens of the timbers intent on acquiring something on easy terms. We are glad that the fastidious guiding genius of the Statesman did not fall for the little game. No doubt he is more set than ever in his purpose to do his utmost to build up his home town, and no better plan to this end has ever been devised than dealing with the local merchants and receiving in return anything in the way of patronage that they have to offer.

Goods received from a mail order house may be cheap, but, like the suit of clothes offered our friend the editor, these goods are likely to be rejects such as our home merchants occasionally offer at special sales and below cost price in order to clear their shelves. Buying goods from one of these outside institutions is like purchasing a pig in a poke, a commercial transaction that is no longer in favor among the financially prudent. There is no saying what you get until the bag is opened. Even if the latter is thrown in with the purchase, the chances are that the entire venture will prove a losing one. There is nothing like investigation before concluding a bargain.

MOTHER SHIPTON'S PROPHECY.

MOTHER SHIPTON, who flourished, according to the record, in the sixteenth century, lives in history as a prophetess, not for any success she achieved in that line, but rather by reason of a stupendous failure in predicting the end of the world. Her famous couplet, which ran,

"The world to an end shall come
In eighteen hundred and eighty-one," is still remembered. That year came and went, and the old world is making its diurnal and yearly revolution as usual, even in spite of a war that extends from end to end of its boundaries.

Mrs. Shipton's mistake was in failing to allow herself sufficient latitude. When she pinned her prophecy down to a particular date, she accomplished her own professional undoing. The wise weather forecaster of the present age may predict rain, but is careful not to set the time. The political seer talks of the halcyon days when Ireland will have home rule and the churches of Christendom will be united, but does not go beyond glittering generalities. Almost anything is likely to happen, provided sufficient time is allowed for the event.

The prophets of local reputation who predict the end of the world avoid the mistake made by Mrs. Shipton, and cautiously refrain from setting a particular year in the calendar in which the event is to transpire.

It may yet be established that Mother Shipton did not altogether lack the gift of foretelling what the future had in store. Someone has unearthed another metrical prophecy from the same source, and this runs as follows:

"When pictures look alive with movements free,
When ships, like fishes, swim below the sea,
When men, outstripping birds, can scour the sky,
Then half the world deep drenched in blood shall die."

We have the movies, and the submarine, and men are flying through the air at a rate that behooves the eagle to look to its laurels. And at least half the world is drenched in blood as it never has been before.

NO ELECTION FOR BRITAIN.

"THIS IS NOT THE TIME to talk of convictions which divide us."—Rt. Hon. David Lloyd George.

"An election at the present time would paralyze Britain's efforts in the war."—Rt. Hon. Andrew Bonar Law.

"The task we have on hand is too formidable to permit of any distraction of mind or dispersion of energy by the nation. All other considerations must give way to the supreme necessity of united effort."—Manchester Guardian (Liberal).

"Any public man who at this moment nourishes any thought except that of waging war against the enemy by the most effective means should never be forgiven by his countrymen."—Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill.

MOTHER OF FOUR CHILDREN

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Kept Her Well and Strong.

Lincoln, Illinois.—"I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for ten years with good results and I have four healthy children. This summer I was in a very run down condition and the very hot weather seemed more than I could stand, but I commenced taking your Compound in June and from then until September 25th, when my last baby was born, I got along much better than I had before. My baby was a girl and weighed 14 pounds at birth, and I recovered very rapidly which I am sure was due to your medicine. I am well and strong now, nurse my baby and do all my work. I had the same good results with your medicine when needed before my other children came and they are all healthy. My mother has taken your medicine with equal satisfaction. She had her last child when nearly 44 years old and feels confident she never would have carried him through without your help, as her health was very poor."—Mrs. T. F. CLOYD, 1355 North Gulick Ave, Decatur, Ill.

Expectant mothers should profit by Mrs. Cloyd's experience, and trust to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

VERY PLEASING MUSICAL COMEDY AT OPERA HOUSE

"STOP, LOOK, LISTEN" PRESENTED TO DELIGHTED AUDIENCE.

Peterboro Theatre-goers were given a real treat at the Grand Opera House last night, when Mr. Charles Dillingham's musical comedy, "Stop, Look, Listen," was presented to a large audience. The play was a joy maker from start to finish, and it is seldom an audience was so universally satisfied as at last night's presentation.

The beautiful scenery, the gorgeous costumes, to say the least, were marvels of creations, and the management made a strong hit by not having long waits. The singing and dancing were strong features of the production. The music was very catchy, and the music-lovers will be humming new ditties this morning. There was hardly a poor number on the long programme of specialties, but a few that made decided hits would not be lessening the tone of the others. "I love to dance," "Father wanted me to learn a trade," "The girl on the magazine," "I love a piano," "The Hula Hula," "A pair of ordinary Coons," "Take off a little bit more" and "Oozum's little Snoozums is Oo," seemed to be the favorites. The Chorus was a large one, good looking and able to dance, while there was an abundance of gorgeous gowns, the finest seen here this Winter.

The cast was a strong one, a remarkable feature about the company being its youth. The star of the company was Al B. White, who had the role of Abel Connon, a press agent. He was the mainstay of the company and its only comedian. His clean and refined comedy was good, and his specialty number was very clever. He made a big hit with his songs. The leading female part was in the capable hands of Leona Thompson, who could both sing and dance. The principal dancers were Alton and Allen, who twice in the programme contributed specialty dances. In a "Pair of ordinary Coons" and "The Village Sheriff," their wonderful entertaining qualities were strong. They were about the best pair of dancers that have appeared before the footlights in many moons and did some eccentric work which won for them hearty applause. George M. Smith in his Scotch specialty, impersonating Harry Lauder, made a big hit with his rendition of "Roaming in the Gloaming" and "Wee Deoch and Dorris."

TO PLACE WOMEN ON VOTERS'S LIST

FULL INSTRUCTIONS GIVEN AS TO METHOD OF PROCEDURE.

In preparing the new voters' lists in cities and in county or district towns having a population of 9,000 or over, only one list is to be prepared and that for use at municipal elections only and not for elections to the Assembly. The list will include every person, resident or non-resident, 21 years of age and a British subject, assessed as owners, tenants or for incomes. The list will not be divided into parts, but will be in the form given in the schedule to the Voters' Lists Amendment Act.

Regarding the inclusion of the names of women voters, questions as to whether or not the person named is a British subject by birth or by virtue of her own naturalization, or the naturalization of her husband, are to be anticipated by the designations "M.W." (married woman), "W." (widow, or "S." (spinster). Where a married woman has given notice to the clerk under the Women's Municipal Franchise Act, her husband is entitled to be entered on Part 1 or Part 2 of the voters' list, and the wife's name will not appear on either part, but she may be entered on the list to be prepared under the Ontario Franchise Act as entitled to vote at elections to the Assembly.

A woman whose name has been omitted from the assessment roll or voters' list and who possesses the necessary qualifications on the last day for giving notice of appeal has the same right of appeal as a man and may be entered on the roll or list.

Regarding aliens, the instructions of the Attorney-General's Department are that the names of any person marked by the assessor upon the assessment roll as being an alien must not be entered upon the voters' list.

The car-loving public are appreciating the fact that the company's factory is so conveniently situated for affording quick and efficient service. This, coupled with the reputation the McLaughlin Co. has always borne for manufacturing first-class products and giving the purchaser a square deal, has assured the popularity of their cars, as evidenced by increased sales. In Mr. Brown's one year's management of the local garage, sales in Peterborough and vicinity have increased 283 per cent, while the company's total business growth in 1916 over 1915 shows 75 per cent. increase.

LOWE BROTHERS HIGH STANDARD PAINTS

These paints of proven performance show their quality by their looks, life and wear. Results have proved their certain economy.

HIGH STANDARD saves money now and next time. It saves money "now" because a gallon covers more surface than a gallon of cheaper paint. You will need fewer gallons of HIGH STANDARD. It spreads easier enabling your painter to do a better job in less time.

It saves money "next time" because HIGH STANDARD is a long-wearing paint. You don't need to paint so often. And when after years of service it has gradually worn away, it leaves a good surface for repainting. This means saving of time and material.

Great Crowd Expected

A great crowd is expected tomorrow, and many inquiries have been received from neighboring towns as to the hour of closing.

If you have not seen the show go tonight or tomorrow. The exhibit of cars is the finest, and the Peterboro dealers are real proud of the showing.

A BRILLIANT PARADE

Procession of Autos Last Night Was Brilliant Spectacle.

The auto parade last night was a huge success not only in the number of the automobiles in the line-up, but in the great interest that was shown in it by the citizens generally. Short after seven oclock the motors started to arrive at the market square, later on the large auto trucks, gaily decorated and arranged with chairs, arrived to convey the bands on the trip through the city.

Chief Thompson had his men well instructed, and as soon as the leaders, Messrs. T. F. Matthews and E. G. Patterson were in place with their cars the procession started west on Charlotte, and completed the route outlined in the program of the Peterboro Automobile Clubb.

Just how many cars there were in the parade it is hard to estimate, but it was well up in the hundreds.

BANNER YEAR FOR "OVERLAND"

Scores of Peterborough city and district purchasers of the Overland Automobile are sufficient endorsation that this car is of extraordinary value for the money invested in it. It never fails to give the fullest measure of satisfaction both in cost of maintenance, service and life, and every car sold is a sure winner of increased sales. Under the energetic and efficient management of Mr. C. R. Banks, the genial and popular Peterborough sales agent, this car has secured a substantial grip on the local market, which bespeaks for it a steady growth in high-class patronage and popularity. Mr. Banks, by the way, is a veteran automobile dealer, having taken up with this business in the United States in 1899. He also enjoys an enviable record as a Canadian motor car salesman of exceptional experience, motor mechanical skill and scientific knowledge. These facts are sufficient guarantee that his selection of a car for handling by him is a guarantee that the machine is of high grade.

The exhibit of five Overlands at the Motor Show is a credit not only to Mr. Banks but to this community. The cars in their appearance reflect their continent-wide reputation for solidity, comfort, speed and durability. They are attracting flattering attention, which keeps the attendants busy in demonstrating their numerous appreciable and appealing points. The supreme "Willys-Knight" is the choice of royalty.

This is a banner year for the Overland, recommended as the best value for its price in the world. Three thousand five hundred highly skilled employees engaged in meeting the Overland's ever-growing demand, while a marvellous selling organization gives courteous attention to owners.

A visit to Mr. Banks' garage on Charlotte street will create a surprise at its size and modern efficiency in equipment, to say nothing of the number and variety of the famed Overland cars on hand. An all-night service is here being inaugurated whereby cars left in at night can be washed while you sleep, and delivered in the morning.

SEE ELECTRA AT MOTOR SHOW

When at the Motor Show do not miss seeing the demonstration of Electric Ranges by Alexander & Miller. The Electric Range has become as popular as the motor, gives pleasure to the cook and the family. After a long drive, think of what it means to be able to come home to a good meal on the hottest day, and know that in preparing same neither you nor the cook has to suffer over a red hot stove.

The Electric Range gives heat only where required. Produces no soot, smoke, grease or odor. Needs no blackening to keep it in perfect condition; does not blacken up the pots and pans. Why not have this comfort by installing "The Sunshine of the Home," Moffat's Electra?

The manufacturer's representative is in attendance and will be pleased to meet any prospective purchaser. Although prices have advanced this week, we intend to hold the former prices until the end of the show. The representative also informs us that the Electric Range is in the same class as the Automobile inasmuch as the output for the year is practically sold.

Do not delay purchasing your Electra.

At The Motor Show

(By H. W. KIPP)

My wife said to me: "Go, buy us a car,
I'm tired of the street cars and walking's too slow;
We've travelled through life together so far,
And the joys of an auto we never did know."

So I answered friend wife: "What car will I get?
There's nothing of autos that I really know."
She winked at me, and said: "I will bet
You can make up your mind at the big motor show."

Forthwith to the auto show I repaired;
The cars, all aglitter with polish and shine,
Glistened and glimmered until I despaired
Of being able to say: "That one for mine."

I asked a good fellow: "How much for this bird?"
He chewed on his gum and shifted his cud—
"Of twelve thousand dollars I ask just a third."
Twelve thousand stars, and I fell with a thud.

I was grabbed by the coat and held by the neck,
Dizzy and dazed, and waving my hand;
Another slick gent, with a diamond, by Heck!
Says: "Come, let me show you an Overland."

Then a good fellow, who pitied my plight,
And realized what a hole I was in,
Fixed on me an eye that was bright,
And murmured, "Can't I sell you a McLaughlin?"

"Not so sudden," says I to this well-wishing sport,
"There are others around that look good to me,
There's the Chevrolet, Willys, the Dodge, and Gray-Dort,
The Studebaker, Grant, and husky Packard."

I came to a place where they sold motorbikes;
The Indian was the name it was called;
It was red, and it sure did look businesslike—
With a motor like that, one could never be stalled.

The question arose: a six or a four,
An eight or electric, or velvety twelve,
In my poor, misty brain I sure had to delve.

I am usually sober, and have a clear brain,
And head work, I thought, was always my forte;
But where my "bean" was there was only a pain,
So I reached for my hip and took a good snort.

That Cadillac sure was a classy to see,
The Grant and the Chalmers, the Mitchell as well;
Then turning around I saw a Maxwell.

This brought me back to earth with a thud;
The price was a serious item, you know,
The Chevrolet, Saxon, the Metz, and the "Stud,"
And 'way over there I saw a Briscoe.

My brain was a halo of gear shifts and springs,
Heat treated, full floating, gold plated chassis;
Timken rear axles and "do funny" things:
I was groggy and felt I had ball-bearing knees.

My condition was critical and plain to the eye,
When sudden to me through the crowd there bored,
With a beam in his eye, said a smart-looking guy,
"Come on, here you are, let me give you a FORD."

Special Committee Draw up Rules for Government of Children's Shelter---Not a Foundling's Home or Boarding House.

A special meeting of the Executive of the Children's Aid Society was held in the Bank of Commerce Chambers yesterday afternoon for the purpose of considering the report of the special committee appointed to deal with the admission of children to the Shelter in cases not covered by the Children's Protection Act.

There were present Madames W. Gibbs, W. Stocker, W. A. Sanderson, McElhiney, and Evans; Messrs Peck, Wearing, Parsons, Gordon, McElheney, Edgar, Spence, D. Thompson, Rev. R. G. Peever, and Mayor Duffus.

President E. A. Peck stated briefly that the committee had their report ready and called on Secretary Wearing to read it.

The report was as follows, and it was adopted with a few amendments:

EXECUTIVE'S REPORT.

Your committee appointed to submit draft resolutions defining the policy of the Society, beg to submit the following report containing such draft resolutions:

1. That no children be admitted to the Children's Shelter or be removed from there without a written order from the president and secretary, if present in the city. In the event of either of these officers being absent from the city the order shall be signed by the officer remaining and one other member of the executive. In the event of both the president and secretary being absent from the city, the order shall be signed by any other two members of the executive.

2. That, except in case of extreme urgency, children shall not be removed from any home without a warning to those in charge that such children will be removed unless conditions are improved; and that the agent shall employ all possible means in co-operation with the executive and other persons interested to persuade those in charge of the children to make conditions satisfactory; and that children shall only be removed as a last resort, and then only upon the order of members of the executive as set out in the clause next preceding; and that where, upon the recommendation of the president and secretary, it may be deemed necessary, prosecution shall be instituted against those in charge or responsible for the care of neglected children.

3. That it be distinctly understood that the Shelter is not a foundling home or a boarding house; but it is also to be understood that each case of a neglected child or children shall be decided on its merits irrespective of age, as set out in the two clauses next preceding.

4. That no children shall be allowed to go into any foster homes until forms of recommendation have been filled out and signed by reputable people living in the neighborhood of those wishing to adopt children; and that in each case a written agreement shall be drawn up and signed by the person or persons adopting any children.

5. That the agent shall give a full report each month at the regular meeting of the executive, stating full particulars of his work during the month and giving details as to his visits, and any other matters likely to be of interest to the executive.

6. That the superintendent of the Shelter shall be required to fill in forms supplied to her, giving the following particulars each month with regard to the children at the Shelter: Names, approximate ages, dates of admission and removal, changes of personnel during the month, health, school attendance, etc., and that such monthly report shall be furnished to the secretary each month in time to be read at the regular monthly meeting of the executive.

7. That the foregoing resolutions are subject to the Children's Protection Act of Ontario.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

E. A. Peck, Rev. R. G. Peever, Mrs. Walter Stocker, Mrs. W. H. Gibbs, E. L. Goodwill, Jo. Wearing.

LAID AT REST.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Thos. Jamieson took place Wednesday afternoon to the Little Lake Cemetery. The pallbearers were the six grandsons: Messrs. Ernest, James and John Tennyson, of Toronto, Melville and Albert Tennyson, and Wilbert Mein, of this city. The floral tributes were numerous, including a beautiful pillow from the T. Eaton Co., Toronto.

of the committee, and every one seemed satisfied that the regulations as drawn were good and for the best interests of the society.

Chief Thompson thought that as long as the agent of the society and the executive worked harmoniously, that there would never be the slightest dispute as to authority to do certain things.

The resignation of Mr. C. A. G. Spence, as agent of the society, was not dealt with, and it will not come up till the second Tuesday in May, the date of the regular meeting.

Penny Bank Candle a Waste of Tallow

TORONTO SCHOOL BOARD ATTEMPT TO EFFECT SAVING.

At a special meeting of the penny bank sub-committee of the Toronto board of education the question of how to best curtail the present expense in connection with the collections and the working of the penny bank in the schools was discussed. The committee reported that as a result of an investigation in the six schools who are now using the envelope system, it is of the opinion that this is the best that can be adopted. Inspector Cowley pointed out that this system will involve the work of seven or eight clerks. The total cost of the envelopes for these six schools is $109, and it was stated that for the total schools in the city the cost will be about $1,375. Altho in accord with the idea of the penny bank, Trustee Noble said that in his opinion "the candle is not worth the tallow," and stated that with the time now taken up in the schools by various items not in the school curriculum there is very little left for the ordinary work.

LOCK UP THE DOG

Dr. C. H. Amys, Medical Health Officer, wishes to notify the public that where anyone is bitten by a dog, not to have the animal destroyed, but to lock it up until such time as it can be ascertained whether it had rabies or not. If it is necesary to immediately destroy the dog, save the head so that it can be sent to Toronto for examination.

Where it is suspected that an animal has the rabies it will develop them in a very few days after bebing locked up.

THE Y.W.C.A. EXHIBITION

G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., as president of the Y. M. C. A., extended a hearty welcome to the members of the Y. W. C. A., who gave a splendid exhibition in the gymnasium of the former place last evening. There were 160 girls in all in the various parts, and the entertainment ran smoothly from start to finish, every pupil taking her role perfectly. No prompting by the physical director was required throughout the entire evening, and as usual it was the juniors whose excellent work was most admired and heartily applauded.

The processional march of the massed classes, with which the program opened, showed the care that had been taken in the training of the pupils, and every movement was a perfect illustration of military precision. The wand and dumbell exercises and the club-swinging demonstrated the value of physical training, and in all the dances those who took part wore appropriate and beautiful costumes, from the green of the Irish jigs to the bright tartan of the Highland fling.

One of the most pleasing numbers of the program was the military dance by the Saturday Morning juniors, the performers being resplendent in red, white and blue costume, which, with the poetry of the movements, made a picture which charmed the delighted audience. Another beautiful feature was the "Spring" Aesthetic Wands by the seniors in costume.

Beyond all question little Eloise Mannell was the star of the evening in her "rose petal" dance, the audience insisting on an encore.

Piper Seaman supplied the Scottish music for the dance of his native land, and Miss Jeanette Killmaster rendered a number of solos.

The accompanists were Misses K. Thorndyke, M. Penrose, and Winnifred Parker, the latter the assistant secretary of the Association.

Mrs. J. M. Douglas, the secretary, and Miss Caroline Littlefield, physical director, whose faithful and efficient work was demonstrated by the entire exhibition, are to be congratulated upon the success of their entertainment.

The Mothers' Club will give an entertainment in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium on the evening of May 11th to raise funds for the purchase of yarn for soldiers' socks.

The program of last night will be repeated this evening.

To Defend
Your Country

"An appeal is now made to the manhood of Canada for men to volunteer for home defence by joining the active militia."
SIR EDWARD KEMP, Minister of Militia and Defence.

CANADA

"A splendid response to these proposals is vitally necessary in order that the full strength of our Dominion in co-operation with the whole Empire shall be thrown into the struggle with the least possible delay."
SIR ROBERT BORDEN, Premier

Enlist For Service in Canada

He Who Does His Best, Does His Duty

Who will take the place of a trained soldier? To release for the Front the Overseas units held here, and to provide adequately for home defence, men are still needed.

So even though family ties forbid your answering the call to overseas service, you can release a trained soldier by enlisting in the

Canadian Defence Force

Enlist in defence of Canada. Get into Khaki. Make it possible to replenish the firing line in France and strengthen the Divisions whose capture of Vimy Ridge has thrilled all Canada.

Enlistment in the Canadian Defence Force is for one year—or for the period of the war and six months after if required. Clothing, equipment and rations provided as in the C. E. F. Pay the same as that for Militia on active service, with separation allowance for married men.

The call is for men between 18 and 45, physically fit and keen to serve.

For full particulars enquire at Armories of the Regiments listed below.

MEN STILL REQUIRED FOR OVERSEAS IN THE CANADIAN EXPEDITIONARY FORCES.
More men are required for reinforcements at the Front. Those who desire to volunteer for Overseas Service may enlist through one of the regiments ordered to mobilize for Home Defence.

SOCIALIST WAS FREE OF SPEECH

REICHSTAG IS ADJOURNED UNTIL MAY 2 AS A RESULT.

LONDON, April 26.—Adjournment of the Reichstag until May 2 after a brief session is reported in a Central News despatch from Amsterdam. Philip Scheidemann, Socialist leader, expressed regret that the Reichstag should be convoked and then adjourned almost immediately. George Ledebour, leader of the Social Democrats, said that regret was not enough. to demanded that the Reichstag should meet for discussion of the food problem.

"Thousands of workmen," he said, "have been forced to abandon work owing to their distress."

Herr Ledebour's words caused an uproar. Permission to continue his speech was refused.

HIGHER RAILWAY RATES

Necessary If Roads Are to Exist Says G.T.R. Chairman.

LONDON, April 27. — Presiding at the Grand Trunk meeting, Chairman Smithers said that if the railways were to continue to exist, higher rates must be charged. Manufacturers and farmers were all highly prosperous and could afford to pay more. The railways could not continue to expand their accommodation, on which the prosperity of the manufacturers and farmers depended in the long run.

RAINS HINDER IN EAST AFRICA

LONDON, April 27.—The present rainy season is the wettest experienced in German East Africa for the past nine years, and all active operations on a large scale are perforce suspended, says an official statement. In the Kilwa area, and especially in the Mandu valley, there has been considerable patrol activity. Recently a small patrol of our West African troops successfully ambushed an enemy force of two companies.

The Teutons have two and a quarter million men on the Russian front, but it is evident their real concern is with the western front.

NO CRIME TO SIT WHILE NATIONAL ANTHEM IS SUNG

But Chicago Judge Held That a Higher Than Human Law is Offended by Those Refusing to Stand.

City Solicitor Gordon says that when he was in Chicago with the city delegation that waited on the Quaker Oats Company he was struck by the patriotic spirit which possesses the American citizen. War talk was heard on all sides, and the pathway of the slacker is certainly a rocky one.

While the Peterboro representatives were in Chicago three young men were arrested on the charge of disorderly conduct. They had refused to stand when the National Anthem was sung at a public concert. One defendant, an Austrian by birth, told the judge he did not stand up because he did not want to.

"I do not believe in national patriotism," said another. "My interest is in international humanitarianism I was and am actuated by a higher ideal than mere love for country."

Judge Lashes the Youth

The Judge said to him:

"You say that you are an American born. You are not worthy to walk on the soil of the United States. Other boys are going out to give their lives for you and your mother and your sister, and you are staying home talking for a higher humanitarianism. My boy, patriotism is not something that is up in the stars; it is love of your own land."

The third's excuse was "I did not get up because I have no sympathy with this sort of thing, and don't believe in going to war," he said.

"Guilty In Eyes of Higher Law."

"There is only one class coming before me now that refuses to go to war," said the judge, "and that is the 'bums' and loafers. You don't look to me like that kind, and I can't understand why you should take such an attitude. You are not guilty in the eyes of the law, but in the eyes of something even higher you are guilty. I can do nothing to you except point out to you that you have been discourteous and unmanly. Now, get out of here, boys."

"MOVIES" FOR THE SCHOOLS

Moving pictures in the Toronto schools were endorsed by the management committee, and the report of the special committee will be sent on to the Board of Education. The report recommends that machines that have the endorsation of fire underwriters be secured as soon as possible.

ELEVEN VACANCIES NOW

Senators may be Appointed when Premier Returns

OTTAWA, April 25.—The death this week of two Conservative Senators, Senator Baird, of New Brunswick, and Senator Corby, of Belleville, makes eleven vacancies in the upper house. Probably they will be filled immediately after the return of the Premier.

FIRST PENNY TO LAST DOLLAR

UNITED STATES IS READY TO SPEND EVERYTHING IN WAR.

NEW YORK, April 27.—As an official badge, a huge electric sign showing the Stars and Stripes, the Union Jack and Tricolor joined together in a bow and surmounted by the cap of liberty, will be placed atop the city city hall. A medal also is being struck, bearing on one side St. Gauden's conception of liberty, now used on $20 gold pieces, and on the other side the design of the Franklin penny, thus symbolizing that America is determined to stand by her allies "from the first penny to the last dollar."

STRIKE IS LIKELY.

G. T. R. Machinists May Walk Out Over the Entire System.

Following the mass meeting at Stratford, the trouble between the Grand Trunk motive power department and the International Machinists Union is becoming more serious and there is every prospect of a strike being called at an early date. The trouble arose over the recent discharging of three men in Stratford ford by W. D. Robb, the general superintendent, on account of them being active in the union, and unless these men are reinstated it is claimed there will be a general strike over the whole system. The demand is not only for the reinstatement of these men, but for an increase in wages from 37 cents to 45 cents per hour.

Just Temporarily.

There were ominous signs of a brewing storm in the midnight sleeper.

"Look here," thundered the man in the lower berth, "I want you to stop that snoring up there. Do you hear?"

"What's that?" mumbled the humorous fat man in the upper berth. "What am I doing?"

"Why, you are creating a disturbance by snoring like an elephant. If you can't be a gentleman everywhere you must be one while you are up there. Understand?"

The fat man chuckled softly.

"Oh, I see the point now."

"What point?"

"Why, you want me to be a gentleman by berth."

And the next moment he dodged an umbrella, two suit cases and six shoes. —Chicago News.

Belle—Yes, but it's generally bad.—Philadelphia Record.

Tuckin' 'Em In.

Tuckin' 'em in at night's the way;
Keeps us from lettin' our hair turn gray.
Kissin' good night to their lips of fun
Keeps us from spillin' the golden sun
Out of our hearts of the yesterday—
Tuckin' 'em, kissin' 'em one by one!

Tuckin' 'em in at night, you see,
Tuckin' 'em in is a heap to me,
Unto whose spirit the night has rolled;
Keeps us from gettin' so stiff and old
Hearin' their giggle of good night glee,
Smoothin' their ringlets of silken gold.

Tuckin' 'em in at night to dream
Bloomy meadows and silvery stream,
Romp and laughter and song and light—
Father in heaven, tuck me some night
Under the covers of star sown gleam
In the golden chambers beyond our sight.

Mock Pin Tucks.

For use on children's clothes, lingerie or fine blouses a good imitation of pin tucking may be obtained by machine stitching. It is necessary to use about a No. 8 thread in the bobbin and as fine a thread as 100 in the needle. Stitch the material on the wrong side, letting the coarse thread come on the right. It is this coarse thread which looks like the pin tuck, and it is ever so much easier to do. It might be a good idea to loosen the bobbin screw very slightly in doing this work.

Spanish Macaroni.

A meat substitute. Fry onions in a bit of butter and olive oil until brown; add a tablespoonful of Worcestershire sauce and a tablespoonful of chili powder. Put a half cupful of macaroni into boiling water, salted, and cook until tender, about twenty-five minutes. Place the drained macaroni in a buttered baking dish and pour the onions and half a can of tomatoes over it. Mix well and sprinkle with grated cheese. Bake a half hour in a moderate oven.

FOR BIRD LOVERS.

Hints About the Care of Your Canary Each Day.

Canary birds are a joy when they sing and such comfort for a homemaker when she is alone, but they surely make a great deal of muss. Most women find that the cages really should be cleaned every day and the floor under which they hang brushed at the same time. If several pieces of paper cut the shape of the bottom of the cage are used the cage will only have to be cleaned once a week.

Each day lift the top piece of paper out, and the next piece will be spotless. A good plan which bird lovers often use is to make a bag for the cage.

This bag may serve a double purpose if wanted. Make it long enough to fit the entire cage, so that it may be tied all over at night to protect the birdie from the glaring light and cold. In the day this same cover may be tied about the middle of the cage. It is held in place by a drawstring. This prevents the bird from throwing the seeds on the floor. Marquisette and dotted swiss are good materials for this purpose.

Mounts Furnished by Col H. C. Cox Were Not Gov. Property

SIR CHARLES DAVIDSON FINDS NO IRREGULARITIES IN CONTRACTS.

OTTAWA, April 2.—Sir C. Davidson deals in another report with allegations made at the investigation of horse purchases in Peel to the effect that Col. H. C. Cox, of Toronto, had presented fifty horses to the Government, that they were accepted but were rejected after having been for some time in use and that finally a dozen or more of them were sold to remount officers. Sir Charles finds that Col. Cox purchased fifty horses in the summer of 1914 and loaned them to the 9th Mississauga Horse, of which he was honorary colonel, and which went into camp in the hope of being able to send a mounted unit overseas. He finds that Aemilius Jarvis, in the same manner, provided 50 horses for the use of the Governor-General's Body Guards, of which he was hon. colonel. When the camps were broken up the horses were used by mounted overseas troops at the Exhibition Camp in Toronto. When these troops went abroad the animals were returned to Col. Cox and Col. Jarvis. As Col. Cox stated, some of the horses, which had cost on an average of $200 apiece, were sold to the Government buyers. Sir Charles finds that the horses placed at the disposal of the 9th Mississauga Horse by Col. Cox and those provided for the Governor-General's Body Guard by Col. Jarvis were never the property of the Government.

DRAPED SKIRTS.

The Peg Top Has Brought In Tassels and Jackets.

The really, truly newest yet in silhouette is that affected by the draped skirt, worn with flowing sleeves, ball tassel sash ends and wide spreading hat.

How this type of skirt is devised is interesting. It looks like a straight, rather narrow skirt, cut extra long, then just looped up on each side to shorten it to the required length, giving a puffed effect that somewhat resembles the barrel, the peg top, or whatever you care to call the side inflated appearance of some of the new skirts.

Tassels form the finish for the draping of these skirts, and the effect is really pleasing, especially when the fabric is one that drapes softly.

An interesting model of this type recently seen was a fine dress serge, decorated with a twelve inch banding of hand embroidery, done in a contrasting color, the tassels being of the embroidery color.

Following in the trend of the draped skirt is the flounce skirt, with a close fitting under or drop foundation. And then the long, tunic skirt, with flaring pockets on each hip.

Then there is the straight, gathered skirt, flaring at the hem; then a straight line skirt, not more than two yards and many times less than this, with a short, full tunic, either plaited or gathered.

Some straight skirts have a cute little apron tunic, plaited and set across the front of the skirt. Other straight skirts have an apron tunic effect back and front, the back apron being longer than the front.

Next comes, quite as a matter of course, the perfectly slim, straight skirt, close and trim and fashionably short, a fitting mate for the slim, straight jacket with which it is designed to be worn.

To Know Good Linen.

There are many persons who do not know how to distinguish between the two qualities of linens. A microscopic examination of the two qualities shows that the needle cutting through the chemically bleached linen leaves broken and ragged threads. A puncture of the needle in the grass bleached linen shows that the needle simply separates the threads by passing between them. In one case the threads are bent, and in the other the threads are broken. The fibers of the chemically bleached linens are uneven, brittle and inferior; the fibers of the grass bleached linens are practically unimpaired, so that when the needle is withdrawn and the cloth rubbed and pulled the threads of the latter resume their former position, and the cloth will be as good as ever.

PATCHWORK QUILT OF SILK.

One may start a silk patchwork quilt or a cotton one, but the former is easier to make because of the softness of the silk. Scraps cut from old dancing frocks of taffeta or satin in pastel colorings make very dainty quilts.

One charming quilt of this kind was evolved from a cast-off evening coat of pink faille in a delicate morning glory shade and a discarded dance frock of rose flowered peasy willow taffeta. The pattern was done in blocks, flowered and plain silks cut in triangles and the blocks joined with strips of pink satin ribbon. Such a quilt should be lined with plain colored thin silk and a sheet of cotton wadding laid between.

Hockey Trophy Travels East

ALTHOUGH sporting events have not received a great deal of attention in Canada during the past two years, the winning of the Allan Cup by the Toronto Dentals from the Victorias of Winnipeg did stir up a little excitement among people in the Dominion who are interested in the national sports. In the first place the Allan Cup, which represents the amateur hockey championship of Canada, and the Mann Cup, which represents the amateur lacrosse championship of Canada, are the two chief athletic trophies of the Dominion. They represent pre-eminence in Canada's own particular games. Both these cups went west several years ago, and it seemed as though no eastern team was ever going to be strong enough to bring them back. The winning of the Allan Cup may have broken the hoodoo, so think the young athletes of Ontario. Lastly the Dentals won the trophy in one of the most exciting struggles ever recorded in the history of Canadian hockey. They had a narrow squeak in the preliminary round, but got into the finals against the cup defenders. They won from the Victorias by a margin of three goals in the first game, but the second game finished with a score of 6 to 3, so that the round was tied. Then in a heart-breaking overtime period, the Dentals succeeded in scoring the goal that gave them the cup, which will now rest for the second time in Toronto.

It was in 1910 that an Ontario Hockey Association team first won the Allan Cup, and it is a matter of history that they did not lose it on the ice, and its departure to the west caused a sporting controversy that raged for a couple of years. The cup, wich was won and defended by the St. Michael's College team at the end of the season of 1909-10, after winning the Ontario Hockey Association championship, was not played for during the season of 1910-11 by the O.H.A. champions of that year, the Eaton Hockey Club of Toronto. The trustees ordered St. Michael's to defend the cup in February against the Victorias of Winnipeg. St. Michael's declined to play, and the trustees, after much correspondence, notified the O.H.A. that the cup had been awarded to Winnipeg. The O.H.A. disputed the authority of the trustees to make any such ruling or order, and retained possession of the cup, inviting the trustees to test the matter in the courts. As a matter of fact, St. Michael's failed to win their group, and if the Allan Cup games had been played as ordered it would not have been a test of the representative strength of the associations, nor would it have been fair to the Eaton team that subsequently won the championship. On December 5, 1911, the Allan Cup trustees withdrew the cup from competition, unconditionally, and the trophy was returned by the O.H.A. to the original donor, Sir Montague Allan, who gave it to the Winnipeg Victorias to defend.

The following is a brief history of the Allan Cup:

1908-9—Cup presented by Sir Montague Allan to Cliffsides of Ottawa, who were beaten by Queen's University team of Kingston.

1909-10—Queen's defended successfully against Cliffsides. St. Michael's of Toronto, O.H.A. champions, won the cup from Queen's. St. Michael's defended trophy at Toronto against Sherbrooke.

1910-11—Winnipeg Vics awarded cup by default, when O.H.A. refused to allow a team to play in middle of season. Vics defended cup against Kenora.

1911-12—Winnipeg Vics defended cup against Eaton's of Toronto, Calgary, and Regina.

1912-13—Winnipegs won championship from Victorias and defended cup against Moose Jaw and Edmonton.

1913-14 — Winnipeg Monarchs won championship of own league and beat Kenora in cup games, but lost cup to Regina, who successfully defended against Grand Mere.

1914-15—Melville won Saskatchewan championship and right to defend cup. They beat Victorias of Toronto, but were themselves beaten by Monarchs of Winnipeg, who had previously beaten Fort William and Edmonton.

1915-16—61st Battalion team of Winnipeg won championship from Monarchs and successfully defended the cup against Fort William and Regina.

1916-17 — Winnipeg Vics won Manitoba championship, defended cup against 141st Battalion team of Winnipeg. Dentals of Toronto, O. H. A. champions, beat Pilgrims of Saskatoon in elimination series. Dentals beat Winnipeg in finals by 13 to 12.

Although the lacrosse players of Ontario and Quebec will doubtless be cheered by the success of their hockey brothers, it is not likely that an attempt will be made to lift the Mann Cup until after the war. It was taken to the coast the second year after it was donated, and there it has remained. At the present time there are too many lacrosse players in khaki for the national summer game to prosper except among the juveniles. Last year the only lacrosse series were those organized in different parts of the Dominion for the small boys. It might also be mentioned that there was comparatively little hockey during the past winter, most clubs not having enough players to make a team. In fact many Canadians are beginning to feel that with their own national sports languishing on account of the war, it is not right that an imported, alien game, the American baseball, should alone had wartime prosperous.

SOME NEW USES FOR OATMEAL

Oatmeal contains all the constituents necessary for the maintenance of high bodily vigor. It is one of those foods, especially with the addition of milk and sugar, capable of supporting life for an indefinite time. Good oatmeal is highly nutritious and easily assimilated.

Many think of oatmeal only as a cereal for breakfast, yet many other kinds of dishes can be prepared from it. It also can be used as a thickening for soup, especially if there is any left over from plain boiled oatmeal.

Following are a few recipes for the use of this inexpensive food:

Oatmeal With Raisins, Dates or Figs.

1 cup oatmeal.
1 cup seeded raisins.
1 teaspoon salt.

Put the oatmeal on in three cups in boiling water, add salt. This should be started while getting dinner in top of double boiler; boil for one hour; leave it on range over night: in the morning bring to a boil; add the raisins which have been washed and dried, and for a change one can put them through the food chopper. It is economy to use raisins with the oats, as it will then take less sugar and save the stewed fruit for breakfast.

Molded Oatmeal With Fruit.

3 cups boiled oatmeal.
½ cup sugar.
2 cups canned, dried or stewed fruit.
1 teaspoon butter.

When boiling the oatmeal for breakfast make a double amount. To the half add the sugar. Brush bowl, mold or custard cups with melted butter, fill with the oatmeal and set in cold place. Turn out into shallow bowl or into individual dishes, cover with any kind of canned fruit, add sugar to taste; pour over or around the cold oatmeal. This makes a very good lunchen dessert, especially for children.

Oatmeal Pancakes.

1 cup coked oatmeal.
1 cup flour.
1½ cups milk.
2 eggs.
1 teaspoon salt.
2 teaspons baking powder.
1 tablespoon cooking oil or melted butter.

Rub the oatmeal until smooth, add the milk and yolks of eggs, salt and oil; beat for three minutes; then add flour and baking powder and stiffly beaten whites of eggs. Fry same as French pancakes or on hot, well-greased griddle. (This batter must be very thin.) Sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon.

THE BURNED POT.

When a kettle or stew pan burns the contents or boils dry, don't try to scrape off what was burned. Put in a lump of washing soda and add water enough to cover the botton and the sides as far up as the scorch extends. Boil gently until all the hard crust is loosened; then it will come off easily without injuring the enamel of the dish. Soda can be used in the same way to clean the coffee pot.

Cuff links presented to a Rhode Islanded covers the button holes completely and are joined outside cuffs around their edges.

ATE HORSEFLESH FOR BEEF

The story is told of a young city man, or "tenderfoot," who went "roughing it" with a party of western hunters, and who had an interesting if unpleasant experience as a result. It appears that game was not as plentiful as expected, and that after the party had been on the prairie for some two or three weeks the supply of food ran out and the hunters failed to make good with their rifles, there being absolutely nothing to bring down. Actual starvation stared the party in the face. One night when matters were at their worst, the young city man lay down, thoroughly exhausted and weak from lack of food. He slept heavily until morning, and awakened to the sound of a crackling fire and the odor of roasting meat. A buffalo had been "bagged," explained one of the party, just before day break.

Never suspecting anything, the young fellow ate the meat with the greatest relish. A week later, when the party had returned to civilization, he was informed that the juicy buffalo steak he had enjoyed so heartily was taken from the carcase of one of the horses which had been taken a distance from the camp and slaughtered. According to the story the tenderfoot promptly became ill, the mere thought of having eaten horse-flesh being so repugnant to his sensibilities. It is difficult for us in Canada to imagine making horse-flesh a regular article of diet. Yet in many European countries it is quite commonly used. Those who have tasted it say that it is sweeter than the flesh of cattle, and somewhat tougher. According to good authority a certain amount of horse-flesh is prepared for market and sent across from the United States to Europe every year for consumption there. Whether or not the war has interfered with this trade is not stated. It is even said that some of this meat found its way on to the tables of Americans, in the shape of sausage, and tinned meats, generally labelled "prime beef."

Chemical Tests Applied.

It is very difficult for even experts to detect the flesh of horses from that of cattle, except under chemical tests. One way is to determine the amount of "natural sugar," or glycogen, as it is called. The most reliable tests are made with the fat. Should the tinned "beef" have previously been employed as a draught animal and worn shoes, it will be found that the fat melts at a lower temperature than that of beef. Also the fat has a higher heat value when mixed with sulphuric acid, while it has what chemists call a higher iodin number.

This brings up the question of tinned and potted meats. Meat prepared in this way is very convenient when a "hurry up" meal is to be served, while at picnics it is almost invaluable. But the fact that the meat is so minced or spiced makes it difficult to determine just what it really is. It may be prime beef, or it may be something else, not necessarily horse-flesh, of course, but quite possibly a quality of meat which a careful person would place on the table knowing its condition.

The color of the meat is no guide to its quality. It may look most inviting, yet the attractive red color be produced by the careful addition of saltpetre or dye stuffs. It may appear perfectly good and wholesome, and yet contain as high as 14 per cent. of starch. In short, the tinned meat manufacturers have almost endless opportunities of stealing a march on the unsuspecting public. Immature veal has certainly been known to masquerade as "chicken." "Prime beef" may never have worn horns. The mixture so highly colored and flavored which you take to the picnic may be composed of meat which you would not hesitate to throw it in the garbage can if you saw it before it is "prepared." Possibly no industry offers so many opportunities of adulteration and frauds as the tinned and preserved meat industry.

This makes it all the more necessary that only such meat be purchased as is prepared under the strictest supervision and care by packers who are perfectly honest. Fortunately in Peterboro the greatest precautions are observed and enforced by the inspectors of the Medical Officer of Health, and the public are thus protected from danger in this respect, but the discriminating public should demand only the best when it buys canned meats.

CHOCOLATE CAKE.

One cup of sugar, one teaspoon of baking powder beaten lightly, one-eighth teaspoon of salt, one cup of flour, one teaspoon of vanilla.

Beat the eggs and add sugar. Combine the dry ingredients, add to the egg and sugar mixture. Add vanilla. Bake in two layers in a moderate oven.

Breakfast

Graham Muffins.—Mix two cups of graham flour with two teaspoons of baking powder, a tablespoon of molasses, the same of butter, one and half a teaspoon of salt. Bake 15 minutes.

Luncheon

Clam Fritters.—Chop a cup of clams rather course. Mix with a cup of milk, a teaspoon of soda, and flour enough to make a batter. Drop from spoon in deep boiling fat and fry brown. Drain on brown paper.

Iced Cocoa.—Boil together three cups of milk, a cup of water, two tablespoons of sugar, one and a half tablespoons of cocoa, and a pinch of salt, two minutes. When cool add five drops of vanilla, when ready to serve add cracked ice.

Dinner

Horsesadish Sauce. — Mix two tablespoons of horseradish, freshly grated, the juice of a sweet orange, and three tablespoons of any good salad dressing.

Creamed Asparagus.—Cut in pieces two inches in length, cover with water, and boil tender. Drain, cover with milk, add a generous piece of butter, and salt and pepper. When boiling add enough dissolved flour to thicken, and boil one minute longer.

Mocha Souffle.—Heat a cup and a half of very strong coffee, a cup of milk, half a cup of sugar, and a teaspoon of powdered gelatine. When hot add the yolks of three eggs and boil until thick, then add the stifly beaten whites, a teaspoon of vanilla and turn into a wetted mould to chill.

TO OVERCOME PAINT SMELLS

After a room has been painted an excellent way to remove the smell of the paint is to place a pail of water to which has been added a few slices of a raw onion in the room and leave it there overnight. Keep the doors and windows closed and the smell will be entirely gone by morning.

BAKING YOUR OWN BREAD

A housekeeper who has been induced by the increase in price to bake her own bread sends the following for the guidance of those who may be disposed to set up a bakery in their kitchen:—

Set the sponge at night in the usual way: about a pint of water I use, and I make the sponge the least bit stiff, I find the bread is lighter. The next morning I put a quart each of skimmed milk or separated milk, buttermilk and water in a pan on the stove and let it cook (not boil), until it forms curd on top. I use the whey for the bread, straining it through cheesecloth. Then I proceed in the usual way, putting flour, whey and yeast in my bread-pan, adding salt and a quarter teaspoonful of soda. I stir it well and add more flour gradually, then when ready to knead I put it on the table and "go to it," kneading it until it is like satin. My bread rises very quickly, and when I punch it down for the second rising, it snaps and is lovely and spongy.

Another Method

Another amateur baker says that there are so many successful methods of making bread that one hesitates to advise another who has a way of making a good loaf. Perhaps we all think the way we go about it is the best, if we get good results. I do not see much benefit in changing about very much, and yet a study of other people's methods will do no harm, but sometimes give a few hints as to how to improve what is already a good thing.

In making bread it has been proved over and over again, that the fast working dough of a few hours gives better results then the slower rising. To get bread from the dough stage that will rise in a shorter time, it has to have a start from the dry yeast cake, as that is the stand-by of most country dwellers, so I will treat the subject from that point.

If one lives in the country and wants to combine some outdoor work with his baking day, I can recommend the following plan: Overnight, take four good-sized potatoes boil in jackets, mash and strain, make up with one pint of water, add two tablespoons of brown or yellow sugar and one yeast cake previously soaked in warm water and little brown sugar. Stir all together with two tablespoons of flour. Set away until morning, then add another pint of water and one ounce of salt, or two level tablespoonfuls. Mix into dough and let rise. It generally rises in about three hours. Knock down and knead let rise one more hour, then make up into loaves, and set into tins to rise and bake. This method makes it possible to mix in the morning and get the baking done just as soon as if one waited for the chilled dough from overnight to rise to the top of the pan. It is often dark and a trifle sour by that time.

If one has no potatoes, take a cup of haricot beans, soak them overnight, boil and mash them and use them in place of potatoes to make the ferment. Set it away in the same manner as in potato yeast, and you will be surprised to find what a nice loaf the little bean helps to make.

I have never been able to understand why some of the so-called graham flour will not give good results, unless it is because the miller has taken out all that would make good bread. The only way I have found to overcome the trouble was to add half white flour to half graham flour and mix from that. Otherwise, it sometime will not rise or bake.

CODFISH DINNER.

Strip salt codfish into convenient sized pieces and soak in cold water for an hour. Drain, cover again with cold water and bring to a boil. Drain again and repeat. Simmer in the third water till the fish is tender. Do not boil actively as that hardens it. Place on a platter, dress with melted butter, surround with pork scraps, boiled potatoes, beets and parsnips. Serve hot.

ABOUT OUR TEA.

We need not be afraid that our supply of tea will fail us, as long as the German submarines do not invade the waters of the Pacific. Of course, most of our tea has come to us hitherto by way of Great Britain, and now it cannot be expected from there for the time being, as ship space is needed for other goods. But if we cannot get our tea by way of London, we can get it by the Pacific route, from the original source of supply, China and India.

Tea imported into Canada direct from the country of growth and production and tea purchased in bond in Great Britain is free of duty charges. Most of our tea, therefore, has been a free importation. It will continue to be free if brought direct from China and India.

A CHANGE FROM MEAT.

Most families get woefully tired of eating meat every day in the week and welcome a change from this constant diet. Fish or oysters make an excellent substitute for meat and should make a frequent appearance on the menu for the sake of variety as well as economy. For fish is much less expensive than meat and has the advantage of being equally nutritious.

FEAR OF LABOR RIOT HANGS LIKE CLOUD OVER GERMANY

Papers Discuss Internal Danger and Strikes in Austria on May-Day Also Taken for Granted---Baltic Fleet is Ready for Action ---No More Russian Desertions.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, April 28. — Announcement was made before the Reichstag main committee in Berlin yesterday that Germany will adopt the sharpest reprisals if German prisoners are embarked on hospital ships of the Allies and exposed to the dangers of torpedoes.

A despatch from Switzerland says the German frontier has been strictly closed to travellers and the postal service. No newspapers arrived since Wednesday. This is the usual prelude to an important military move.

A despatch from Copenhagen says the Prussian military authorities will hereafter punish desertion from frontier districts with sentences of from five years' imprisonment to death, the same as for desertion from the trenches. The same despatch says the prospect of grave labor troubles throughout Germany overshadow everything else in the German press. Strikes in Austria on May Day are also taken for granted.

Despatches from Petrograd represented Minister of Justice Kerensky as saying after a visit to Reval that he is satisfied with the condition of the Baltic fleet and its capacity for defence. He also stated that before the revolution there were more than one million cases of desertion from the Russian army, and, though desertion continued after the revolution, it had now ceased, and a large number of the deserters are asking permission to return to the ranks and help defend their country.

BRIDGES ACROSS RIVER WILL COST CITY $280,000

Agreement With Quaker Oats Company Approved by Council---Hunter Street Bridge to be Completed by December 31, 1919.

The agreement between the Quaker Oats Co., the Peterborough Hydraulic Power Co, and the City was read to the City Council last night by Solicitor Gordon and was agreed to and the necessary copies will be sent to the firm in Chicago for signature.

The agreement provided for the construction by the city of an overhead bridge across the river at Hunter street and the giving of the Quaker Oats Co. a right-of-way for their tracks underneath the bridge. It also provides for the building of a bridge across the river from London to Haslitt street, the Quaker Oats Co. giving the city the necessary land on both sides of the river in order to get an approach to the bridge. For this concession the city will close the dead ends of Murray and London streets and deed them along with Mill street to the company.

The overhead bridge must be completed by December 31st, 1919, and the London street bridge as soon after as it is possible. The city propose to use the present Hunter street bridge as a span of the bridge at London street.

City Engineer Parsons gave the cost of the proposed bridge as follows:

Estimated cost of Hunter street overhead bridge	$245,000
Estimated cost of London street bridge	18,000
Approaches	2,000
Damages	11,000
Costs	4,000
Total	$280,000

These figures are for the actual construction only and do not [illegible] for loss in the sale of debentures, if any should occur.

NO DOGS ALLOWED AT LARGE

The City Council took drastic action last night in order to protect he citizens from the possibility of an epidemic of rabies among the dogs of the city. A bylaw was passed making it an offence for the owner of any dog to allow it to be on the streets or highways of the city at any time or under any conditions. The dogs, if kept, must be locked up in an enclosure sufficiently high and strong so that there will be no chance of their getting at large.

It was the intention at first that this bylaw would be in effect for ninety days only, but the Government authorities thought that it would be wise to have ample protection until all possible danger has passed, and then the Council may rescind the bylaw.

Any dogs, whether tagged or not, will be taken in charge by the police and detained for forty-eight hours, after which time they will be destroyed. There are a lot of homeless dogs running at large, and these will have the immediate attention of the officers of the law.

Chairman Saunders of the Property Committee was given power to have a dog pound built at the incinerator, and also to buy the necessary dog catcher equipment.

The bylaw went into effect at once, so owners of pets had better get busy and provide the necessary enclosure, as the penalty for failure to do so is very high.

The reeves of adjoining townships will be notified of the city's action and asked to pass similar bylaws.

General Offensive to be Resumed Against Hun Next Week---French Take 20,770 Prisoners Since 16th of April.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, April 28. — Today it appeared that the whole strength of the French and British attacking armies was being made ready for another bolt to be hurled at the German line next week in a resumption of the concerted offensive. After a lull on the French front early in the week, made necessary by the bringing up to the newly-won positions of the French artillery and the consolidation of gains won in the first week of Gen. Nivelle's general attack plan, the army under the tri-color was apparently in motion again. To the north, Haig's guns roared all along the line, while his Tommies pushed on yard after yard. The greatest pressure was apparently being exerted along the Arras-Douai roadway.

GERMANS' VAIN ATTACKS

PARIS, April 28. Gen. Neville's advancing French troops have taken 20,780 prisoners and 175 guns, including many of the heaviest calibres, 412 machine guns and 119 trench mortars, today's official statement declared. Of today's fighting the war office reported French raids in several sections and numerous German counter-attacks all along the fighting front.

"We raided German trenches in the region of Hill 304," the statement says. "West of the Meuse during the night we brought back prisoners.

"German troops attacked east of Auberive, but were repulsed.

GUATEMALA, TOO, NOW BREAKS WITH GERMANS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, April 28. Guatemala has broken off diplomatic relations with Germany and handed the German minister his passports and cancelled the papers of all German consuls there.

"Artillery was very active between St. Quentin and the Oise and in the Champagne."

Today was the second day of the German effort to relieve the pressure on the French troops encircling St. Quentin by tremendous artillery fire and vain attacks.

FIGHTING IN DARKNESS

PARIS, April 28. — "Between St. Quentin and the Oise there was heavy artillery fighting during the night. Skirmishes occurred among grenadiers in advanced positions to the south of St. Quentin. Near Laffaux the enemy attempted without success a surprise attack against one of our advanced positions. In the Champagne artillery fighting was severe.

"After a violent bombardment the Germans attacked one of our trenches east of Auberive, but were thrown back by the fire of our artillery and machine guns.

"On the left bank of the Meuse one of our detachments penetrated the German lines in the sector of Hill 304 and brought back prisoners."

FIGHTING IS FIERCE.

LONDON, April 28. — The Huns are now fighting for their lives against the irresistible pressure of the contemptible little British army, said one British general today, according to Reuter's correspondent at the front. At the moment of writing, the situation was somewhat nebulous, as must inevitably be the case in the early stages of such heavy fighting. The conflict is progressing fiercely. By means of prisoners already taken several fresh German divisions have been identified.

SERGT. ECOBICHON HAS BEEN KILLED IN ACTION

Mother Lives at 703 Aylmer Street and and Father is With Troops in England---Canadian List Now Totals 10,857.

The casualty list issued today was a very long one. Quite a number of Peterboro men appear in the list, but most of their names have been in the local papers before, through the kindness of relatives sending word in to the office as soon as they were notified by the Record Office at Ottawa.

Sergt. Sid. Ecobichon

Signaller Sergt. Sidney John Ecobichon, of the 93rd, has been killed in action according to a cable received from his father, Pte. J. F. Ecobichon, at Seaforth, England. His mother lives at 703 Aylmer St. Sergt. Ecobichon was attached to the 15th Batt. C.E.F. at the time of his death.

WOUNDED

In the report issued last night and yesterday afternoon the following local names appear in the wounded list:

B. A. CARTER
PTE. J. LOUDEN
PTE. C. BENNET.
CORP. A. LUMLEY.
PTE. N. H. ROGERS.

TOTAL NUMBER NOW 10,857.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

A despatch from Ottawa says that there are 350 names in the noon casualty list today, making a grand total since April 9th of 10,857. The latest list is made up of 143 killed in action, 18 died of wounds, ten missing and 181 wounded or ill. The most of these casualties occurred on dates during the first ten days of the fighting around Vimy Ridge

SURGING CHANGES MARK STRUGGLE NOW IN PROGRESS

British Make Gains But Furious Counter Attacks Develope and Fiercest Fighting Fancy Can Picture is Result--Germans Bring up Fresh Divisions.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, April 28. — Another attack was launched by the British this morning. The blow was struck on the front between the Scarpe River and Lens, on the ground over which some of the most desperate fighting has occurred since the British inaugurated their offensive Easter Monday. The struggle now in progress is very bitter. The Germans, in anticipation of another British offensive, had brought up reinforcements. Fresh German divisions have been identified by the British.

In today's fighting the British faced a well-organized trench system protected by wire entanglements and held by strong German forces. Artillery preparation which had been in progress for several days, did much damage to the defence works, but there remained many troublesome strong points between Roeux, just north of the Scarpe, and Gavrelle. North of Gavrelle satisfactory progress was made so far as could be judged, and early in the day prisoners were being brought in. South of this place the British got on towards Green Land Hill, taking the trench north of Monchy.

It is reported the British have occupied the town of Arleux and half of Oppy, but furious German counter-attacks are developing, and the situation is one of surging changes. The fiercest imaginative fighting is under way for the wood west of Roeux. The weather is favorable. Airmen are very active.

LAST CHANCE TONIGHT TO VISIT THE MOTOR SHOW

Exhibits, Patrons and Members of Red Cross Pleased With Result of Enterprise---Prize Winners Last Night.

Peterboro's first motor show, under the auspices of the Red Cross Society has been a great success, and all the gentlemen who started the idea are more than delighted with the patronage that has been accorded it by the citizeens geenerally.

The attendance last night was fifty per cent better than the opening day, and the receipts from the booths and tearooms were correspondingly larger. The auto dealers are much pleased with the opportunity that the show has given them to get in touch with the prospective customers in the surrounding district. The number of people from nearby towns and villages was noticeable. The demonstrators were kept busy answering questions from intending auto owners.

Visitors who have attended the different motor shows say that our exhibition is larger than any other in Canada except Montreal. It is reported that ten sales have been made to Peterboro people.

Tonight's Programme

This will be your last chance to visit Peterboro's first motor show. The Salvation Army Band will be in attendance, and the committee have arranged a special program for the entertainment of the visitors.

The famous musical trio will be on hand. Mr. Joe Rapple, of John Miller and Son, Toronto, has a new song; Fred. St. Onge of bicycle fame, has a few new ones, and J. J. Griffiths is as smooth as Brook's eels.

Don't fail to hear Joe Rapple sing his favorite song, "I never heard of anyone dying from stealing a kiss."

There will be selections on the Victrola as well as a few numbers that are being arranged for.

ST. JAMES CHURCH OPENING

Everything is in readiness for the opening of St. James' Methodist Church tomorrow. The dedication services will be conducted by Rev. S. D. Chown, D.D., LL.D., General Superintendent of the Methodist Church.

Many prominent members of the Conference are expected to be present, in addition to a great many visitors from a distance.

The City Council will meet at the City Hall at 10:30 in the morning and go in a body to attend the services.

The afternoon meeting will be in charge of the Rev. M. E. Sexsmith, B.A., LL.B., President of the Bay of Quinte Conference, who will deliver an address on "Building the Foundation." A large attendance of the parents and friends of the teachers and scholars of the Sunday school is expected at this mass meeting.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, APRIL 28, 1917

THE SOLDIERS' CANTEENS.

CAPT. J. H. BURNHAM, M.P., spent over six months in the training camps in England, and if any man is in a position to speak with authority on the conditions there, he certainly is. He has seen things at first hand, whereas some of his colleagues in Parliament so ready with their criticisms have no information except such as is based on hearsay.

In his place in the House the other day Capt. Burnham, who is always ready to champion the cause of the man in uniform, paid a tribute to the sobriety of the men he had seen in the camps in England and France. This was in reply to the strictures of ex-Postmaster-General Lemieux, who charged that excessive drinking was carried on in the army canteens.

Dr. Michael Clark, Liberal member for Red Deer, once more proved himself to be a man bigger than party. "I know something about the amount of drinking that is going on over there," he said, "and something about the amount of fighting, and these soldiers are the last men I would want to put in leading strings, the men who are going to lead the world to freedom and to victory."

There are in the House members who have sons at the front, and some who, like Capt. Burnham, have been overseas. All of these refuted the charges of drunkenness among the Canadian troops.

Mr. Lemieux and those members who backed up his statement, have grossly slandered the Canadian soldiers in Europe. The very fact that these men have enlisted in such a cause is their best certificate of character. It was the men of the highest reputation, the flower of Canadian manhood, who answered the call. While they were in civil life they were surrounded on all sides by the very temptations of which Mr. Lemieux now complains. Open bars and liquor stores were on all sides of them, and no one can truthfully say that they suffered in this regard any more than those who have never heard the call of Empire.

No parents in Canada need fear for the moral environments of their sons who are overseas. The chances are that they find themselves surrounded with better companions in the training camps and in the trenches than they would if they were still at home among the slackers.

The management of the Canadian troops, once they arrive in England is in the hands of the Imperial authorities, and the interference of the Canadian Parliament is out of place. The stand taken by the former member of the Laurier Government had only one result—it precipitated one of the most acrimonious debates that has been heard in Parliament for many a day.

A QUARANTINE ON DOGS.

SOME OF THE DOG OWNERS in the city may regard as a hardship the action taken by Council last night in decreeing that all dogs in the city shall be kept locked up and that all found at large shall be captured and placed in a pond to be provided for the purpose, there to be destroyed if not reclaimed within forty-eight hours.

There is danger of an outbreak of hydrophobia not only in Peterborough, but in various parts of the Province, and prevention is better than cure. Municipal legislators are taking action everywhere at the request of the provincial authorities. The action taken by Council last night was decided upon after consultation with the Health Department officials at Toronto. All the dogs in Peterborough, valuable and useful as some of them undoubtedly are, are not worth one human life that may be lost by hydrophobia.

THE APPEAL FOR PRODUCTION.

LLOYD GEORGE has issued an appeal for more food to avert world hunger if not a famine, and Parliament and legislatures echo the cry in the Dominion of Canada. From all sources of authority comes the warning that hunger stares the nation in the face.

This condition is easily accounted for. In time of peace, England, France and Italy depended for food, not on America alone, but on Russia, Roumania and Bulgaria. Since the war broke out, these sources of supply have been closed. The only hope of the Entente Nations lies in the American continent. Unless the producers on this side of the Atlantic rise to the emergency the three European nations mentioned will go hungry.

There are forty million men under arms today, and there are half as many more men and women, employed, not in the usual industries of peace, but in producing munitions and other articles required in the war. An army of sixty millions of non-producers is a serious consideration, and the burden of providing them with food rests upon the land and those charged with the duty of working it.

There is only one way in which Germany can hope to win this war, and that is by the starvation of the powers with which she is engaged in conflict. Every man who raises a bushel of wheat or other foodstuffs is helping to win the war. And beyond all doubt such help is urgent as it has never been before.

The visible supply of wheat is one hundred and fifty million bushels below the amount required to feed the world until August next. The acreage put under crop this year must be increased or a famine is inevitable, and national disaster will certainly follow. Victory is to be won in the wheatfields of America as well as on the battlefields of France. The line of defence against the Germans is being held by the farmers and producers as well as by the soldiers, although the work of the latter is vastly the more strenuous.

The whole national structure now rests on the farms. The patriotic duty of the hour is to produce more food, and in this work every man, woman and child able to lend a hand must do their share.

MILITARY TRAINING.

THE Y. M. C. A. recently gave a public exhibition of the work of the pupils in the physical training class, and the Y. W. C. A. has just supplied a similar entertainment by the members of the various classes trained there. All those who witnessed these performances are certainly convinced of the value of the work done by the directors of those institutions.

The members of the rising generation in Peterborough are being carefully and intelligently developed physically. If any are denied the benefits of this training it is probably the fault of the parents, who fail to take advantage of the opportunities offered their children. Military training in the schools may be desirable, but in the meantime the boys and girls are not being entirely neglected in this particular. Any boy trained in the Y. M. C. A. is ready for military duty with comparatively little extra training. The girls drilled at the Y. W. C. A. are better fitted for all the duties of life than those whose physical development is left to chance.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

"I READ THE BIBLE often and with pleasure," remarks the Kaiser. But, unfortunately, to little purpose.

• • • •

LLOYD GEORGE still talks—and, what is vastly more to the purpose, act—like a broadminded and farseeing statesman.

• • • •

WHATEVER there may be—in the canteen in England, there is plenty of "cant" in the discussion of it in Parliament.

• • • •

IF BYE-ELECTIONS in war-time are not desirable for the province, then a general Federal election is infinitely more so under the same conditions.

• • • •

THE LIBERALS in Parliament have yet to learn that in public as in private business a good rule is to concern ourselves with our own particular affairs.

• • • •

NO CRISIS ever arose in the history of a Christian nation but Providence furnished a man to cope with it. Lloyd George and the present war, for instance.

• • • •

FORTUNATELY for the country, Mr. George P. Graham was deprived of either opportunity or temptation to hand over public utilities to private interests.

• • • •

AN AMERICAN GUNNER on the Mongolia hit a submarine at a distance of one thousand yards. With such marksmen on our side, who can be against us?

• • • •

Mr. McCOIG, M.P., wants the duty on beans removed. He may know beans, but he evidently is not on terms of intimacy with the farmers who grow them.

• • • •

PROBABLY even ex-Postmaster-General Lemieux will admit that the Canadian Overseas Forces are on a duty rather more strenuous than a Sunday school picnic.

• • • •

A LACK OF EXCITEMENT is probably the only reason the Senate has decided to devote a few days of their precious time to debating the Home Rule question.

• • • •

WHEN WILL Canadian alarmist politicians learn that the big Parliament at London is qualified by experience and natural attainments to look after their own affairs?

• • • •

CONSTRUCTING a merchant ship is as vastly different from building a dreadnought as the making of an ordinary plow is from the manufacture of a traction motor.

• • • •

AS A PRELIMINARY to the big debate certain to ensue on the question of Dominion prohibition, watch the discussion in the House on the canteen problem in England.

• • • •

THE GLOBE believes that Finance Minister White should impose a tax on incomes. How would the man who pays such a tax to his province like it if the Federal authorities also took a slice of his salary?

• • • •

THE CHICAGO NEWS suggests that all the ukuleles be sent to the front, there to be played to scare and rout the Germans. What has become of that provision in the American constitution which forbids the infliction of cruel and unusual punishment even upon an enemy?

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

Couldn't If He Tried.

(Buffalo Express.)

Now that Kipling has said something nice about America, it wouldn't be surprising if George Bernard Shaw should say something nice about England.

Von Bissing.

(New York World.)

To preserve the memory of Gen. Von Bissing, German Governor General of Belgium, no monument of stone or bronze will ever be needed. For all time he will stand in history as the goaler and hangman of Belgium, one of the most execrated figures of the war.

Willing to Dicker.

(Toronto Star.)

Germany stole half the iron mines of France in 1870, and returned for the other half in 1914. Having her books on what she wants, Germany hates to let go. But the game is up, and she would now like to make a dicker by which she would relinquish what she stole in 1914 on condition that she be allowed to keep what she stole in 1870.

Training Pays.

(Seattle Post-Intelligencer.)

The return of the young men of the National Guard from the border, bronzed, robust, the pictures of vigorous health and with notably improved physiques, should be an object lesson to the cavillers who decry the value of military training in its bearing upon the improved health and physiques of those who are subjected to it. But this is but one of the answers to these objections.

Canada as an Example.

(New York Tribune.)

Our entrance into the war should make a new bond between Canadians and ourselves. One fraction of the western world has answered the call of imperiled liberty; a continent on which the Anglo-Saxon settlers sought to build a new structure dedicated to humanity, justice, freedom, has sent back its first regiments to assist in preserving in Europe the ideals it has served in America. Let us trust that the time will not be long before our own fraction of America carries our flag to trench lines behind which, at bay, barbarism is making its final stand and tyranny still keeps the field. Canada has spoken—it remains for the United States to do its part in a common cause.

BOURASSA: INTENSE ORATOR AND THINKER

Unpopular Opponent of Imperialism is Very Energetic and Wordy and Well-read

An Ontario writer has the following appreciation: Henri Bourassa lives and thinks and acts with great intensity. He expresses himself with unconfined generosity. He has so much more to express than most of those he meets that he scarcely gives them a chance to get half a dozen words in edgeways. A friend tells of a dinner with a baker's dozen present at which Bourassa talked and talked and talked. An Ontario professor managed to say nine different times: "But, Mr. Bourassa ...," and that was all he could contribute to a marvellous evening.
